This confusion is all due to the topsy-turvy tendencies of the 180th meridian, that mystic line on the earth's surface that is ever a point of deepest interest to the traveler—that point where it is found necessary to pick up or drop a day as the case may be, in order to make the ship's calendar conform to those of the continents between which she is sailing.

The Cane Crop.

The weather throughout the sugar districts has continued fine, engendering considerable confidence in the outlook for the coming crop. Cane planting is everywhere reported finished, seed cane in good condition and the fields in very fine tilth.

The news comes from Egypt that quite a revolution in the cane sugar industry is occurring there. The famous Daira Sanieh, practically a branch of the government there, which possessed nine sugar factories, and has been a conspicuous feature in the Egyptian sugar industry for several decades, will now cease to operate for account of the state and will pass into the hands of a private corporation. The total sugar crop of Egypt is about 100,000 tons, the bulk of which has been manufactured in these nine sugar factories. A new syndicate has been made up to take over the nine sugar factories and their dependencies, some 300 miles of railway, with the necessary rolling stock, some 55 locomotives and 2,100 cars. The purchase price is placed at nearly five millions of dollars, about $850,000 of which is to be paid in cash and the rest in four per cent bonds.

The Montgomery is at Pensacola. Virginia's capitol is to be enlarged.

There is considerable talk of a line of railroad from Sallis, Miss., on the line of the Aberdeen branch of the Illinois Central, near Durant, to Carthage, by way of Thomastown, Leake county, where great deposits of coal and other minerals have recently been discovered. This line would be nearly forty miles long and through Leake county, where there is no railroad.

The citizens of Charleston, Tallahatchie county, Miss., have gone to work in earnest and announce that they have already raised $10,000 of the $15,000 demanded of them by the parties who propose to construct thirty miles of railroad to connect their town with Oakland.

The treasury of the state of Mississippi paid out more than $800,000 Saturday on account of the distribution of the school fund, or rather two-thirds of it, which is $833,336.33 for January.

A terrific combat between a bull and a horse occurred on the farm of Edward Hoopes, near Westchester, Pa., and the former proved the victor. It was a battle to the death, and waged furiously for a time. Finally the bull caught the breast of the horse with its horns and administered a terrible rip, resulting in the death of the latter. The combat occurred in the barn yard, and those who witnessed it say that the sight was a terrifying one.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

MARCH 5TH.

The naval bill again occupied practically all the time of the senate, but while the amendment concerning a navy training station on the great lakes was technically the pending question, it was scarcely mentioned. The discussion was entirely on political lines. Consideration of the naval bill was not completed when the senate adjourned.

Mr. Cullom presented the report of the conference committee on the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill and was agreed to.

The house today passed the Indian appropriation bill after some controversy relative to provisions affecting tribes in the Indian Territory. An unsuccessful effort was made by Mr. Stephens, of Texas, to eliminate the provision for continuing the Dawes commission another year.

MARCH 7TH.

The senate passed the naval appropriation bill, which has been before it for the past four or five days, and then took up the army bill. The principal question in connection with the naval bill related to the price and method of supplying armor plate for battleships, and it grew out of an amendment suggested by Mr. Patterson, providing for a government armor plant. He ultimately withdrew the amendment, but offered several others, all of which were laid on the table.

The reading of the army appropriation bill had not been concluded when the senate adjourned.

Postal affairs engrossed the attention of the house practically to the exclusion of all else. The subject was introduced by Mr. Overstreet, chairman of the committee on postoffices and post roads, who submitted the report of that committee on the Hay resolution calling for certain information regarding the use of "influence" by members of the house to secure increases in salary for postmasters.

The postoffice appropriation bill was then taken up, and Mr. Moon, of Tennessee, the ranking minority member of the postoffice committee, arraigned the present system employed in the postoffice department, and made an appeal for a general investigation of the affairs of the department.

Mr. Pinkney, of Texas, was appointed a member of the committee on expenditures in the interior department in place of Mr. Candler, of Mississippi, who resigned from that committee.

LINOTYPE MACHINES

Under Consideration for the Government Printing Office.

The house committee on appropriations received application from the Mergenthaler Linotype Company to equip the government printing office with typesetting machines. The specific proposition was for the committee to place in the sundry civil appropriation bill now being prepared an item of $154,000, which will supply forty machines, the price of each machine being $3,600.

The statement was made to the committee that the work of the composing room could be done from 30 to 40 per cent cheaper by the use of machines.

A New Gun.

On formally introducing the army estimates for the coming year in the house of commons War Secretary Forester announced that a new field and horse artillery gun had been adopted. The secretary added that it would be unrivaled in Europe and said its manufacture would commence in April.

Rear Admiral P. M. Rixey, surgeon general of the navy, is going to Panama to make an inspection of the sanitary conditions on the isthmus. It is felt to be expedient that the surgeon general of the navy shall have an intimate knowledge of the situation there, as the marines are to be left there for some time to guard the isthmus.

It is stated that the committee of prominent citizens of Natchez, who recently visited Washington for the purpose of appearing before the house committee on rivers and harbors and urging some speedy and early action for the protection of the harbor at their town, returned home gratified and encouraged to believe that they are going to get what they went after.

The white house improvements have been the subject for much sarcastic criticism from public men and private citizens since it was determined to remodel the structure.

Dr. P. H. Brothers was found dead in his field at Lula, Friday afternoon. He had come to his home from a visit to a patient, rested for a while and informed his wife that he would go out into the field and cut a few sprouts for physical exercise. He went out and remained away longer than the appointed time for his return, and his wife sent a servant to look for him. He was found in the field dead.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR MARCH 13.

Subject: Death of John the Baptist. Matt. xiv., 1-12—Golden Text, Rev. ii., 10—Memory Verses, 9-11—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. Herod's terrified conscience (vs. 1, 2). 1. "At that time." During the missionary journey of the twelve. "Herod." This was Herod Antipas, son of Herod the Great. He was the ruler of Galilee and Perea. Thirty years before he murdered the innocents at Bethlehem. Of all the contemptible wretches of Scripture—not excluding Judas, who in some ways a great problem—Herod Antipas is the greatest—a little, petty, disgraceful Nero, a King John of England, a bundle of petty vices. "The tetrarch." Literally, the ruler of a fourth part or district into which a province was divided, afterward the name was extended to denote generally a petty king, the ruler of a provincial district. "Heard of the fame." Antipas had one of his capitals at Tiberias, on the Sea of Galilee. He had, no doubt, heard of Jesus before, but the preaching of the twelve apostles had stirred the whole country, and His "fame" was increasing, so that it attracted anew the attention of the king. 2. "Is risen from the dead." Herod had imprisoned John the last of March, A. D. 29. Herod's conscience accused him. "And therefore." In consequence of having risen from the dead. He is thought to be possessed of miracle-working powers.

II. John's faithfulness (vs. 3-5). 3. "In prison." The place of John's imprisonment and death was Machærus, in Perea, on the eastern side of the Dead Sea, near the southern frontier of the tetrarchy. Here Antipas had a palace and a prison under one roof, as was common in the East. "For Herodias' Sake." This woman was a granddaughter of Herod the Great. She first married Herod Philip, her uncle, who was the father of Salome. Herod had put away his legal wife, the daughter of Aretas, king of Arabia Petrea, and had taken Herodias, though Philip, Herodias' husband, was still living.

4. "John said unto him." It seems that John faced the king himself with this rebuke. How bold and courageous! It is well when ministers dare rebuke the sins of politicians and those in authority. "Not lawful." Because 1. He had put away his legal wife. 2. He had induced Herodias to forsake her husband. 3. Herodias was the niece and sister-in-law of Herod and the Mosaic law (Lev. 18: 12-14) had been violated. St. Luke adds (3:19) that Herod was also reproved "for all the evil which he had done." "To have her." To marry her. The force of the original bears out this interpretation.

5. "When he would." Although he was willing. From Mark we learn that Herodias was eager to kill John, while Herod, partly from an interest in his preaching and partly from fear of his prisoner, refused to take away his life. "Feared the multitude." The preaching of John had had a powerful effect on the masses, and Herod was restrained from acts of violence because of public sentiment. Mark also tells us that Herod knew that John was a just and holy man. This makes the king's sin all the more glaring and heinous, and from this we see that holiness and justice command the respect even of sinners. When Herod heard John preach "he did many things and heard him gladly" (Mark 6: 20).

III. Herod's birthday festivities (vs. 6-8). 6. "Birthday was kept." This was done, probably at the Machærus palace with great display. Herod made a great feast for his lords, high captains and the chief persons of Galilee. The nobility of Galilee were obliged to come some distance to attend the festivities. "Daughter—danced." Female dancers in the East are a customary part of great entertainments. On this occasion the dancer was of high birth, being no other than the Princess Salome, daughter of Herodias and Philip. They who glide into the dissolute dance glide over an inclined plane, and the dance is swifter and swifter, wilder and wilder, until, with the speed of lightning, they whirl off the edges of a ruined life into a fiery future. "Pleased Herod." They were probably half intoxicated, reclining at the tables, as their custom was. The infamous saloon system of to-day is only a remnant of the ancient revels that were so vile and corrupting in their effects. And yet the saloon is licensed, and thus permitted and protected by law!

7. "With an oath." It is always wrong to foreswear ourselves by promising to do or to keep secret what has not, as yet, been disclosed to us. "Whatsoever she would ask." Mark adds (6: 23), "Unto the half of my kingdom." Herod was ready to surrender half his kingdom for the pleasure of witnessing the performance of a lust-creating pantomime.

8. "Instructed." The vile Herodias saw that the hour had come for her to accomplish the fiendish deed she had so long meditated upon. "Mother." What a mother! Leading her own daughter into the vilest of crimes. "Give me here." She hastens (Mark 6: 25) to have the deed perpetrated while the revel is on, probably in the night. "In a charger." On a large platter.

IV. A foul deed committed (vs. 9-12). 9. "Sorry." His conscience was not entirely dead, and he was worried and troubled. "For the oath's sake." He cared more for his oath than his conscience, or John, or his God. He could murder, but he must not break a wicked oath that he never should have taken. There are many to-day who, for the sake of an oath which has no legal or moral binding upon them, will violate their consciences and imperil their soul's interests. "Which sat with him." He was afraid of offending the great men of his kingdom. A slave to public opinion. "To be given." Note the steps that led Herod to this: 1. Rejecting the truth. 2. Continuing to indulge in his sins. 3. A drunken feast; liquor is responsible for untold crime and misery. 4. An immoral dance; dancing can but result in sin. 5. A wicked oath, which never should have been taken, but, once taken, should have been broken immediately. 6. His fear of the people.

10. "Beheaded." But his prisoner was ready. John is not the only one who will be beheaded if the truth is upheld. Let any man to-day take his position against the evils in society, and, socially, his head will roll into the basket; if he takes his position against evils in the church, not infrequently will his head come off ecclesiastically; if he opposes the corruption in politics, he will be beheaded politically. II. "She brought it." What a present.

12. "His disciples." John's disciples. "Took up the body." It had been thrown out, and they buried it as the last kindness they could show to one they loved. Sorrow then brought them to Jesus. Antipas and Herodias were afterward banished by the Roman Emperor to Lyons, in France, where they passed the remainder of their lives in disgrace.

THE BANNER.

Published Weekly at Clanton, Chilton County, Ala.

JUDGE RICHARDSON has ordered that the docket of the criminal week of court shall be taken up on Tuesday, April 12, instead of Monday, that being the day of the primary election. The Judge does not wish to deprive any citizen of the privilege of voting.

SOME uncertainty appears to exist in the county as to the number of County Commissioners to be nominated and elected this year. We are of the opinion that the general law does not repeal the special act passed by the legislature of 1898, and that Commissioners from the Third and Fourth Districts only have to be elected this year.

CANDIDATES will do well to remember that under the primary law and the rules of the State and County Executive Committees, they must file with the Chairman or Secretary of the County Committee, at least fifteen days before the primary, their declaration of candidacy, and deposit the fee assersed against them. On application to the Chairman or Secretary a printed form of the certificate, or declaration of candidacy, will be sent them.

THE Marshall Banner, in mentioning good men as delegates at large to the National Democratic Convention from Alabama, suggests Tipton Mullins of Chilton as one of them, and we heartily second the motion. We have no knowledge that Mr. Mullins is in any sense a candidate for that position, but his services to the party entitle him to some recognition, and it will please his many friends to heartily support him if he is willing to accept the office.

W. J. RUDDICK.

Writing to a friend in Clanton, who had requested him to become a candidate, Rev. W. J. Ruddick said he did not wish to run for any county office, but that he thought he could serve the people as Commissioner from the third disdrict. It gives us much satisfaction to say that we are of the same opinion, and that Mr. Ruddick will prove a valuable acquisition to the Board of County Commissioners if nominated and elected. He is a man well informed on general subjects, thoroughly conversant with the needs of the county, and eminently qualified to fill the office of Commissioner. He has innumerable friends all over the county, and is known and loved by everyone.

J. O. PATTILLO.

The Board of County Commissioners needs to be composed of good men—not only good men as regards their moral and religious character, but men of good business sense and education. Upon them devolves the well being of the county. Mr. J. C. Pattillo, of Verbena, whose announcement for Commissioner from the Fourth District will be found elsewhere in this issue, is a successful man of business, with a practical knowledge of what is best for the county, and sound business sense to see that the money of the people is not thrown away. If nominated and elected he will make an excellent Commissioner.

W. S. COX.

This gentleman, well known and highly thought of in Beat 4, where he has been a resident for many years, is announced as a candidate for County Commissioner from the Fourth District. Mr. Cox is a christian gentleman, a good farmer, a practical man, who has devoted a large portion of his life to the betterment of humanity, and who will, if nominated and elected, bring strict honesty and integrity to bear in conducting the affairs of the County. Those who know him best are aware that he would make an admirable Commissioner.

JOHN IN THE BACKWOODS HAS ANOTHER TALK WITH THE OLD 'OMAN

Well, old 'oman, I have been thinking about what you said to me a few weeks ago about coming back to the Democratic party, and some of the fellows that I've been with for several years are opposed to me going back, and I said to one I must go, and the first reason I gave him was that the old 'oman was a Democrat and never had been anything else, and that me and her just could not stay apart, and then I said to him that most all the white women in Alabama were in the Democratic party, and that I just could not stay in a party that had no women in it, and I would not give a fig for a home without a woman in it, and that I wouldn't give a rotten apple for a party that had no women in it, and in fact I am afraid of anything that the good women don't go into. And while I was talking with this old friend and political associate, I axed him if the Populists had any candidate for the Supreme bench and he said no, and I said have you any candidate for Railroad Commissioner, and he said no, and he said we have no candidates for State offices and will not have, and I axed him what sort of a party was that had neither head nor tail, and he said that I was mistaken that the Populist party did have a tail, and I said where is it? And he said I don't know, and I said if you don't know why do you say it has a tail, and he said I heard it. Oh! you heard it. Yes. Well, what did you hear? Well, now, I hardly know how to tell you, but it was something on this wise: Some farmer who makes a living by farming is going around here in March to organize the Alliance, and I wondered why he did not wait until laying by time, because any man knows that a farmer that depends on his field for a living had better plough in March, and I could not understand why this organizing of alliances was so urgent that it must be done in March, and then I happened to think that may be this organizer might advise the people to stay out of the Democratic primary, notwithstanding he is to have no politics in it, and that is the tail, and then I just could not see how a farmer who all men know must look after his crop in the spring if he succeeds can afford to leave his home and his business and do this thing. And I happened to think that may be some one who wanted to be nominated for a county office might have gotten up this scheme and have said to the farmers, you go, make appointments to organize alliances, and I will help you to get some one to work in your place in the field, and then you can advise the people to stay out of the Democratic primary and they won't see the point that I want them to stay out to vote for me, the people won't know I am in it, but I will be in it all the same; and that's the tail, and if it was not for spoiling the paper that I am writing on, I'd just tell you whose tail it is, but I refrain for the present, for I feel sure that it will show for itself before the thing runs long, and I think that a blind man can see, hear and understand that tail.

And just at this moment the old 'oman pitched in and she said John, I want to ax you one more question, and I said all right, and she said why is it that these men who used to be Populists, can't see that the thing is dead, and that they are deprived of their choice of men and measures while they stay out of the Democratic party? And I said old 'oman, it is on account of this here tail that I have just described. But I believe that we will have enough good men to mash the tail off next November.

FERTILIZERS ON LEGUMINOUS CROPS.

Washington, D.C., March 5, 1904
Editor Banner, Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir:—The Department of Agriculture has for two or three years been making an experiment which they now believe to be a success, and by which the cost of fertilizers on leguminous crops, such as clover, cowpeas, soy beans, vetches, velvet beans etc., can be considerably reduced.

A preparation has been discovered which upon being applied to the seed of the crops above mentioned will greatly increase the nitrogen gathering power of these crops and will result, not only, in an increased yield per acre of the crop planted, but will store a much larger quantity of nitrogen in the soil for the succeeding crop. It is well-known that a good method of fertilizing and reclaiming land in our country now, is by the use of cowpeas. This is on account of its power to gather and store nitrogen in the soil. It is not so well known that leguminous crops such as clover, alfalfa, etc., produce exactly the same result. Now, if the fertilizing power of these crops can by the application of the preparation made by the Department of Agriculture be greatly enhanced, this discovery will serve a doubly useful purpose. Of course, its first and chief value will be with reference to the fertilizer itself, but secondly, its inevitable tendency will be to invite a much larger diversification of crops that will tend to restore the fertility of the soil and at the same time increase the profit of the farm, cannot be doubted. Everywhere progressive farmers feel and preach this doctrine. The main thing that has been in its way, is to find other crops which will pay. The matter to which I refer is now in a comparatively experimental stage, but the best experts of the Department of Agriculture have great faith in it.

I would be glad to have requests from a few representative farmers in each county in my district who will give this subject a fair and intelligent test and report their results and conclusions to me. The number who can be supplied is limited but I will undertake to get the Department to send out full instructions with the preparation to as many as possible. In further explanation of this matter I enclose you a letter received form Hon. B. T. Galloway, chief of the Bureau Plant of Industry.

Yours very truly,
SYDNEY. J. BOWIE.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, March 7, 1904

Another step in the exploitation of the Philippine Islands will soon be taken by this Republican administration. True to the instincts of graft and loot the administration, instead of proceeding itself to the building of railroads, intends to let out the privilege to capital in this country and guarantee to that capital the interest on the investment. In other words, this country is opening places for the investment of capital and guaranteeing to the capital immunity from loss. They propose to authorize the Philippine government to execute a legislative guarantee of 4 per cent per annum on $40,000,000 of bonds for railroad construction in those islands, and the bill will be introduced this week by Chairman Cooper, of the House Committee on Insular affairs. The bill will bar out foreign capital so as to give the capitalists of Wall Street the monopoly of the game. This administration has been persistent in its efforts to get the good people of the country to believe that the Wall Street interests are dead against it, for political reasons and for political effect. Does this move look like it? If Secretary Taft thought that it would hasten the civiliation and education of the islands to construct railroads therein, why does not the government engage in the business itself instead of paying capital to do so? It would be a grand object lesson in the government ownership of railroads and public utilities for the government to undertake this enterprise. Instead of that the administration sells out to Wall Street sharks and guarantees them immunity from loss and a sure return on the capital invested and in return they will get a handsome campaign contribution. This is the way this thing looks to a man who is on the inside of things at the national capital, and I think I have "called the turn." It has never occurred to these exploiters, grafters and looters that this legislation will clearly be unconstitutional. But what in the name of all that stands for graft does the Republican party care about the constitution? When the constitution stands in the way of anything a Republican wants to do, he simply steps on it and mashes it into the mire. Until the voters of the country realize that they have it in their power to stop this sort of thing it will continue ad libitum ad infinitum. When will they see the drift and get busy?

They are having much sport at the Department of State over an inelastic provision of law which requires that department to compile and issue in a seperate volume the statutes enacted at each session of Congress. The special session of last November enacted only one measure, a joint resolution providing for the payment of mileage to the members. This is bound up, however, in a dignified little volume by itself with as much elaboration as if it were a collection of budget bills and general legislation. That simply is a straw that shows what the Republican administration will do when it makes up its mind to get busy on any old subject. It calls an extra session of the Congress and has it in session for a month without a single result.

Not one thing of benefit to the people and at a cost to them of over two hundred thousand dollars. That is the way the Republicans conserve interests of the people. Rats!

The Hon. John Sharp Williams, floor leader of the Democracy in the House of Representatives, has introduced a bill for the relief of the sufferers by fire at Baltimore by rebate of duties on building material and suspension of certain internal revenue taxes. By so doing he has again put the Republicans in a hole, soaped the sides and pulled up the ladder. If they refuse to pass the measure they will go up against a precedent established when the Chicago fire occurred in 1761 and thereby rob many honest men who have been unfortunate. If they do pass it they will admit the Democratic contention that the tariff is a tax and that the tax is paid by the consumers of the country and not by the foreigners, as maintained by them. They are up against it. This bill cuts both ways like the nigger's coon trap. It catches them a comin' and a goin.' Let the galled jade wince. CHARLES A. EDWARDS.

MARVELLOUS URALITE.

AN ABSOLUTELY FIREPROOF SUBSTANCE INVENTED BY IMSCHENETZKY.

It Is Superior to Anything of the Kind That Has Yet Been Produced—Will Prove Most Useful for Building Purposes.

Have you ever heard of uralite Probably not, for it is a new invention. Yet it is well worthy of your notice, since it is superior to anything of the kind that has yet been produced. It is the invention of a Russian artillery officer, and chemist, named Imschenetzky, and its claim to distinction lies in the fact that it is absolutely fireproof.

Uralite is composed of asbestos fibre with a proper proportion of silicate, bicarbonate of soda and chalk, and it is supplied in various finishes and colors, according to the purpose for which it is intended. In a soft form a sheet of uralite is like an asbestos board; when hard it resembles finely sawn stone and has a metallic ring. Besides being a non-conductor of heat and electricity, it is practically waterproof (and may be made entirely so by paint), and is not affected either by atmospheric influences or by the acids contained in smoke in large towns, which rapidly destroy galvanized iron.

Moreover, it can be cut by the usual carpenters' or wood workers' tools; it can be veneered to form panneling for walls or partitions; it can be painted, grained, polished, and glued together like wood; it does not split when a nail is driven through it; it is not affected when exposed to moisture or great changes of temperature, and it can be given any desired color either during the process of manufacture or afterward.

Mr. Oliver J. D. Hughes, United States consul general at Coburg, thinks highly of it as a fireproof building material. Several tests, he says, have been made of it, and in each case the result has been most satisfactory. In order to carry out the tests, a small brick built house, an iron framed hut, lined and covered with uralite, and a duplicate platform were erected, and each was then fitted with pyrometers for the purpose of recording the temperatures electrically and was filled with highly inflammable material.

To the house were fixed four strong doors, of oak, steel and uralite, and as soon as a fire was lighted inside they were shut. The highest temperature reached was 2350 degrees Fahrenheit, and after the test it was found that in each case the doors had resisted the fire. In the hut was placed a deed box made of uralite and wood, and in the box were placed some papers, a book, a crucible containing paraffin wax and another holding a piece of easily fusible metal.

After being subjected to an external heat of 2030 degrees Fahrenheit, the papers and the book were not affected in the slightest degree, and though the wood nearest the fire was charred right through the uralite was sound and the paraffin wax had only melted slightly.

After the fire had been burning three-quarters of an hour, those present were able to place their hands on any part of the door which was covered inside and outside with uralite, though by that time all the woodwork had been burned off another door, which had uralite for its panels only.

Other remarkable tests are also described by Consul General Hughes in an official report which he has just sent to the government on the subject.

"In the well equipped laboratory," he says, quoting the words of an expert, "one of the staff took a strip of uralite about one foot in length and one and a half inches wide, and alternately stirred up a bowl of boiling water and a freezing mixture. In the latter about an ounce of mercury was suspended in a test tube, and this rapidly froze into a bright bullet in the bottom of the tube. Some pieces of India rubber tubing placed in the mixture were also broken with the hammer like cast iron.

"The strip of uralite, on the other hand, showed no sign of warping, lamination or disintegration; in fact, it would have needed an expert to have told subsequently which end of it had been subjected to such severe changes of temperature.

"That uralite can also withstand a great strain the two following tests show: In the first a cube one inch square was subjected to hydraulic pressure, and 18.8 tons were registered before it gave way. In the second, a strip nine and a quarter inches long, one and a half inches broad and seven sixty-fourths of an inch thick, which was placed between supports and gradually subjected to an increasing weight, did not give way until a weight of 15 pounds had been applied to it.

That uralite will prove most useful for building purposes is the opinion of Consul General Hughes. "Owing to its extreme non-conductivity," he says, "huts, railway carriages, barracks, hospitals and other buildings constructed with it, while absolutely fire and water proof, are warm in winter and cool in summer. A room entirely covered with uralite three thirty-seconds of an inch thick might have its contents burned, it is claimed, without any danger of the fire spreading.—New York Herald.

THE WASHINGTON OF JAPAN.

General Viscount Katsuma Is Famous for Courage.

It is generally believed that the Japs are brave soldiers, but few know who is the bravest and greatest of them all. The Washington of Japan is General Viscount Katsura, who became prime minister two years ago. He began his fighting career in 1867, during the civil war which resulted in the overthrow of the old order of things in the Land of the Rising Sun and the adoption of western civilization. Though only a lieutenant then, he became famous for extraordinary courage. He was always in the thickest of the fight, always the first to volunteer to lead a forlorn hope.

After the war his government sent Katsura to Germany to study military matters. On his return he took a leading part in reorganizing the Japanese soldiery on the European model, and was practically creator of the modern Japanese army. In 1876 when a colonel, he was again sent to Germany, in company of the late General Kawakami, to inspect the German military system. The two officers were at that time regarded as the most promising men in the entire Japanese army. Katsura became a major general on his return home and was vice minister of the war office under Oyama. In 1891 he was made lieutenant general. In the Chino-Japanese war he led his army through Corea to Manchuria, and later, under General Norzu, won many victories. His name became a terror throughout the invaded country. In 1898 he was appointed war minister, which office he retained until the downfall of the Yamagata cabinet in 1900. He became premier in 1901.

Katsura was born in 1849 in the province of Nagato, generally called Choshiu, in the western part of the main island of Japan. This province has given birth to many illustrious statesmen and generals, among them Marquis Ito, Field Marshal Yamagata, and Count Inouye. The viscount believes the Japanese are the best soldiers in the world, and says he would not fear the result if he had to lead them against any white troops. One thing much in favor of the Japs is that they are so small the enemy can't find them. Nothing in Japan is too good for Katsura. He is the idol of the people. All kinds of honors have been showered on him. At 55 he is ready to take the field.

What is to be the future of Japan? The Greeks and Romans built splendid temples of stone. All architecture was on a grand and imposing scale, designed to last as long as the world. Today the Greeks are a nation of harmless fruit venders and sapless artisans. The Roman empire sustained by macaroni. Japan boasts no antiquities beyond coins and idols. Her temples and palaces are constructed of precious woods. There were no chairs or tables in the kingdom until in recent years. The people sat upon straw mats and ate out of small wooden salvers. What can be the future of a nation built upon straw?—New York Press.

The Tamest Birds.

Naturalists commissioned by the United States government have discovered on the distant island of Laysan, in the Pacific, some new birds and many novel facts in regard to known species. The visiting scientists were perhaps the first human beings whom the myriads of birds that crowd this tiny speck of land had ever seen. In consequence, birds representing species which in other lands wing hurriedly away at the sight of man, came up to the naturalists, looked curiously into their faces, perched on their writing tables, wonderingly inspected the tripods and other accessories of the cameras and permitted themselves to be stroked. The fact that these birds are ordinarily regarded as the wildest species made a profound impression on the visiting scientists.

NOTED CHARACTER DEAD

He Lived to Be Within One Month of One Hundred and Thirty-six Years—His Father Was an Indian.

New Brunswick, N. J.—Noah Raby is dead. Just before he entered the Piscataway poorhouse Noah established his age at 100. His proofs as to the date of his birth were not such as would be accepted by a court; but they satisfied him and all who listened to him. He has lived within one month of thirty-six years since then, and his death will be entered on the county records as having occurred in his 136th year.

Although totally blind, shrivsled and shrunken, and with hardly any life in him, he retained his memory until within a few months ago, when he lost all recollection of the past and apparently was merely able to mumble to himself.

"Uncle Noah," when he told the story of his life to visitors, gave the Gates County Court House, at Eatontown, N. C., as his birthplace, and said his father was an Indian and his mother a white woman. He never attended school. He learned to read a little, but never to write.

When he was seven years old he was apprenticed to a farmer and stayed with him until he was twenty-one. Then he became a hired man on the farm of "Widow" Penelope Parker, in his home county. Later he was employed by her step-daughter, Miss Sarah Parker.

"I fell in love with Miss Sarah," he would say, "but I thought she would not have me, and so I left her farm and went to sea for awhile. When I came back she had married her overseer. She asked me why I went and when I told her she said I ought to be ashamed of myself for having such a faint heart."

Noah's birthdays were the occasion for great celebrations. Visitors would come to the poor farm by the score from miles around. For the last ten or twelve years of his life he slept sitting in an old rocking chair, because he was afraid that by lying down he might have a rush of blood to his head and succumb that way.

After Trying to Kill Wife Madman Shoots a Woman and Child.

Cumberland, Md.—Intoxicated as the result of election excitement, where, at Elkins, W. Va., a bitter contest was waged between the license and the anti-license people, the former winning, Louis Tourville, forty-five years old, after an unsuccessful attempt to murder his wife, went to the house of his next door neighbor and shot down Elizabeth Moyer, wife of J. H. Moyer.

He then shot and killed the infant son of Mrs. Moyer, two years old.

Tourville was pursued by a crowd. There were cries of "Lynch-him!" and when Tourville found he was hemmed in he shot and killed himself. It is believed he thought his wife, who had eluded him, was concealed in the Moyer home, and, being like a raving maniac from drink, he gave vent to his spirit of murder.

GAINS FOR NO LICENSE.

Reaction in Vermont After One Year's Liquor Selling Experience.

Burlington, Vt. — Returns received from all parts of the State at the headquarters of the Vermont Anti-Saloon League indicates a decided change in the sentiment toward license in the past year. Out of sixty towns that voted for license last year only twenty-one voted for it this year. There is only one town in the State that voted no license last year that is in the license column this year.

Four entire counties have voted no license. There was only one county to so vote last year.

This city voted for license by a narrow majority, as did St. Albans, Vergennes, Montpelier, Barre and Brattleboro. This city re-elected Mayor Burke (Dem.).

Dick Elected to Succeed Hanna.

General Charles F. Dick, Congressman from the Akron District, Ohio, was elected formally United States Senator, to succeed the late Marcus A. Hanna. The houses of the General Assembly voted separately, the ballot standing: House, 87 to 21; Senate, 27 to 4. The Democrats unanimously supported John H. Clarke, of Cleveland.

Robbers Burn Town.

In an endeavor to cover up the attempted robbery of the Camden Bank, a branch of the Baltimore Trust Company, at Camden, Del., robbers started a fire which did about $20,000 damage.

That the exhibit shipments at the world's fair are in excess of the Chicago exposition at a similar period before the opening is conclusively shown. According to a table the shipments of exhibits at the Chicago fair up to March 1, preceding the opening, reached a total of 364 cars. The total shipments of exhibits at the St. Louis fair to and including February 27th aggregate 440 cars, or an excess of 126 cars.

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

A DISCOURSE ENTITLED "CHRISTIANS OUTSIDE THE CHURCH"

The Rev. Robert MacDonald Expresses the View That to Be a Believer in Christ Is Not Different From Being a Believer in Man.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—"Christians outside the Church" was the subject of the sermon Sunday morning by the Rev. Robert MacDonald, pastor of the Washington Avenue Baptist Church. It was the first of a series of five sermons. The text was from John x: 16: "Other sheep I have which are not of this fold." Mr. MacDonald said:

So important and many sided a subject as this must be looked at from more than one view point. Numberless are the questions to be considered. Numberless the opinions favorable and unfavorable, true and false, to be confirmed in these sermons or repudiated. Numberless the people interested in so practical and personal a question, some of whom love the church better than life; others of whom hate the church more than any other institution in existence; some who trace their loftiest aspirations, their deepest motives, their holiest desires back to her as a fond mother who lives to nourish her children with her own rich life; others who have never received the least benefit therefrom, of which they are conscious and boldly assert that little benefit to humanity ever emerged from her portals. Some go so far as to make the church synonymous with Christ's kingdom, and maintain that to be a member of the one is to be a member of the other, and consequently yield to her a fanatical reverence. Others swing clear to the other extreme and consider the church nothing better than the product of a jealous rivalry for pre-eminence over other institutions of earth, else the expression in wood and stone of overwrought sensibilities. Therefore, the monument of a most irrational superstition. While an innumerable many identify themselves with the church because they believe it to be a beneficent institution ordained of God, without which the world would be morally and spiritually impoverished, and through which the spirit is working for the redemption of humanity, in which divine strength can be had for the ills of life.

I desire that our starting point in these discussions should be in favor of religious toleration. As love is the centre of the Christian system, so must it be the motive in every church claiming to be a Christian church. As Christ our Master was tolerant of and charitable toward those who were not numbered among the twelve disciples and forty apostles, so must we as His followers be tolerant in thought, word, act, to those not of our number, and outside our communion. There is greater need of toleration to-day than at any previous period of the world's history. The church of to-day is more advanced than the church of yesterday. Its intelligence is greater; its light clearer; its affinity with the Holy Spirit more personal; its hold upon the cross of Christ, that power of redemptive love, sacrificing itself even unto death, stronger. The church of the twentieth century ought to be, and shame upon us if it is not, more spiritual than the church of the thirteenth century, or even than the church of the nineteenth century.

But not only in view of our superior spiritual enlightenment, also in view of our peculiarly complex state of living should we be tolerant. It is the age of differentiation and of classification. Every significant fact of life has been forced to submit to division and subdivision to an amazing extent. Look, for instance, at education. Trace it through the modern university curriculum. Contrast it with the most comprehensive collegiate institution of a century ago. You are overwhelmed with the multitudinous departments, and subdepartments and branches of instruction, and professional chairs. All these necessary, you say, to educate the youth. To adequately impart knowledge, to meet the ever increasing intellectual demand? Yes. The renaissance that called Europe from its dark ages of intellectual slumber has not yet spent its force. Measure the term medicine, or surgery with the imposing stature of the general practitioner of twenty years ago. The stature is no longer imposing. The specialist of a single bodily function is more imposing now. And for the human body the work of the one has been divided into the skill of the hundreds and each unit in the vast aggregate is more authoritative than the one. The term philosophy no longer recognizes the old vague divisions of moral and intellectual. Each division has been differentiated, and each differentiation suggests to the mind content and comprehensiveness, richer and more compact than the original classification from which it sprang. Metaphysics, theism, idealism, empricism, economics, sociology, psychology, biology, and many more are the terms now familiar to our thought. And how vast the field of consciousness covered by any one of these significant terms. Economics, a very modern term for instance postulates for us; the land question; the tenement house problem, the theory of wealth, industrial organization, all socialistic and communistic relation.

The same in jurisprudence, in commerce and trade, in everything of worth. The difference between the big department store and the little trader illustrates the idea. Yet how surprised we are that we should have wandered religiously far afield from the primitive apostolic church, with our highly differentiated credal and ritual expressions, our numerous ecclesiastical orders, our multiplicity of organization. Bless you, it only shows we are alive and growing and anxious to apply the gospel of Jesus to all sorts and conditions of men. The worldly minded claim that denominationalism is distracting and sigh for a Christian unity that will swallow up all religious divisions. But, believe me, denominationalism makes more for the glory of Christianity than for its shame. The only shame about it all is that denominationalism at times nurtures a spirit of Phariseeism that sees no God in any other division of the Christian fold than its own. It has been only a few years since the medical students of Harvard fellowshipped the aspirant for veterinary honors. The term "horse doctor" was the term of salutation. The veterinary student, as the student of dentistry, was occupied with such inferior subject matter. Yes, but necessary subject matter. So of the Anglican churches and the non-conformists of England. The one is poor stuff to the other, tolerated only at the point of taxation to support their schools. Similar intolerance was felt toward the great Booth movement in America by all the churches, because that movement ignored their dirt and dried ecclesiastical methods and brought into requisition the public square and the secular hall if by any means they might save some the churches could not reach. The same intolerance is now characterizing us toward that growing, so called, Christian Science movement. When will we see the "powers for good" that are ordained of God? When will we believe that any movement, however erroneous in nineteen points of test, if adapted in its twentieth point unto the blessing of men, is worthy of our tolerance, even our sympathetic regard.

Even religious bodies quarrel among themselves in defining orthodoxy, and denominational respectability, instead of praying together for the salvation of the world. No wonder Christians outside the church pass by on the other side of the road when Christians inside the church forget the purpose of their existence. The thumbscrew, rack, fagot and stake are looked back upon as relics of a barbaric age, but their spirit still lives. Every one of the leading denominations have within ten years either persecuted, else made it very unpleasant for some intrepid thinker who saw more clearly and spoke more fearlessly than the rank and file. The Methodist Church in our leading New England city is to-day exalting the spirit of the Pharisees instead of the spirit of the Wesleys in trying to excommunicate its leading scholar, just as Presbyterianism a few years ago in persecuting its chief scholar went back dangerously near the standard of 330 years ago, raised by its illustrious ancestor, John Calvin, who in 1553 burned Servetus at the stake in Geneva for doubting the equality of the persons of "the Trinity" and the validity of infant baptism. Christ dealt more lovingly with heretics. To Thomas He unveiled His side and loved him into the necessary belief. Phariseeism, on the other hand crucified Christ and stoned Stephen to death. Loving as brethren those within the church; tolerant as Christians toward those without is the ideal that should rule.

How refreshing to reflect upon such a passage of Scripture as that which stands at the head of this sermon. It is a plea for religious toleration and sets before us a standard of religious liberty it would be well to live up to. We are so inclined to become narrowed in our views of truth, we are so prone to live under the shelter of some creed that the vistas of truth stretching ahead of us everywhere become narrowed and hidden, and before we are aware of it the peculiar dogma we profess or the certain fact we advocate is magnified into identification with the truth itself. There is at least danger here. How needful to be often carried out into the broad field the Galilean opens up. Look at the scene revealed here. Jesus is having another of His oft recurring talks with the Pharisees, but as of old they do not understand Him. He is a fanatic or at best, a stubborn reformer, who, while professing to lead them into larger freedom, seems only to break up their honored institutions. So this peculiar saying falls from His lips. As He speaks how precious the outlook. There He leads His followers through the old loved path out under the blue sky, their life and His identified, bound together by a common fidelity of truth. But even this freedom seems narrow in view of what is yet to come. These are My sheep, He says, and for them I lay down My life; but also other sheep I have which are not of this fold, and as we contemplate the words, the range of our vision is extended, the fields through which they pass widen, the visible horizon that hemmed us in hits, the blue dome of the heavens expands until we see all truth loving souls everywhere, known by many a different name, coming in as the sheep fold opens to receive them. And we turn our steps homeward, resolving in future to be more tolerant for the Master's sake.

A few weeks ago an attendant upon our church, a lover of truth, a believer in Christ, but who had never made an open profession of religion, asked me what I thought constituted a Christian, and if I did not think it meant to be a church member, and a Baptist Church member. It was that earnest question that called forth these sermons. What constitutes a Christian? No progress can be made in our discussion until we settle that question. Is it to be a communicant of any church? Is it to subscribe to any creed? A hundred times no! All trustworthy sources make it to be a believer in Christ. What do you mean by belief in Christ? Well, what do you mean when you tell a person you believe in him, that you believe he is a good citizen, a faithful husband, a loving father? You may believe in him as all that, yet not be willing to trust him with a dollar out of your sight, or open your home to him as a friend. You honor him not most unless willing to trust him with money uncounted, your good name, the very secrets of your heart. A belief that does not express itself in confidence does not count for much. All else is cold, impersonal opinion. You must not offer Christ less than you would your friend. A belief in the historic Christ only never saved a soul, any more than a belief in Caesar or Luther or Washington, even though you believe Him as more than a teacher sent from God, more than a prophet, even the very Saviour of the world. Just as friendship is more than an intellectual opinion, even a possession of the life. Just as love, the divine essential in all true living, without much society, is a self-centred, self-circumferenced conglomeration, and the home a den, denying its own existence, is virtue of the heart instead of a secretion of the brain; so religion has its abiding place in the heart, else nowhere in the life at all.

To be a believer in Christ then is no different than to be a believer in man. Tell him whom you profess to call your friend you believe in him. When you will not confide in him, when in perplexity you seek another's counsel, and in sorrow another's sympathy, and you have insulted faith, and friendship has become in your hand an empty name. If you believe in a man trust him as all men demand you should. You say you love? Show it by loving and manifesting the self-denial love demands, else your profession is a sounding brass, an empty name, a dastardly affair.

Do you believe in Christ? Show it by a loving trust. Otherwise, you believe only intellectually, and that means you do not want to have much to do with Him. It means self first and always. And if perchance you start to follow Him from so superficial a motive he not surprised if the first time His demands conflict with your plans you turn traitor and swear you never knew the man. The test is, My sheep hear My voice and I know them and they follow Me. That is the test—to hear His voice and follow Him.

Now, what is the purpose of a church, and in how far does church membership constitute a Christian? Church membership constitutes a Christian just so far as a Christian constitutes a church member. No church, whatever its name and influence, has of itself power to make a man a Christian, unless the Roman Church, and that is only in its own estimation. We fall into one or the other of two errors: Either of thinking of Christianity as an abstraction, or as a fact identical with an organization of earth, when it is grander than both. There is no Christianity apart from the life of its founder. It is not to be born in a Christian community. It is not to be swayed by religious excitement. It is not, under the uplift of fine music, nor the tender sentiment of a keen sorrow to catch some celestial glimpse of truth, and conclude you are henceforth a religious man. To be a Christian is nothing other than Christ within you the hope of glory.

Then there is the other mistake of making the visible church identical with the reality. Indeed, symbols are important. We can never tell how much satisfaction the religious devotee receives from the picture of the Virgin or the image of the Christ. The line between the symbol and the spirit may be less attenuated than we think. More symbols may lead to more realities than we dream of. An object of sense may, however, oftener hinder access to the spirit than be a viaduct thereto. Many a person joins a church for the sake of being a church member rather than to be a better Christian. Many a person worships their church and minister rather than the Christ the church represents and the minister preaches. Being a good denominationalist is not necessarily being a good Christian, although if we are good Christians we ought to be denominationalists, and better denominationalists than we are. Denominations give form and content to Christianity which some souls would never otherwise perceive. But on the other hand, denominationalism should have no content to boast of except what the Gospel imparts. Don't think that to be a Methodist, Presbyterian or Baptist is equal to being a Christian. It may be so. It may not be so. It depends whether your denomination intensifies or stultifies Christianity. You may have the form of godliness, but your very devotion to the form is a denial of the power thereof. I have in mind a member of a Presbyterian church who would sooner give up Christ than his immersion and communion. His unspiritual life shows he has done that very thing. He has permitted these two sacred rites to steal away his Lord, and he knows not where they have laid him. Scriptural warrant for ecclesiastical forms is good. But no ecclesiastical form should take the place of the pure heart, the Christ spirit. Christianity is a Christ imparted divine state of life. All within the charmed circle, whether in my church or yours, or of neither name is yours, are my brothers because also Christ said other sheep I have not of this fold." Don't forget that. Christ said it. Therefore it must be true. There will be one flock and one shepherd. Not one fold as it is translated. There may be many flocks in one fold.

By and by secondary lines will be swept away. We think then they will all be Baptists. The Congregationalist thinks they will all be Congregationalists. The Methodist is sure they will all be Methodists. Ah brother, better still, they will all be Christians. And as some one in sixty ten thousand years asks, Who are these" as they all come trooping home like little children after the fools of the day, as Peter or even John will answer "These are they who believed in the Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world. Who knows, Jesus Himself may say, These are they for whom I died. These! These! These are they who came up through great tribulation and have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb!

Gems of Thought.

Skeptics are generally ready to believe anything, provided it is only sufficiently improbable; it is at matters of fact that such people stumble.—Von Knebel.

The best time to give up a bad habit is before you begin it, and the next best time is when you have discovered that it is a bad habit.—United Presbyterian.

No man can pass into eternity for he is already in it. The dull brute globe sweeps through its cther and knows it not; even so our souls are batned in eternity, and we are never conscious of it.—F. W. Farrar.

The humblest man or woman can live splendidly! That is the royal truth we need to believe, you and I who have no "mission," no great sphere to move in. The universe is not quite complete without my work well done.—W. C. Gannett.

"What does it signify whether I go to the bottom or not, so long as I die with skulk?—or, rather," and here the old man took off his hat and looked up, "so long as the Great Captain has His way, and the will is done to His mind?"—George Macdonald.

If you wish to know whether you are a Christian inquire of yourself whether you and for the love of God, you seek to make happy those about you by smiles and pleasant sayings. Are you a comfortable person to live with? Are you pleasant to have about?—Gail Hamilton.

Seeds That Will Grow.

The soul of man is the great masterpiece of the great Master Builder.—J. Ri... Smith.

He is building on the sand who makes the opinion of others the ground of his conduct.—United Presbyterian.

It is a noble sight to see an honest man cleave his own heart in twain and throw away the baser part of it.—Charles Re...

The capacity of our sorrows belongs to our grandeur, and the loftiest of our souls are those who have had the profoundest sympathies, because they have had the profoundest sorrows.—Henry Giles.

Life is what we are alive to. It is not length, but breadth. To be alive only to appetite, pleasure, pride, money making and not to goodness and kindness, purity and love, history, poetry, music, flowers, stars, God and eternal hopes, if to be alive but dead.—Maithie D. Babcock.

None but the fully occupied can appreciate the delight of suspended, or, rather, of varied labor. It is toil that creates holy days; there is no royal road—yes, there is the royal road—to them. Life cannot be made up of recreations; they must be like green spots in well farmed lands.—Mrs. Herbert Ann Taylor.

If thou canst not continually recollect thyself, yet do it sometimes, at least once a day, namely, in the morning or at night examine thyself what thou hast done or thou hast behaved thyself in word, deed and thought, for in these perhaps thou hast oftentimes offended against God and thy neighbor.—Thomas a Kempis.

Development of Character.

We are left in this world, not so much for what we may do here, for the things we may make, as that we ourselves may grow into the beauty of God's thought for us. In the midst of all our occupations and struggles, all our doing of tasks, all our longings and desires, all our experiences of every kind, there is a process going on in us which is quite as important as anything we are doing with our hands or with our hands.

In the school the boy has his tasks, his lessons. According as he is diligent or indolent in his progress in his studies, in ten years, if he is faithful, he masters his things and stands high in his class. If he is indifferent and careless, he gets a smattering of knowledge, with some links missing that his education is of no practical use to him. But meanwhile there has been going on in him another education—a growth or development of character. The mind grows by exercise, just as the body does.

Then there is also a subjective impression, produced by the way the work is performed. If one is faithful and conscientious, truly doing his best, the endeavor leaves a mark of beauty in the soul. But if one is unfaithful, indolent, false to one's self, there is left a wound, a scar, a marring and blemish, a weakening of the life.—C. P. Miller.

A Happy House.

Six things are requisite to create a happy home: Integrity must be the architect; tidiness the upholsterer. It must be warmed by affection, lighted up by cheerfulness, and industry must be the ventilator, renewing the atmosphere and bring in fresh salubrity day by day; and over all as a protecting canopy and shield nothing will suffice except the blessing of God.—Hamilton.

Progress.

Many people who show a good deal of Christian zest at the start so soon get over the first flush of being Christians. To have earnest love of Christ and to be intensely interested in them and controlled by them cannot be fortunately, be taken as a certain sign of the continuance of that interest. The falling off, the cooling down of Christian enthusiasm is common experience.—Rev. H. Parkhurst, Presbyterian, New York City.

Nothing to Fear.

The Bible has nothing to fear from intelligent, painstaking and reverent criticism. Its integrity as the inspired word of God has stood every test which ingenious criticism has applied to it as well as the assaults of those who would gladly undermine its authority if they could.—Rev. H. Sutherland, Presbyterian, Dayton.

Miss Amanda Johnson.

Miss Amanda Johnson, Fairchild, Wis., writes:

"I write to tell you how much Peruna benefited me. For a number of years I had pain in my head around my eyes, and I thought it was because my eyes needed treatment, so I went to an oculist and had glasses fitted to my eyes and wore them for some time, but felt no relief whatever. In fact, I felt worse than before, and came to the conclusion that the trouble was not with my eyes, but with my head and that it must be catarrh. As so many of my friends had used Peruna with benefit for this trouble, I thought I would try it. I was not sorry that I did so, for in a short time I began to improve, and in four weeks my eyes were in splendid condition, my general health was much improved and all the catarrh of the head was gone. I was glad to get rid of this trouble, and am glad to endorse such a good medicine as Peruna."—Miss Amanda Johnson.

Miss Flora Hauser.

Miss Flora Hauser, 1032 S. New Jersey street, Indianapolis, Ind., writes:

"I think I must have been troubled with catarrh ever since I was very young, aggravated each time I caught a cold. This did not prove sufficiently serious to be obnoxious until last winter. Then my head and nose were so stopped up that I felt I must do something. Peruna was recommended to me by a friend. I used it for four weeks, and found to my relief that it cured me. I have not had a bit of trouble since. My head is clear, and I can safely affirm that Peruna cured me."—Miss Flora Hauser.

DR. HARTMAN has probably done more than any other physician toward popularizing a means of escape from the facial deformities, such as watery eyes, twisted nose, offensive breath, dry cracked lips, due to the ravaging effects of catarrh.

He has made chronic catarrh a life-long study. His remedy, popularly known as Peruna, is the most famous remedy for catarrh in existence.

Probably there is not a man or woman, boy or girl, within the bounds of the United States that has not heard of Peruna. By far the largest majority have used Peruna.

The multitude of people that have been cured of chronic catarrh by using Peruna can never be known.

Many a girl has regained her faded beauty, many a matron has lengthened the days of her comely appearance by using Peruna.

Peruna produces clean mucous membranes, the basis of facial symmetry and a perfect complexion.

The women have not been slow to discover that a course of Peruna will do more toward restoring youthful beauty than all the devices known to science.

While it is true that Peruna cures catarrh wherever located, yet it is advisable for everyone to use Peruna as a preventive and not wait until catarrh has fastened itself in some part of the system.

Peruna acts quickly and beneficially on the inflamed mucous membranes lining the different organs of the body. Thus it will cure catarrh wherever located.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Clergyman Somewhat Muddled.

A clergyman was very anxious to introduce some hymn books into the church, and arranged with the clerk that the latter was to give out the notice immediately after the sermon. The clerk, however, had a notice of his own to give out with reference to the baptism of infants. Accordingly, at the close of the sermon he arose and announced that "All those who have children whom they wish to have baptized please send their names at once to the clerk." The clergyman, who was stone deaf, assumed that the clerk was giving out the hymn book notice, and immediately arose and said: "And I should say for the benefit of those who haven't any, that they may be obtained at the vestry any day from 3 to 4 o'clock; the ordinary little ones with red backs at a shilling and fourpence."—Christian Work.

Why the Sky is Blue.

In what way colors are produced is a mystery still. The varied hues of the unrivalled American Beauty are formed from the black soil. Endless are the colors produced from coal tar, but how no scientist can say. Way it is that in the zenith we have, in fine weather, a deep, rich blue is perhaps not generally known. There is always above us a haze, however fine. This haze is the aggregate of the finest combinations of moisture on dust particles. And water is blue; even when distilled blue is its inherent color. Accordingly the deep blue color in the upper heavens is caused by the light through depths of fine haze.

If there was no haze above us the sky would be black—that is, we would be looking into the blackness of limitless space.—Chicago Tribune.

When the Jap became civilized in the accepted western sense he lost his faith in the divinity of his ancient religion, which, it is true, had become sadly perverted by the priesthood. He did not hesitate to discard the supernatural elements of the national faith while retaining its moral code as an admirable philosophical rule of life. In a word he became as a skeptic who accepts the philosophy of Jesus without accepting the divinity or inspired mission. Thus civilization made the Jap an agnostic without being able to proselyte him to Christianity. The superior Japanese place the teachings of Christ alongside those of Buddha, Confucius, Mencius and the other spiritual philosophers of the Orient, and, while trying to live moral lives, shrug their shoulders at the "superstitions" of religionists, whether western or Oriental.—Atlanta Constitution.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. Billion Dollar Grass and Alfalfa.

When we introduced Billion Dollar Grass three years ago, little did we dream it would be the most talked of grass in America, the biggest, quick, hay producer on earth, but this has come to pass.

Agr. Editors wrote about it, Agr. Colleges Professors lectured about it, Agr. Institute Orators talked about it, while in the farm home by the quiet fireside, in the corner grocery, in the village postoffice, at the creamery, at the depot, in fact wherever farmers gathered, Salzer's Billion Dollar Grass, that wonderful grass, good for 5 to 14 tons per acre, and lots of pasture besides, is always a theme worthy of the farmer's voice.

A. Walford, Westlore Farms, Pa., writes: "I have 60 acres in Salzer's Alfalfa Clover. It is immense. I cut three crops this season and have lots of pasture besides."

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to express my gratitude for the restored health and happiness Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought into my life.

"I had suffered for three years with terrible pains at the time of menstruation, and did not know what the trouble was until the doctor pronounced it inflammation of the ovaries, and proposed an operation.

"I felt so weak and sick that I felt sure that I could not survive the ordeal, and so I told him that I would not undergo it. The following week I read an advertisement in the paper of your Vegetable Compound in such an emergency, and so I decided to try it. Great was my joy to find that I actually improved after taking two bottles, so I kept taking it for ten weeks, and at the end of that time I was cured. I had gained eighteen pounds and was in excellent health, and am now.

Proper Treatment of Pneumonia

Pneumonia is too dangerous a disease for anyone to attempt to doctor himself, although he may have the proper remedies at hand. A physician should always be called. It should be borne in mind, however, that pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of the grip, and that by giving Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the threatened attack of pneumonia may be warded off. This remedy is also used by physicians in the treatment of pneumonia with the best results. Dr. W. J. Smith, of Sanders, Ala., who is also a druggist, says of it: "I have been selling Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and prescribed it in my practice for the past six years. I use it in cases of pneumonia and have always gotten the best results. Sold by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton; A. Horn, Thorsby.

222 South Peoria St.,
CHICAGO, ILL., Oct. 7, 1902.
Eight months ago I was so ill that I was compelled to lie or sit down nearly all the time. My stomach was so weak and upset that I could keep nothing on it and I vomited frequently. I could not urinate without great pain and I coughed so much that my throat and lungs were raw and sore. The doctors pronounced it Bright's disease and others said it was consumption. It mattered little to me what they called it and I had no desire to live. A sister visited me from St. Louis and asked me if I had ever tried Wine of Cardui. I told her I had not and she bought a bottle. I believe that it saved my life. I believe many women could save much suffering if they but knew of its value.
Georgia Dunbar

Don't you want freedom from pain? Take Wine of Cardui and make one supreme effort to be well. You do not need to be a weak, helpless sufferer. You can have a woman's health and do a woman's work in life. Why not secure a bottle of Wine of Cardui from your druggist today?

Circuit Clerk

THE BANNER

LET THE PEOPLE RULE.

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

[illegible] of the Cigars He Gave, and Those He Saw Not.

"Kolb's my man for President of the railroad commission" is what I am constantly hearing. The "Gen[illegible] Reuben" had no end of friends in Chilton in his race for the governorship a few years ago, and they are rallying to his support in large numbers now. Kolb made about the best Commissioner of Agriculture the State has ever had, and there is every reason to believe that he will make as fine a reputation as President of the railroad commission.

In the coming primary, for the first time, the people will nominate the Judge of the circuit. There are two candidates for that position, [illegible] Scott Sayre, of Montgomery, and Col. W. A. Collier, of Clanton. Of the two candidates, the first named is not known to our people, while I suppose there is not a voter in Chilton county who is not acquainted with Col. Collier. It is not my province to advocate any candidate, you make your own choice. But I find there is a strong feeling that it would be pleasant to have one State officer at least hailing from Chilton, and this local feeling will have a considerable effect upon the voters. Mr. Sayre is not making any strong effort, apparently, to secure votes, and Col. Collier has secured the endorsement of the bars of Chilton, Autauga and Elmore counties.

Among the most notable of the remarks I overheard after the "Pop [illegible]" meeting was this: "After all the notice that has been given of this so-called 'Pop' meeting and the exertions that have been made to get a large attendance, only about seventy of the old guard turned up. Now, supposing that each one of this seventy can control three votes apiece, and I don't believe that they can, this would give them a total voting strength of 210, and I'm pretty near sure that is just about what is left of the old Populist majority, the rest have either outright gone into the Republican party or have decided to come into the Democratic party.' That looks to me a fair statement of the situation.

A meeting will be held at the residence of Mrs. S. E. Johnson Saturday night, March 19, by the young men of our town for the purpose of organizing a ball team. The boys are enthusiastic over the prospects for a good team this year, and promise to give Clanton the "real thing." All in favor of good ball are earnestly requested to be present.

VANDALISM AT THE CEMETERY

Clanton, March 16, 1904

Editor Banner—Will you please state in the columns of your paper the fact that parties who enter enclosures in the cemetery and pull the flowers growing therein will be vigorously prosecuted. The pulling of flowers in the cemetery is a thing of almost daily occurrence, and we wish to warn vandals and unthoughtful persons that they will be severely dealt with in the courts if they do not desist.

Do You Want Strength?

If you want to increase your strength you must add to and not take from the physical. In other words, the food that you eat must be digested, assimilated and appropriated by the nerves, blood and tissues before being expelled from the intestines. Ko-ol Dyspepsia Cure adds to the physical. It gives strength to and builds up strength in the human system. It is pleasant to the taste and palatable, and the only combination of digestants that will digest the food and enable the system to appropriate all of its health and strength-giving qualities. CORRESPONDENCE.

Cooper, March 14, 1904

Editor Banner—Will you please allow me space in your most valuable paper to say a few words in regard to the roundup press at Clanton. I had my cotton packed on it last fall, only for the sake of convenience, with the distinct understanding with Mr. W. H. Sartor that I could find a ready sale any day for round cotton. What I want to impress on the farmers is this: I had taken twelve bales to Clanton on Saturday, March 5, stayed all day long until 5 o'clock p.m., waiting for W. H. S. to get a price. When he got a telegram it was 15½¢, just exactly what I saw square cotton bring that day. I would not sell then, so consequently I went back to Clanton on Tuesday, the 8th. Square cotton was bringing 15¼ right along. After waiting until 2 p.m. I was offered 15½¢, which price I had to take. It was a loss of $7.02 to me. Now, I have told the straight facts. Hoping all of my brother farmers will do as I will in the future, let that imposition alone.

R. T. GRANT.

Marion, Ala., March 12, 1904

Editor Banner—Some time ago I noticed the announcement in your valuable paper of E. B. Deason for Probate Judge of Chilton county. Now, I wish to say a few words in behalf of my old friend and school mate. He is a self-made man, being left an orphan at an early age, and has successfully battled with the adversities of life. He is honorable, high toned, big hearted, honest, conscientious, and we feel that his struggle should meet with encouragement. He is the home boy, having been born and reared in Chilton, and the boys should remember this when they line up on the 11th day of April. I feel in honoring Mr. Deason the people of Chilton will honor themselves. I hope all my friends will vote for him, I feel sure they will never have cause to regret it.

Yours truly,
J. P. HALEY, D. D. S.

Avondale, Ala., March 11, 1904

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words. Having been born and reared in Chilton, I feel some interest in the affairs of the county.

In the last issue of the Banner I noticed the name of Mr. J. C. Pattillo for commissioner from the fourth district. Having known this young man all my life, I think the people would make no mistake in electing him for commissioner. He is fully competent, and more than this he is a sober, truthful, honest, Christian gentleman, worthy of the support of the people of his district. I hope in the coming primary the people will rally to Mr. Pattillo's support, and then elect him to the office for which he is an aspirant, and I am sure he will make an excellent commissioner.

Wishing success to the Democratic party, and the Banner with its many readers, I will close.

Clanton, March 14, 1904

Editor Banner—A few lines in your paper and oblige. I saw a letter in last week's Union signed Voter, in which he rises upon his hind feet and says M. A. Killgore is a political adviser and Republican buster of this county. I want to say the Republicans of this county are not busted by no means, but there were a few pretended Republicans that tried to control the Republican party and failed, and now from their actions it seems as if they have busted themselves wide open right in the middle of the remnant of the Populist party. Voter said he could give the Democrats Killgore and the rest of the Republicans and then elect their ticket. Say, buddy, you ask who is Killgore? I want to say that Killgore is a gentleman far superior to any man that would write such a burlesque as your letter and then sign a fictitious name to it. If I would bet at all, I'd bet a four dollar dog that you want an office and will never get it.

Now, to the public. Gentlemen, such as this is not very pleasant to me nor interesting to the public. Now, gentlemen, Voter alledges that the Republicans are for the Democrats. He knows that's not true and he can't make the people believe it, I will say to Mr. Voter that we are ready and willing to meet him and his little salvation army on the political battlefield, then it is that we will put the hush cup on him and his crowd of office seekers. Now, in regard to the name of black and tan that has been so much said about. There is no such thing as black and tan, that word is only used to prejudice the minds and deceive the people.

Respectfully,
M. A. KILLGORE.

Clanton, March 10, 1904

Hon. S. M. Adams—Dear Sir—I hereby challenge you for a joint debate for the purpose of discussing our respective claims to the Democratic nomination for the office of Judge of Probate of Chilton county, beginning tonight at Thorsby and to continue until we have gone into every precinct in the county. The other appointments to be arranged within the next few days.

Respectfully,
A. C. SMITH.

Clanton, March 10, 1904

Hon. A. C. Smith—Dear Sir—I am in receipt of yours of this date challenging me to a joint debate for the purpose of discussing our respective claims to the Democratic nomination for the office of Judge of Probate of Chilton county, and in reply I will say that there is no issue between us, and as to our respective claims to the nomination, I am sure that the people know us sufficiently well to determine that question without a discussion, and further, owing to the peculiar political situation in Chilton county, I do not see that a personal debate would be for the best interest of the Democratic party. However, if you should raise any issue between us, I will take pleasure in discussing it with you before the people.

Respectfully,
S. M. ADAMS.

This includes every scholar in the school. The best exercise gets Robinson Crusoe; second best, Swiss Family Robinson. It will be hard to decide, of course, as every pupil writes a splendid hand.

Both women and men married seven months later in life in 1900 than in 1871.

Even church members are occasionally compelled to resort to injunction. At Lima, O., a pastor insists upon expelling some if his flock. These parties object, and have asked for an injunction. The singular part of the transaction is that the men whom the pastor wants to get rid of are the trustees of the church. From the standpoint of the law, it would seem that the pastor is the man who should apply for the writ.

An institute of social science has been established in Chicago, for the purpose of supplying instruction in methods of philanthropic work. The institute will supply the need of an opportunity for systematic training in charity administration, which in New York has been met by the winter course in philanthropy. The institute is organized as a branch of the extension division of the University of Chicago, and, viewed from an academic standpoint, the undertaking is a legitimate expansion of that field of university activity so largely developed by Chicago. The administrative work will be handled by the staff division, and the instructors may have university standing.

German Southwest Africa is threatened with a repetition of the horrors of the Zulu war, when the assegais of the native savages caused the wholesale slaughter of so many of the finest British troops, and brought death amongst others, to the Prince Imperial of France, observes a writer in Harper's Weekly. The German colony which is the scene of this very serious native uprising lies immediately north of the Orange river and west of the Transvaal, running up to the Zambesi and west to the ocean. It is the region to which the Boers, at one period of the South-African war, were supposed to have planned a general retreat, a new "trek" to the west, to escape from the advance of England. In reality, this region is, for the most part, an inhospitable desert. Equal in area to Texas, Oklahoma and the Indian Territory combined, it has less than one-tenth of their sparse population; in fact, in over 300,000 square miles German Southwest Africa has under 200,000 inhabitants. Of these, only 2500 are Germans, with some 2000 other Europeans as their fellow colonists. They are, therefore, outnumbered by the natives by about 100 to 1

My Little Gray Kitty and I.

When the north wind whistles 'round the house,
Piling the snowdrifts high,
We nestle down on the warm hearth rug—
My little gray kitty and I.
I tell her about my work and play,
And all I mean to do,
And she purrs so loud I surely think
That she understands—don't you?

And softly licks my face,
As I tell her 'bout the word I missed,
And how I have lost my place.
Then let the wind whistle, for what to us
Matters a stormy sky?
Oh, none have such jolly times as we,
My little gray kit. / and I.

—Florence A. Jones, in Pets and Animals.

Cats Fond of Olives.

"I have often wondered if all cats like olives," remarked a woman who is very fond of the feline tribe. "All mine do, and I have six. Olives are usually an acquired taste with the human race, but cats seem to take to them naturally—at least mine do. An olive will set any one of them into paroxysms of joy. They will leave milk or fish or any other article of food for it, purring and rolling over it much as though it might have the intoxicating effect of catnip, before they finally eat it. I have often tried olives on other cats in the houses of friends and have found them equally appreciative, only they prefer their olives cut up into pieces."

A Fairy Tale Game.

Men and women who have forgotten the charming impossibilities called fairy tales, which fascinated them as children, must recall these in all their picturesque details before attending a fairy tale party, one of the prettiest of the new evening affairs for home entertainment.

The good game from which the affair takes its title is founded upon a series of puzzle cards, each card representing a well-known fairy tale. The stories are expressed in charade, either by ambiguous sentences, pictures drawn or pasted, or wee objects sewed to the cardboard, which when rightly guessed suggest the romance.

Thus, the card intended to hint at the story of Golden Hair and the three bears has a sketch of a hare gilded with gold paint (Golden Hair). The three bears are represented by the words "Bear, Bare, Bhaer," written one below the other and numbered, 1, 2, 3.

Red Riding Hood is represented by the words "Author of the Song of the Shirt" (Hood). A picture of a horseman in full gallop (Riding). A scrap of scarlet cloth (Red). An English general killed at Quebec (Wolf).

Blue Beard takes a bit of blue ribbon or a blue flower. The lower portion of a man's photograph showing the beard, and a headline from a newspaper or something purporting to be such, giving the dreadful news that "He murdered his wife!"

For Cinderella a lady's slipper, the flower or the foot covering, some pumpkin seeds, a picture of a fireplace and a coronet are grouped together.

For "Beauty and the Beast" combine a sketch of a pretty girl consulting her mirror, a toy gorilla or other monster from the children's playroom, and an imitation wedding ring.

The set should consist of as many cards as there are to be guests present, but those given here will serve as models for the remaining number, which the hostess can readily concoct. The cards are numbered. Each guest, on arriving is given a pencil and paper. When the game is about to begin the players draw their chairs together in the form of a circle and each endeavors to discover what fairy tale is meant by the objects on his card. When the name has been discovered and written down, in connection with the number of the card, the player effects an exchange of cards with some one else. This exchange of cards is continued until all competitors have had a turn at every card.

The prize—a pretty piece of bronze representing a scene from some old-time story—is then presented to the man or woman whose list of correct answers is most complete.—Indianapolis News.

Golden Locks and Sunbeam.

There were once two little girls called Golden Locks and Sunbeam. One could readily tell why Golden Locks was so named by the golden ringlets which lay in a shining mass on her little head.

If you only saw Sunbeam's hair you wondered why she was called Sunbeam. The curls clustering thickly on her head were so flaxen that one thought of the dolls in the toy shops rather than of sunbeams. She flitted here and there as careless and as gay as a butterfly, while her voice caroled songs as happy as a bird's.

Golden Locks had big blue eyes, but just between them on her little white brow there was often a deep scowl. If at play she could not have her own way, or if anything displeased her, quickly came the scowl, until at last there appeared two deep lines straight up and down just between Golden Locks' big blue eyes. Even while asleep the lines were there.

One day these two little sisters started out to gather flowers. They lingered her and there picking many pretty blossoms and not realizing how far they were from home.

They came to a deep wood, where the trees were so close and the shade so dense, with such cool breezes blowing through, that the children stopped to rest. They were tired out, and it was only a little while before each little child had thrown herself down on the grasses, laid her little face on her arm and had fallen fast asleep.

"Aha! Aha! What is this?" said the Queen of the Fairies, as she and her train of fairies stopped in their ramble and looked at the two sleeping children. Their faces could not be seen, but Golden Locks' mass of golden curls lay in wild disorder, their brilliancy almost defying the sunlight.

"She must be one of us. Such a head must belong to a fairy," they all chorused, and the Queen of Fairies smiled and was much pleased that her little band should be so glad to add to their number one over more beautiful than they. So the Queen decided that they must have Golden Locks. She did not stop to think what the other little girl would do when she awoke to find Golden Locks gone, nor how distressed she would be.

The Queen waved her magic wand, and at her bidding appeared a beautiful chariot almost like the one in which she herself rode. There were flowers here and there and everywhere on the body of the golden chariot, and around the little gold rimmed wheels and closely set in gold spikes of the wheels were most brilliant precious stones.

When Golden Locks awoke at the touch of the fairy her eyes fell upon the chariot, and she thought she had never before seen anything half so beautiful. Then the Queen said:

"Little girl, would you like to be a fairy?"

Golden Locks clapped her hands in glee. "How lovely to be a fairy."

But the Queen noticed that even her happiness did not take away the two deep line, so she called all the fairies together and consulted with them as to what was best to do. They had all seen the scowl on Golden Locks' face, and all felt that no one should be a fairy who had two deep, ugly lines on her forehead, because such a fairy would look cross, and fairies are always happy, you know.

Just then Sunbeam raised her head and looked around. She jumped up and danced with glee. Never before had her eyes shone so brightly, never before had the dimple in each little cheek come and gone so quickly. The smiles seemed to flit all over her face like little dancing sunbeams.

"This one!" "This one!" chorused the fairies, and they all decided that Sunbeam must be a fairy. Sunbeam was only too willing, and as she stepped into the beautiful chariot it seemed as if the sunlight must have found its way through the close-leaved trees, for the chariot and Sunbeam's face were so brilliant.

Then they prepared to make their departure, but such a wail rent the air and Golden Locks' scowl grew deeper and her cries were so loud that Sunbeam felt troubled. She told the fairies she could not leave her little sister, and as she stepped out of the chariot the fairies almost looked sad.

But they were quickly made happy again for the Queen had a new idea. She would try to get little Golden Locks to take the lines out of her face, and some day she would come again for both the little children.

The Queen told her it took a long time for little girls to get such deep lines out of their faces, but she would come again in just one year, and if Golden Locks' scowl was gone she would take both little girls to Fairyland. Then the fairies all tripped away, and the children saw them no more.

Just then they heard a voice calling them, and very glad indeed was their father to find his little truant girls safe and sound. He took them home, and now the family wonder why it is that Golden Locks so often runs to the mirror and rubs her little fingers up and down between her big blue eyes. It is the children's secret, and they never tell it, but one who watches closely can see that Golden Locks always does this when things do not go to suit her and she feels cross.

They are still waiting for the fairies to come again.

"Don't you hope Golden Locks will get the lines out of her forehead before the fairies come?—J. Villette Finley, in Birmingham Age Herald.

Took Care of Her Watch.

The woman's watch, when she brought it home from the mountains, where she had been staying, didn't keep perfect time, so she took it to a jeweler's to be regulated.

"What have you been doing to it?" asked the jeweler, when he had stared it out of countenance with his little glass and had listened to its ticking and otherwise acted as a modern doctor does when he is called in to determine what is the matter with a patient.

The woman grew thoughtful.

"Well, I dropped it in the grate fire one night," she said. "But I took it out with the tongs before it had had time to be very much hurt and then it fell into a basin of water when I was bathing my hands one day. But that certainly couldn't have injured it, for I jerked it out instantly and wiped it with the towel. That is really all its adventures, except that it fell down some stone steps. I have wound it up almost every night, and when I haven't wound it up at night I have in the morning. I really believe the works couldn't have been good in the beginning, and if I have to bring it back to you again I think I shall have to ask you to substitute a movement which will keep more accurate time than this one."

And then she swept out of the shop and left the man who knows about watches saying unprintable words about her sex.

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

AN ELOQUENT DISCOURSE BY THE REV. ROBERT MacDONALD.

Subject: "Christians Outside the Church"—Many a Man is Losing His Soul Because He Cannot Believe in Jonah and the Whale—Harmful Prejudices.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—In the Washington Avenue Baptist Church Sunday morning, the pastor, the Rev. Robert MacDonald, delivered the last of the series of sermons on "Christians Outside the Church," the special subject being, "Reasons Why Those Outside the Church Stay Outside." The text was from I Corinthians, xi:22: "What? despise ye the Church of Christ?" Mr. MacDonald said:

No church has power to take a man to Heaven beyond the power he has himself to gain entrance there. And whether or not he has the necessary ability depends upon whether or not he is taking up his cross and following in the steps of Jesus Christ. Heaven is a state of blessedness rather than a locality beyond the stars, and must come to us before we can go to it. Whatever else is implied in following Jesus church membership is included. Jesus commanded baptism. To illustrate His meaning He Himself was baptized in the Jordan. His reason was "for so it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." If He, the perfect man, thought it necessary to fulfill all righteousness, think not for a moment that any one of His imperfect followers can be excused. Paul in Romans shows baptism to be the likeness of Christ's death and resurrection. If we have been united with Him in the likeness of His death, we shall stand in the likeness of His resurrection. All denominations make baptism the door of entrance to the church. At Pentecost 3000 were added through baptism in a single day. Then there is "the Lord's Supper." "This is My body which was broken for you," is the Redeemer's word. The apostle to the Church of Corinth commends its perpetuation as a memorial to their Lord. Baptism and "the Lord's Supper" are then very significant and belong to the Christian Church. Not to join the church is to despise these helps to the cultivation of the spiritual life so full of sacred meaning. All Christians should embrace both as precious memorials of the Saviour's death. To embrace these is to join the church. To neglect them is to despise the church. Worse than that. To neglect them is to disobey your Lord, whom you profess to serve. Even further, it is to show disregard for your Lord's dying request, "This do in remembrance of Me." You would submit to much inconvenience to comply with the dying wish of an earthly friend. But your Lord's dying request is ignored. How can you expect to grow spiritually? How can you ever hope to hear God say, "This is My beloved Son in whom I am well pleased." Instead of pleasing your Lord, you offend Him. You never thought it was so serious a matter before, did you? Sleep not this night until you possess as well as profess the Lord Jesus: Be an out and out Christian. Sympathize with and come into that organization that is perpetuating these sacred rites. Keep not isolated from the one organization that God has set up for the redemption of the world.

Now for these reasons you stay out and feel justified in so doing.

You object to the creed of the church. Creeds are forms, and you detest the formal. Yet I know of no one who needs forms more than you who raise this protest; your religious life is so slack. That which you need above all else is to conform to worthy ecclesiastical order, for you are amazingly disorderly, religiously speaking. For others that may be a good excuse, but hardly for you. We all admit that no creed is as important as the life it contains, just as no cradle is as important as the babe rocked there, and as no suit of clothes is as important as the man who wears them. Nevertheless a Christian or a church without a creed is like an engine without a track—little progress can be made. There is neither ideal nor practical existence without belief, and what a man believes is his creed. And his creed is the channel through which the very water of life flows into his thirsty soul. Rock up the channel and the water becomes stagnant. But that is not the fault of the creed. Thou only art to blame. A growing man, it is true, needs an expanding creed, and woe unto him whose creed is not expressive of the word of God and the revelation in Jesus! We must admit that as many a Christian is kept outside the church because of its creed, so many a man is in the church for the creed's sake. Such a man is as devoid of vital hold on Christ as is an Egyptian mummy dead 10,000 years. Creeds are a curse when they take the place of the life, and more than one church in Christendom has lost its life and is clutching only its creed. Better stay out of a church like that and retain your life than, entering in, lose it. Such a church is, however, an exception to the rule that does not strengthen the life of every member within its fold, if they give it the opportunity so to do. It is our false thought about the church that is to be deplored. Our question is, "What benefit will we derive?" Our question ought to be, "What opportunity will it provide to render benefit to my fellows less favored than myself?" Our Christian profession is a sham that does not interpose God and humanity in place of self. Conversion introduces us to God and estranges us from self. Not for self's sake, then, but for Christ's sake do we join the church. When we become new men in Christ Jesus we take as instinctively to the church as does the duck to the water or the bird to the air.

A second reason I have heard you give for remaining outside the church is because its members are not good enough. You look for perfection. You find imperfection. You are at fault; not the church. You expect too much. Come into the church and it will not be many months before you wonder how Satan ever so got possession of your mind as to beguile you into expecting perfection of church members. But you will also find them much more Christ-like than you expected—not in absolute holiness, but in desire for more righteousness in their lives and in the world. Hear the apostle exclaim that life is a battlefield: "Fight the good fight of faith." Life is a race course, so run that you may attain. Read his letters to the churches—disputings, contentions among you. These priceless letters to the Corinthians would never have been written had it not been so. Had the church at Ephesus been perfect no letter to the Ephesians would have been penned. Put away lying is his command. Let him who stole steal no more. Let all clamor and wrath and envy be put away from you as becometh saints.

Were the church of to-day perfect it would be very insipid. No struggles to be good. No fighting temptation. I, for one, would prefer to be out of it. I would sooner be imperfect, with a desire for holiness, than be perfect, and know it all and be it all, and never have desire for anything worth while. I would go so far as to thank God for an imperfect church, just as I have many a time thanked Him I was a member of a sinful race, with Jesus as Redeemer, than of a sinless race and know Him not. The church holds to its members that relation which the school does to the little boy. As it trains him for a rich intellectual existence by and by, so the church trains for rich spiritual existences by and by. The most important condition of both is unwillingness to be taught. The church, in its relation to the world is as a regiment, with Jesus, the great victorious Commander, leading the way. In relation to its membership it is as a training school, where we are trained for service and fitted for living in time and eternity. You'll not stay out of the church then longer because of this very erroneous idea, that its members ought to be perfect, for you get the idea not from the Word of God, but from your own evil imagining. Even when the Master said to His disciples, "Be perfect, as your Father in Heaven is perfect," He really said, be moderate as He is, and when He asked the rich young man if he would be perfect, to follow Him, He really said, if you will be full grown, if you would cease to lack the one thing you now lack, come and follow Me. The reason, then, we want you in the church is that you may help train us and let us help train you in truth and righteousness. Nobody needs the help of the church more than you, who will not come in. If you still resist our invitation to enter where you belong, be more charitable toward us, anyway. And if you will not be one of us, pray do not obstruct our work by talking against us, thus prejudicing the world before whom we should stand in a good light that we may do it good.

Your reason for remaining out of the church may be that of Biblical or doctrinal difficulty. Many a man is losing his soul, not because he cannot believe in Christ, but because he cannot believe in Jonah and the whale. More than one man has said were it not for the "Garden of Eden" and the "Deluge" he would accept Jesus as Saviour. I know a man who has lost his religious fervor because he could not reconcile the doctrine of election with the freedom of the human will and the universality of God's grace. And another whose religious activities have been paralyzed because he could not reconcile the possibility of punishment of sin with the all mercy all love of God. Many such genuine questions are killing men's enthusiasm for the work of the Lord. If those inside of the church are influenced thus, we need not wonder that Christians outside of the church question so foolishly. Those same men never think of questioning what the president and officers of the club, or Masonic order, or Odd Fellows organization to which they belong believe about the world, whether it is round or flat, or whether Jesus created in six days or in 6000 years, or whether the earth revolves around the sun or the sun around the earth, or whether heaven and hell are states of existence or fixed bodies. The reason you give for not demanding information about these questions of the secular association, yet assign it of the church, is that these are not builded on these questions, while the church is. That is where you are wrong. The church is not builded on the integrity of the story of Jonah and the whale nor belief in the Garden of Eden, nor even in the infallibility of the Scriptures, but on Jesus Christ and Him crucified. But you ask, "Do not your members believe in these questions?" I do not know, I am sure. I would not be surprised to find many who do not. Will we not expel them? Yes, if we find them as unfaithful and good for nothing religiously as you are who remain out of the church because of these questions. But if they love Jesus Christ with all their hearts, mind and strength, and if that love inspires them towards righteousness in private life and make them eager for the salvation of men, we would as soon think of relinquishing our charter as a Christian church as to expel such choice souls as are they.

But a fourth reason you ignore the church of Christ is because of dislike of certain members of the church. Else of its minister. This last reason is more prevalent than you have any idea of, and until human nature is more sanctified than at present people will separate themselves from the church for this reason. But if one church fails you here is there no other church, no other minister where you can worship at peace with God and man? Your duty is to find such and go there; if not of your own denominational order, then of some other, rather than despise the church universal and refuse it your support. There is a large difference between being at odds with some especial church and holding aloof from all churches because not in harmony with that one. If you cannot walk in sympathy with some one you are at fault if you do not walk in sympathy with some other. In Brooklyn no one is forced to keep isolated from all churches because he cannot live in harmony with some one church. If you cannot conscientiously enter one, I repeat it, you are at fault for not entering some other. As for this church, if you will permit me to say it, it has been during these last six years a veritable haven of refuge for those kinds of people. We have rented more pews to and baptized more people from other denominations than those of our own denominational faith and training. Here are two pictures. You will instantly detect the more pleasing to gaze upon. Here is a person absenting himself from all public worship, all Christian activity, because troubled over some Biblical and doctrinal question, or because he does not like the church of his early choice, and he is leading a bitter, self-centered, indolent existence in consequence. Here is another who has a similar grievance, but overcomes it for the Master's sake. He believes the Gospel to be the power of God unto salvation. He is convinced men are lost without Christ. He believes he is responsible if the light within him becomes darkness. Therefore he continues to be identified with that organization that represents the kingdom of Heaven in the earth.

A woman told me a while ago she joined the church because it was her duty and for no other reason. She did not especially like the minister. She could not digest all the creed. She disliked some of its members and preferred the width of the avenue between herself and them, but she professed to be a Christian and believed her place was in the church rather than out. For fifteen years she remained outside and criticised. A barren, unsatisfactory spiritual life was the consequence. She entered finally for Christ's and her children's sake, and the last year had been the happiest and most profitable of her existence.

Do you believe in Christ? Would you honor Him? Your place is inside the church of Christ as truly as the soldier's place is inside the regiment, or the sailor's on board ship. But, you exclaim, the creed, the doctrines, the membership, the minister. Well, then, seek the church you can fellowship, even though outside your denomination, and if no such church can be found take yourself speedily to Jesus Christ. Go into your closet and shut to the door with your prejudices on the outside. Then fall upon your knees and pray to be converted all over again. Some of us, you know, need to be converted more than once. Even the seventy times seven recommended by the Master in the olden times. Let God overrule your prejudices and flood your heart with His grace. Then go in the spirit of a little child and ask admittance of the nearest Christian church. Let nothing stand between you and that important obligation, that divine privilege, that necessary discipline, that priceless joy.

On the Plain.

Henry Clay Trumbull, speaking of the mission of the lowly road in the Christian's life and its relative importance in comparison to the mountain road, says: "There are times in every life when the soul stands on the clear heights, and no task seems to be too difficult to the boundless enthusiasm of the moment. But what is to be done when the soul has descended into the plains, and the enthusiasm is gone and the task remains? Only to go on bravely, trusting to the clearer vision on the mountain top, and making faithful performance fill the place of enthusiasm. The mountain and the plain has each its place in Christian life—the mountain for the clear vision ahead, the lowly road along the plain for the actual performance of the journey."

This was in the noon, "when the day began to wear (Luke 9: 12). The Jews had two ings. The first began at 3 o'clock, the end at 6 o'clock. In this verse the evening is meant; in verse 23, the one "Disciples came." By combining the counts of the evangelists the conversa may be supposed to have been as follows. Jesus said to Philip: "Wh shall we buy bread, that these may (John.) Philip replied that "two hu pennyworth of bread" would not be ficient for them (John). Then the ples urged Him to "send them away" that they might purchase Jesus said, "Give ye them to eat." upon the disciples in dismay asked should go and buy this great am bread (Mark). Jesus replied, "How loaves have you? Go and see." They replied that there was a lad (John) who had "five barley loaves two small fishes."

II. The miracle wrought (vs. 16-21). "Need not depart." Christ had fed souls and healed their bodies, and proposes to feed their bodies, and show that He is able to provide for their necessities. John says that the tion He asked Philip was for the pu of proving or testing him, for Jesus what He would do. "Give ye them." ip's reply to Christ's question, that pennyworth (about $32 worth) of would not be sufficient, has caused to believe that this amount repres the total resources of Christ and His ciples; and would certainly seem for them to use their last penny for purpose.

17. "We have here." The multitude not thought of their temporal need so anxious were they to see and Jesus, and a lad had all that could found, "Loaves, fishes." The loaves round, flat cakes like large crackers. ley was their poorest food. The fish small, dried or pickled, and were with bread, like our sardines. 20. "Were filled." Here is one m of our Lord attested by at least 5000 probably 10,000 persons. No one nee leave Christ's table hungry. Passing of the Kiss.

There are about four reasons for the

. It has been proved difficult for persons wearing Gainsborough

net and the large velvet spots with rough treatment easily become de-

. The complexion, unless exceed-

Exploring expeditions in all parts of Africa, and big game hunting in China, India, Canada, Africa, and other parts of the world have been one of his greatest interests. With such tastes Mr. Kennard has not spent much time in England.

His London flat is remembered as the scene of many interesting dinners, whilst his little tea parties have often been among the events of a smart London season. At this flat, which for London is quite large, just off Park Lane, Mr. Kennard has some of the wonderful trophies of his antiques, among them being a collection of Queen Anne furniture of which Mr. Kennard is very proud. His collecting hobby is also known to include curious bric-a-brac.

Beautiful Arms.

Every woman desires beautiful arms. On some nature has bestowed them, but others less fortunate must cultivate them. This can be done, provided she will spend time, patience and a little money. Once in a while an artist comes across a beautiful pair of arms, every line exactly modeled every move indicating expression, but this is an exception. The arms with round and flowing outlines that taper down to the wrist are few and far between.

If the arm is not sufficiently developed to be graceful it may be improved by proper care and exercise. To begin with a thin scrawny arm must have plenty of skin food. Almond oil is good, so is the cold oils. The oil should be rubbed over the arm thoroughly with a downward motion, stroking the arm from the shoulder to the wrist. The average woman will be surprised at the dark substance that comes off during the operation, but this is dirt that collects in the pores with which the skin is dotted. This dirt cannot be removed with water alone, and nothing but skin food will at once cleanse the pores and fill them so that blackheads will not appear.

Women who devote much attention to beauty steam their arms by wrapping them in hot towels, using care not to burn them. This is a laborious process and where the skin is tender is often painful. Often the upper arm needs a massage which is not necessary for the lower arm, as that is more often used. In this case the upper arm should be gone over thoroughly with melted mutton fat, which can be perfumed to suit the taste. The fat is healing and strengthening and is readily absorbed by the skin pores. If ugly hair is on the arm it can be removed by rubbing the skin with powdered pumice stone daily until it disappears.

The use of exercise to obtain a beautiful arm is to be recommended from the hygienic viewpoint. Indian clubs and dumb bells are excellent for this purpose. With a dumb bell of light weight (many persons injure themselves by using too heavy dumb bells) the arms should be held upward and gently revolved around the head. Then with one hand upraised the other arm should be slowly extended until it reaches the shoulders, letting it fall gradually until it reaches the waist line at the back.—Housekeeper.

Fashion Notes.

New knit vests are shaped like loose coats or sailors' "pea jackets."

Narrow bands of Persian velvet set on small tucks make a stylish skirt trimming.

Braid and cloth will be employed for the ornamentation of velvet gowns for day wear.

Fichu effects are a boon to the woman who has to "do over" old gowns on a small allowance.

Kid girdles for dressy suits are elaborated with gold tracery and clasped with flat, gold buckles.

Many charming house dresses are made of white poplinette, which is as pretty as it is inexpensive.

Flat surplice pieces of real lace in the heavier varieties appear upon many of the new evening blouses.

The prettiest taffeta petticoats have closely pleated ruffles finished at top and bottom with quaint, old-fashioned ruching.

Among the newest ribbons are broad, soft fine weaves in taffeta, liberty satin and the most exquisite brocades. Some are in "solid" colors, and others printed in the loveliest of floral designs; while the brocades and metallic weaves are perfection in textiles.

There are a dozen new weaves of silk, some of the richest showing disks and figures of velvet ombre of the color of the ground or a contrasting shade. Many of the light-colored silks are woven with velvet figures, flowers and leaves of the natural colors. Martele velvets resemble embossed velvets, but have gone through a slightly different process, giving the pattern a vague shadowy effect.

AGRICULTURAL.

Profit in Poultry.

Is there anything on the farm that pays better than poultry or the hen? asks The Epitomist. Some say that there is no profit in poultry, but this depends upon who is in the business. In many homes the poultry money clothes the children and gives the farmer's wife many a necessity that otherwise she would be compelled to go without. Often the hen on the farm is greatly neglected and has to pick up her food wherever she can find it, yet she attends strictly to business and gives one an idea of her value when carefully attended to. In many of the poorer homes eggs are all the money the families ever see, and these are exchanged at the small stores for necessaries. A few years ago it was almost impossible to get cash for eggs in the country, but now there are regular poultry agents who pass over all the leading highways paying the highest market prices for poultry and eggs. When one gives time and study to poultry it pays wonderfully, and some go so far as to say that the hen is the greatest wealth producer in America. However this may be, it is certain that more attention is being given to poultry than ever before. There are many who use eggs as a substitute for meat, and there will always be a demand for them, no matter how much the price varies with the season, and as the highest prices are realized during the holidays one ought to manage so as to have the pullets come into laying at that time. Neither the old fowls nor the pullets will lay during severely cold weather, however, unless given the warmth they require and the proper food.

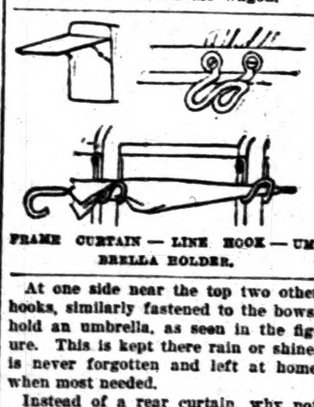
Low Average Product.

An increase in the production of butter and milk, by resorting to the breeds adapted for such work, opens a market for the grain on the farms. Every farmer who can contrive to utilize his crops on the farm saves the several costs of commission, transportation and other incidentals, and this amounts to a large sum when estimated for the whole country. There are thousands of farmers who keep cows which do not produce over three pounds of butter per week, and it is safe to claim that there are also thousands of cows that do not average 100 pounds of butter in a year, and they are not difficult to find, even in this section. The cow of an improved breed assists the farmer to have a home market because she demands more food, which she converts into a large quantity of milk and butter, thus not only enabling him to dispose of his crops to better advantage, but to derive larger profits because of the decreased expenses for labor, shelter and food in proportion to product derived. The $200,000,000 produced in the form of butter could easily be increased to $400,000,000 if better cows were used. Cheap grain can be converted into an article of higher price. It is claimed that there are three pounds of butter that can be gotten from a bushel of corn by feeding to good butter cows, but it does not pay for the labor when the cows are not capable of fully utilizing the corn for the purposes intended. The foundation, therefore, is in the kind of stock used. The cow is the real factory for producing butter, and the greater her capacity the more thoroughly the raw material is manufactured into the product.—Philadelphia Record.

The Farmer's Market Wagon.

Farmers who regularly take produce to market or deliver direct to customers should have a wagon fitted with conveniences for that purpose. Such an outfit adds much to comfort and in the long run saves expense, says a New England Homestead writer in describing the following devices:

Instead of wrapping the lines about the whip or leaving them where they often get beneath the horse's feet, why not have a wire hook fastened to the wagon overhead, as shown in the cut? It can be easily made of stiff fencing wire and secured on the wagon.



FRAME CURTAIN — LINE HOOK — UMBRELLA HOLDER.

At one side near the top two other hooks, similarly fastened to the bows, hold an umbrella, as seen in the figure. This is kept there rain or shine, is never forgotten and left at home when most needed.

Instead of a rear curtain, why not stretch the oilcloth or canvas on a frame hinged at the top? It should be furnished with stays, jointed like those of a buggy top, as represented in the drawing. It serves as an awning and protects from sun or rain when the driver is standing in market or taking articles from the wagon.—Connecticut Farmer.

Feeding For Profit.

We may be feeding the correct foods to our poultry, but how are we feeding them? If one is not very careful the fowls will become indolent, especially in winter, when they are confined. If they can be induced to work for their food it will be better for them. Of course, all soft foods must be fed in troughs, for if thrown upon the ground a large portion of it would be trodden, and besides the fowls would be liable to eat dirt, gravel, etc., which is unfit for them. The grain that is given them should be scattered here and there among litter, and thus they are afforded the exercise that they are so much in need of. Feeding corn on the cob is another good way to make them exercise.

The feed trough must be cleaned often, so that no disease germs may accumulate. It will require cleaning oftener in the summer, for if any food is left in the trough it will soon become sour. Take hot water and an old broom to it in winter and it will not be a difficult task.

Do not allow the geese, ducks and chickens to live in the same quarters, for if they do the chickens will not do well. Ducks, especially, have very untidy habits, create filth rapidly, and unless they are frequently changed to new quarters will cause very disagreeable odors. Although they have their drawbacks they are very valuable fowls to have, any way. Every year they are becoming more popular as table fowls; by many the meat is pronounced superior to turkey. It is not necessary to keep them until they have reached maturity before selling. When they are eight or ten weeks old they are usually ready for the market. During the first few weeks of a duckling's life they require considerable care, but after they get started to growing they can stand considerable roughing and do not seem to thank any one for their care. Yards fenced with wire netting, two feet high, are very good to keep the ducks in. They can be moved and changed to new locations when necessary.—M. D. H., in Indiana Farmer.

Home-Made Farm Sled.

Poultry Notes.

Coarse bones in fowls indicate coarse meat.

Regularity and carefulness are the keynotes of success in poultry culture.

Both the poultry and the keeper need grit. See that both are well supplied.

February is a good time to plan, if not to make, the yards for spring breeding.

Don't keep more fowls than you can attend to well. Neglected poultry are money losers.

Never carry a fowl by the legs with its head down. It is an old and cruel fashion. Just as much so as carrying a duck by its neck, or a rabbit by its ears.

A grange in New York, at a public meeting, figured it out that a hundred hens will, in a single season, beat four cows by $40 as producers of revenue. In this case figures did not lie.

A good game hen will whip a cat, a rat, or a hawk, and fight anything that molests her brood. A few on a place are good to have about, as they never have bad luck in raising a family.

P. Tumbledown's fowls perch on his farm wagons and implements under the trees. They are too weak from starvation to fly up into the branches. The beautiful snow is their only covering.

In raising winter chicks for broilers, do not make the mistake of removing them from a heated brooder to a cold house before they are full feathered. This will stunt their growth every time. They need artificial warmth at this season, from start to finish, to keep them growing and thrifty.

Sam Jones' Dog.

Sam Jones has spoken again, and of course he couldn't get through a paragraph without reference to "a yaller dog." Sam and his rhetorical dog are inseparable. The dog always points an epigram and illustrates a fable. Wherever Samuel goes this dog is sure to go; if it is a sermon or lecture, or only an interview, the dog is called up and exhibited.

Sometimes Sam's figure is varied. He may say to his audience, "Some of you old yaller dogs out there don't believe that, do you?" This always fetches a great roaring, reverberating laugh. Wit is said to consist in the unexpected. But if you have ever heard of Sam Jones that dog isn't unexpected. You know, or ought to know, that it will be trotted in presently in one form or another. It may be introduced to you as a "cabbage eared coon dog," or only a "bull pup," but it is the same old dog. It accompanies Sam Jones everywhere, as the faithful Snyder followed Rip. We have taken a great fancy to this canine and should be greatly disappointed if Preacher Jones didn't put him through his tricks at any lecture or "speakin'" in which he took part. We should feel like calling out: "What's the matter, Sam; have you lost your dog?" This dog is unquestionably popular. His appearance is always greeted with a broad and laughing countenance, and we hope that the dog and the inimitable Sam will continue on to a green old age together.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

It is estimated that there are 1,200 tunnels in the world of something like a total of 600 mile-

On Tuesday, according to call, the Populist executive committee and "all those who oppose organized Democracy" met at the court house, and by actual count they numbered 102, several of that number however being Democrats and straight Republicans.

Moses Robinson was elected chairman of the meeting, and S. W. Collins secretary. While the executive committee was out deliberating, a number of those present made addresses to the meeting. Among the speakers were S. J. Jennings, E. G. Rollins, Anderson Baker Sr., J. Dorminy, D. N. Riggins and L. H. Reynolds. J. B. Downs was called upon, but declined to speak.

D.N. Riggins stated that "When you make your nominations I and the part of the Republican party to which I belong will vote the county Populist ticket, and expect that the Populists will vote the National Republican ticket." It is asserted by members of the Republican executive committee that Mr. Riggins had no authority to speak for anyone but himself, and that they and the Republicans generally will not follow his lead, but will put out a straight Republican county ticket!

L.H. Reynolds made one of his old time talks to the effect that he had never known anything good of the Democrats. He read the following telegram from J. O. Thompson, one of Pres. Roosevelt's referees:

"Hope Populists will stand pat. Republicans will do their duty to the county ticket." Mr. Reynolds did not explain why the Populists had to ask the advice of Republican Thompson.

The meeting adjourned until August 1, and it subsequently transpired that the committee has ordered a primary to be held July 26.

The Democrats had called a meeting for Tuesday for the purpose of considering any proposals that might be made by the Populist committee, but as none was forthcoming, the following candidates made addresses to a crowd of about ninety Democrats: Messrs. Collier, Adams, Smith, Deason, Perry, Gulledge, Rasco and H lley, and much enthusiasm was manifested for the bright prospects of a triumphant Democratic victory.

W. C. DICKINSON.

From the southwest quarter of Chilton county Mr. W. C. Dickinson sends his announcement as a candidate for the office of commissioner from the fourth district. "Croff" Dickinson, as he is affectionately called by his neighbors, is a man of sterling worth, an old time Democrat, a good farmer and man of business, who, if nominated and elected would unquestionably fill the office to the advantage of the county. Mr. Dickinson represents the bone and sinew of the county, and would bring practical common sense to the deliberations of the board of commissioners.

SHOOTING AT STANTON.

Tuesday night of last week as Justice of the Peace W. J. A. Melton was returning home from a neighbo'rs, he was shot at and severely wounded in both legs. He drew his pistol and returned the fire, then crawled to a house near by and was carried home. Next day he was taken to Selma, and since then one of his legs has been amputated.

Thursday night Sheriff Morgan left for Stanton, picking up Deputy Lee Hayes on the way, and next morning arrested three white men—Will Smith, J. R. Cook, and J. H. Echols; and three colored men, Green Williams, John Hynes and Jack Davis, charged with assault with intent to murder. They were brought to Clanton and committed to jail, Will Smith being admitted to bond in $1000. The preliminary trial will be held before Justice of the Peace E. B. Deason next Tuesday, 22d inst.

Six persons have been arrested by deputy sheriff Hayes, persons thought to be implicated in the shooting of W. J. A. Melton that occurred on the night of the 8th inst. Mr. Melton has already had one leg amputated, caused from the effects of the shots, and will probably lose the other one.

Gardening seems to be all the go now.

Prof. Jones went to Thorsby last Friday night and delivered an address, on Thorsby and her boys and girls.

Small pox has about died out. The last ones who had it are out now. Notwithstanding this scourge our school has gone on with a good attendance, and the prospects are now that it will close the 22d of April with a large number in attendance.

Messrs, W. O. Perry and L. O. Dyer candidates for tax assessor and collector are making much efforts toward canvassing, but they feel sure of the nomination.

The debate last Friday afternoon proved a success.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, March 14, 1904

Many Democrats as well as Republicans in congress are ripping mad at the President of the United States because he has done something that they consider reprehensible, and this is the story in brief: Several months ago the President sent two agents or commissioners to the Indian Territory to investigate the stories of corruption and rottenness down there among the Federal officials. They went, made the investigation and reported to the President through the Secretary of the interior. Their report has been in the hands of the President for more than a month, and some three weeks ago the House, by a resolution, asked the President for the report. At that time the Indian appropriation bill was under consideration, and the House wanted some information on the report that there was rottenness in the Territory. They got none and the bill was passed by the House and then passed by the Senate and has been signed by the President. Now, after the thing has become the law, the President sends in the report of his agents who investigated the stories of corruption, and the report corrobrates every charge that has been made concerning the Dawes commission the men who represent the government in the Indian Territory. If that report had been before the House before the Indian appropriation bill had been passed the appropriation continuing the Dawes commission in existence would have been knocked gally west. The President, by holding that report, has continued the very men in office who, his own agents say, are corrupt and venal and should be driven from the public service. The people may draw their own conclusions.

The administration has got the daylights scared out of Wall Street and the big business interests of the country because it is going to withdraw the money from the banks of the country, deposited there by the government, to pay the opera bouffe republic of Panama for the canal strip and the French people for the canal. Everybody seems to be mortally afraid that it will create such a stringency in the money market that it will precipitate a panic. The money sharks and trusts are lying awake nights now wondering what will be the next move of the political acrobat in the White House. Well, they put him there, now let the galled jade wince. Lay on MacDuff!

There was a small sized sensation in the House last Monday morning when the committee to investigate the report of Assistant Postmaster General Bristow made its report. It was rumored that not less than 150 of the House members were implicated in the report as having violated the law and there was considerable "doing about" until the printed report was brought into the House. It was eagerally seized and scanned with much fear and trembling by the members until they were satisfied that they were not in the list of alleged evil doers. Those implicated were charged either with renting buildings owned by them to the government for postoffices, or else that they had been instrumental in getting the allowances of the postoffices in their districts increased, the inference being that they had done so with some ulterior motive and not for the good of the service. This whole thing is a case of great cry and little wool. The members who have been thus publicly charged by Mr. Bristow with violating the law have only done so technically and for no graft or loot. They have simply written to the Postoffice Department authorities when appealed to by their constituents or by the postmasters in ther districts for greater facilities for handling the mails. Many of the cases of increase have been justified by the increase of business in the offices asking for it and perhaps not one per cent. of the so-called offenses have been committed with guilty intent. The whole truth of the matter is that the report was started by the Republican postal authorities to hide the real culprits in this disgraceful lust of loot and distract the attention of the people of the country from the head devils and center of this volcano of venality. They are trying to do the cuttlefish act which spews out inky stuff to hide from its enemies. CHARLES A. EDWARDS.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.

William Shaffer, a brakeman of Dennison, Ohio, was confined to his bed for several weeks with inflammatory rheumatism. "I used many remedies," he says. "Finally I sent to McCaw's drug store for a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm," at which time I was unable to use hand or foot, and in one week's time was able to go to work as happy as a clam." CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

MARCH 9TH.

During consideration of the army appropriation bill in the senate Mr. Bacon protested against the acceptance of the statue of Frederic the Great of Germany, tendered by Emperor William, on the ground that the former German king was not in sympathy with American institutions. Mr. Stewart defended Frederic the Great against what he characterized as Mr. Bacon's gross misrepresentation. The army appropriation bill was passed. The senate also passed the Philippine shipping bill after speeches in opposition by Messrs. Culberson and Patterson.

The consideration of the army appropriation bill was then resumed, and an amendment suggested by Mr. Proctor, authorizing the secretary of war to adjust the accounts between the governments of the United States and the Philippine government was agreed to.

When the house met the invocation was delivered by the Rev J. J. Dolliver, father of Senator Dolliver, of Iowa. Immediately thereafter, Bourke Cochran, who was elected to succeed Mayor McClellan from the twelfth district of New York, was sworn in. Upon being escorted to the speaker's desk by Mr. Sulzer, Mr. Cochran was greeted with applause.

Mr. Overstreet, of Indiana, chairman of the committee on postoffices and post roads, was then recognized. He had, he said, consulted with members on both sides of the house who desired more than three hours' to discuss the Hay resolution bearing on the Bristow charges in connection with postal affairs. He therefore suggested a postponement of the consideration of the resolution until Monday.

Mr. Williams, of Mississippi, agreed to this provided the time would be extended to two and a half hours on each side.

MARCH 10TH.

The senate passed a number of bills relating to Alaska, but failed to act on the measure authorizing the election of a delegate in congress from that territory. Sir Mortimer Durand, the British ambassador, and his daughter were interested spectators.

The following bills were passed:

Concerning the repayment of fees on public lands; authorizing the award of brevet commissions for gallant conduct of army officers in China and the Philippines.

Increasing to $100 per month the pensions of ex-soldiers and ex-sailors of the United States who have lost both eyes or become totally blind on account of their service. Mr. McCumber, chairman of the committee on pensions, stated that six hundred cases were covered by the provisions of the bill, and that the increased cost to the government would be $101,600 annually.

In the house the chaplain feelingly referred to the death today of Representative Croft, of South Carolina.

The speaker announced the appointment of Bourke Cochran, of New York, as a member of the ways and means committee.

MARCH 11TH.

With the exception of half an hour devoted to consideration of routine business, the senate spent the entire day in executive session, devoting most of the time to the nomination of General Leonard Wood to be a major general.

Two set speeches were made in opposition to General Wood's confirmation, the speakers being Senators Scott and Blackburn.

The house indulged itself in nearly seven hours of explanation, accusation and denunciation, and then ordered, with only two negative votes, an investigation of postal affairs, so far as members of the house are concerned, by a special committee to be appointed by the speaker, who, likewise, are to examine into the origin of the Bristow report, so far as it concerns members of the house. The demand of the minority for a sweeping investigation of every branch of the postoffice department was not granted. The test on this question came on a vote which resulted 144 to 125, a strict party vote.

The climax of the day was reached when Representative William Alden Smith, of Michigan, condemned every executive department of the government for its arrogant treatment of the only branch of the government in direct touch with the people of the country—the house of representatives. "I hope," said he, "that the day is not far distant when with the general consent of the American people, the speaker will be lifted into the executive office."

MARCH 12TH.

There was an echo of Indianola, Miss., postoffice case in the senate when Mr. McLaurin rose to a question of personal privilege to explain a newspaper report to the effect that the authorities of that place arrest peddlers of pictures of President Roosevelt and Booker Washington, who may chance to go there. Mr. McLaurin said that arrests of picture venders had been made both at Indianola and a neighboring town, but that the arrests were due to the fact that their wares were of an improper character.

A number of bills were passed. Among them was one having for its purpose the prevention of desecration of the American flag by its use for advertising purposes, and another to authorize absentee Indians to select eighty acres each of public land.

When the house met Speaker Cannon announced the special committee provided for in the McCall resolution adopted by the house yesterday to investigate the indictment respecting the postoffice department, as follows: McCall, republican, Massachusetts, chairman; Hitt, republican, Illinois; Burton, republican, Ohio; Metcalf, republican, California; McDermott, democrat, New Jersey; Bartlett, democrat, Georgia, and Richardson, democrat, Alabama.

The following bills were passed:

Directing the secretary of war to expend $125,000 heretofore appropriated for a deep water channel through Sabine Pass, Tex.

Mr. Crabell, of Kansas, also made a report of the committee of the whole, and after passing the 264 pension bills, the house adjourned.

Senator Morgan introduced a bill for the government of a canal zone. It declares the territory acquired for canal purposes to constitute a government reservation of the United States, subject to civil and military law under the control of the president of the United States through the canal commission. The laws of Panama shall continue until superseded by laws of congress; laws of the United States respecting citizenship, immigration, naturalization and the importation of contract labor shall not apply until congress otherwise shall direct. The fiscal operations of the commission are to be through the war department. Ten million dollars is appropriated to pay for the canal strip, the money is to be paid without delay, and the president is to take immediate possession of the canal zone.

It is announced that St. Louis is to have a woman's hall of fame. The project was given the approval of the board of lady managers at a recent meeting, and it is expected that Mrs. Manning, president of the board, will announce in a few days the members of the committee appointed.

Porto Rico has added $10,000 to its world's fair appropriation, making $30,000 in all.

A crusade against the use of cigarettes has been inaugurated all over the country by the railroads. Officials claim the fumes of cigarettes have a bad effect upon the eyesight of the smoker. The cigarette habit is believed to be quite common among the trainmen, and the Baltimore and Ohio is now conducting an examination for the purpose of determining if such is the case.

An informal suggestion that France and the United States act jointly as peacemakers in the far eastern war has been made within the last week, and although officials hold that any peace overtures would be futile at present, the suggestion leads to the belief in high quarters that France and the United States will become the eventual peacemakers. The suggestion was entirely unofficial and informal, but none the less it was thought that it would prove a germ for official action. No such official action is likely at the present time, as it is the accepted view of the French and American authorities that neither belligerent would listen to any peace overture.

An autograph letter from Thomas Jefferson, written a hundred years ago to the Indians of the Louisiana purchase, has recently been unearthed from the archives of the Sac and Fox Indians in Oklahoma. The letter will be a feature of the Oklahoma historic exhibit.

A plan has been suggested to unite the Columbian, American and National universities of the District of Columbia to form the nucleus of a great national university at the capital city.

It is estimated that the total appropriations of this session of congress will amount to between seven and eight hundred million dollars, although there will be no rivers and harbors bill or public building bill.

Henry B. Richardson, of Louisiana, has been confirmed as a member of the Mississippi river commission.

Representative Moon, of Tennessee, in a minority report on the postoffice bill, severely scores that section of the bill appropriating $142,000 for special facilities on trunk lines from Washington to Atlanta and New Orleans over the Southern. Mr. Moon says the appropriation is purely a gift, that the connecting lines are so run that mail was delayed in November, December and January from fifty minutes to eight hours on an average of twenty-six days in each month at one main point of distribution, and that as the train now starts from Washington instead of New York as formerly, the section making the appropriation is the most unjustifiable ever openly incorporated in any bill.

Jacob Raurs, for thirty-five years consul general of Germany for the state of Georgia, has resigned on account of ill health. Mr. Raurs' commission was signed in 1868 by Emperor William I and countersigned by President Grant.

The senate committee on public buildings and grounds ordered a favorable report on the bills for the postoffice at Atlanta, Ga., to cost $1,000,000 and one at Fernandina, Fla., to cost $100,000.

PAN-AMERICAN LINE

Requires but 4,500 Miles to be Completed

Charles M. Pepper, appointed by President Roosevelt as commissioner to carry out the recommendations of the second international American conference, held in Mexico two years ago, with regards to the Pan-American railway, has submitted his report to the state department, by which it will be transmitted to congress.

The report says that the general prospect of an international line, which ultimately will place New York and Buenos Ayres in through railway communication, is receiving much encouragement. At the present time about 4,800 miles are lacking, and the estimated cost of construction is based at $150,000,000. This is based on an average of 50 cents gold, as a daily wage for labor, with an efficiency of 75 cents as compared with similar labor in the United States.

IRON MOVEMENT.

January Report to Hand of Southern Iron and Steel Manufacture.

The January report of the Alabama iron committee has been made public. It shows the following to have been the shipments of pig iron for that month:

Chattanooga	16,860
Greensboro	160
Middlesborough	6,370

The cast iron shipments are given as follows:

Districts.	Tons.
Anniston	2,450
Birmingham	6,756
Chattanooga	3,077

This shows the grand total of shipments of cast iron, steel rails and steel billets and pig iron to have been 171,184 tons during the month of January.

The boll weevil is an insignificant creature, a little gray snout beetle, about one-fourth of an inch long, but it breeds very rapidly, multiplies enormously in the course of a summer, and works during the critical period of its life absolutely protected from any application which could be made to the cotton plant. Stowed away in old corn stalks, in clumps of grass, under the bark of trees and logs, and in all sorts of sheltered places, the weevil passes the winter. Promptly as the cotton plant comes up in the spring and early summer the weevils come forth, fly to the plants, and as soon as the first "squares"—unblown buds—are found they lay their eggs in them. The young grub hatches, and destroys the forming flower, causing the square to drop. The grub changes to a pupa within the bud, and the full grown weevil emerges soon after.

Mine Trouble.

Trouble has again broken out in Virginia mines, there being a pitched battle fought Friday afternoon between Superintendent Gafford, Sid Hurst and two negroes with them on one side, and several parties hidden in the woods on the other. About forty shots were fired on both sides. Sid Hurst, of the party with Mr. Gafford, being shot in the side, shoulder and arm with buckshot. None of the others was struck, although one man had his hat shot off his head.

It is not known whether any of the attacking party were struck or not. As soon as the mines were reached bloodhounds were brought out and an attempt to trail the would-be murderers was made, but without result.

It is understood that Atlanta is about to place an order for five hundred cars of chert, and after the inspection of chert beds in various sections, they have concluded that Bessemer offers the best chert to be found.

A sanitarium is promised for Gadsden.

A Big Land Deal.

Sixteen hundred acres of coal lands near Mineral Springs were sold to a New York syndicate for $16,000 cash. This property will be immediately developed, four openings already being under way with about 300 men at work. Houses, offices and other buildings will be erected at once and the work of developing the property undertaken on a large scale. The output of the new mines will be about 1,000 tons daily, the old Pratt seam having been tapped in the explorations for coal. When the openings are completed, there will be 400 miners employed to deliver the fullest output possible.

Japan has over three thousand miles of railway, most of it owned by the government, and 1500 miles of telegraph lines in operation. Twenty-five years ago not a mile of this system existed.

Japan has facilities for making everything necessary for the construction and equipment of railroads except locomotives.

A charcoal plant will be established at Alabama port on the Bay of Mobile.

INSURANCE FIGURES

Submitted for 1903 by the State Commissioner

Deputy Insurance Commissioner Ned R. McDavid has just completed a statement on the fire insurance for the past year. The receipts by the state show an increase of $10,500 over the previous year, while there has been a decrease in the losses paid by insurance companies. The average rate charged for fire insurance in Alabama last year was $1.67 per $100, which was a decrease of 11 cents per $100, or about 7 per cent decrease over the previous year's rate. This reduction in rate represents a saving to the Alabama policy holders last year of about $140,000.

The fire insurance premiums paid by the Alabama policy holders has almost doubled in the past seven years, though the rate charged is only 4 cents per hundred more. In 1897 fire companies collected in Alabama $1,168,564, and in 1903 $2,115,355. The fire companies fared well in Alabama during 1903, paying for losses in this state only 48.4 per cent of the amount received for premiums. Allowing 33 1-3 per cent for expense of doing business, leaves a profit of about 18 per cent for the companies. The average loss in Alabama during the past seven years is 55 per cent.

DIDN'T LIKE IT.

And Tried to Stop It With a Shotgun.

Near Florence, a marriage under difficulties was solemnized Sunday morning. Great preparations had been made and a large crowd of guests had assembled to witness the wedding of Miss Lily Young and Alexander Haddock, when a former suitor of the young lady appeared upon the scene and demanded that the proceedings be stopped. Seeing that remonstrances were of no avail, he left and returned later with a shotgun. His appearance caused consternation among the guests, but the irate suitor was finally persuaded to retire and leave the field in possession of his rival.

Burned to Death.

A horrible accident occurred at the home of a farmer in Hokes Bluff, resulting in the death of the thirteen-year-old daughter of William Shields, a prominent farmer. The young daughter was left to prepare dinner. It is supposed that the clothing of the girl caught from the stove and she was burned to a crisp.

Mrs. John Schultz, wife of a stonemason residing three miles from Irondale, was fatally burned Wednesday, her clothing igniting from a fire which she had started in the garden, where a pile of leaves and trash had been raked up.

Phoenix-Girard Bank.

The site for the new Phoenix-Girard bank will be selected at an early date, the committee having the matter in charge having several lots under consideration. The bank will have a capital stock of $25,000, the greater portion of which is owned by local merchants. W. E. Holloway, of Montgomery, the well-known Alabama banker, will be president of the institution. It is understood that as soon as the bank is erected and open for business, plans will be perfected for establishing wholesale houses and possibly cotton ware houses in Phoenix City and Girard.

A passenger train on the Southern was wrecked at Milton and three men slightly injured. The accident was between a head-on collision and a side-swipe. The passenger train ran into the freight engine, injuring A. E. Cheatham, engineer of the passenger train; O. B. Newman, mail clerk, and A. Thomas Baker, a mail weigher.

The largest single piece of machinery ever shipped south reached Gadsden Monday. It is the bed plate for the large engines of the rolling mill of the Gadsden steel plant and weighs 125,000 tons.

It is said that the steamboats along the Alabama river are carrying fertilizers to farmers in unprecedented quantities and all boats are heavily loaded.

IMPORT AND EXPORT

Through the Principal Cities of the South

The monthly statement of the international commerce of the United States, issued by the department of commerce and labor through its bureau of statistics, has just been made public. Thirty-eight car service associations report 2,125,961 cars handled during January, 1904, compared with 2,272,461 cars in January, 1903.

In southern territory receipts of cotton for the first five months of the crop year show that 5,992,616 bales were sent to seaports of which 3,996,184 bales, or two-thirds of the total port receipts, arrived at Gulf ports, the other one-third having been received at Atlantic ports.

Galveston continues to hold first rank among seaboard receiving points in southern territory, receipts to the end of January, 1904, being 2,030,973 bales of cotton, compared with 1,568,209 bales received at New Orleans. Savannah received 1,001,983 bales. Norfolk ranks next with more than one-third of 1,000,000 bales, derived largely from the Carolinas.

Coal movements as reflected in the anthracite shipments for January have shown a tendency to decline, 4,134,245 tons being reported for January, compared with 4,259,748 tons in December, 1903, and 4,091,147 tons in November.

Under this new arrangement first publication of all this news will be in the United States.

Without Known Cause.

Saturday night Isaac Mooney, a farmer, who lives near Jasper, was aroused by a knock on his door, and when he arose and opened it he was struck a terrific blow in the face with a rock, and it is thought that he will lose one of his eyes from the effects of the blow. Mooney can assign no cause for his treatment, claiming that he has offended no one, and if he has an enemy in the world he does not know of it.

Cut Off the Boy's Head.

A freight ran over and cut a little boy's head off near Battelle. He was playing near the track with his dog, when the dog ran across the track in front of the train. The child, to save the dog, ran after it, but in some manner slipped and fell and the train cut his head off. The dog was not hurt. The boy was about nine years old. The engineer was very much wrought up over the affair.

Against Mrs. Buffalo Bill.

A petition for divorce filed by Colonel William F. Cody (Buffalo Bill), has just been made public. The complainant charges cruelty and alleges that on December 26, 1900, Mrs. Cody attempted to poison the plaintiff. The stockholders of the Meridian fertilizer factory met last week and agreed to expend the sum of $150,000 in improving their plant, but this improvement will be made at Hattiesburg and not at Meridian. This was the result of the donation of a site for the new plant by the citizens of Hattiesburg which decided the stockholders to build there.

USES OF REINDEER WOOL.

Blankets and Clothes Made of It Are Excellent Protection Against Moisture.

Thousands of years ago the reindeer roamed far into the temperate zone of the European and American continents. To-day they are found only in the Far North. Whoever visits the more remote regions of Norway soon learns of the great importance of the reindeer to the nomadic Laplanders.

America has a specially strongly built species, not yet domesticated, called caribou. It is found in all parts of Canada, and also in Greenland, where it is made use of. In Northern Europe and Northern Asia, besides the Laplanders, the Samojedes and Tungese keep large herds of these animals; in fact, they are their most valuable and almost their only property. The meat serves as food, the hide furnishes good leather for tents and clothing, and the female reindeer yields nourishing milk.

From time immemorial the Laplanders have known how to manufacture coarse but warm blankets from the woolly hair of the reindeer. These are an excellent protection against moisture and frost. The inhabitants of Sweden and Norway were the first to observe how well the reindeer swims across large bodies of water. This led to the thought that there must be something in the animal's hair suitable to the making of useful textiles. This, in turn, then led to the manufacture of fabrics which are used mainly for protecting the body when the wearer goes out on the sea in winter.

A close examination of the hair of the reindeer furnishes an explanation of its peculiar value. The hair does not have a hollow inside space for its whole length, but is divided or partitioned off into exceedingly numerous cells like water-tight compartments. These are filled with condensed air and their walls are so elastic and at the same time of such strong resistance that they are not broken up either during the process of manufacture of by swelling when wet. The cells expand in water, and thus it happens that a man clad completely in garments made of reindeer wool does not sink when in water, because he is buoyed up by means of the air contained in the hundreds of thousands of hair cells.

In the markets and stores of Norway, Sweden and Russia garments and blankets of reindeer wool are to be had at lower prices than other fabrics.

In Vienna there is a factory which manufactures garments of reindeer wool, especially bathing costumes. For persons unable to swim the possession of such garments is of great value. It is possible that they may be utilized in learning how to swim. Recently successful trials have been made in Paris in this line.

In England attention has been directed to this peculiar property of reindeer wool, and it is proposed to take up its manufacture and possibly to improve it.

History in Tattoo.

There exists in Paris a famous professor, Pere Tible, who, to describe him in his own words, is an "engraver upon human skin." He lives in the Greveile quarter. As a kind of permanent advertisement he exhibits his left arm, on which are "engraved," in order, all the Presidents of the Republic, from Thiers to Loubet. On the professor's body, it is stated, is to be found the whole history of France—portraits of Charlemagne, Henry IV., Joan of Arc, Louis XIV., Robespierre, Napoleon, Gambetta, and others, with escutcheons, fasces, flag trophies, and similar ornaments galore.—London Tit-Bits.

To Cement Glass and Iron.

Common alum melted in an iron spoon over the fire forms a good cement for joining glass and iron together. It is useful for holding the glass reservoir of a lamp to its metal base and for stopping cracks about the base. Its great merit for this purpose is that paraffin will not penetrate it.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address

RESTORED TO HEALTH.

Many weak, suffering women do not know that their kidneys are sick. Backache tells of sick kidneys, and so do urinary disorders. Sick kidneys make bad blood, and bad blood makes bad digestion, heart palpitation, dizzy headaches, nervousness, sleeplessness, sciatica, rheumatic pains and constant depression.

Can't be restored to health until the kidneys are cured. Read how one woman was restored by using Doan's Kidney Pills:

Mrs. H. A. Van Sickle, 311 6th Ave., S. W., Roanoke, Va., says: "Kidney trouble was hereditary in our family, and I had been so continually afflicted with the disease that I began to despair of even temporary relief. Sometimes I suffered so severely that I was confined to my bed. The aching in my back was intense, and the kidney disorder caused an excess of uric acid in my blood which impaired my digestion. I was compelled to deny myself of many of the little delicacies of diet. The doctors diagnosed my case as congestion of the kidneys. I had about given up hope when I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, but I took only a few doses when their curative powers were proven to my satisfaction. I have never been without them in the house since."

Doan's Kidney Pills are sold by all dealers; price, 50 cents, or mailed on receipt of price by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Write for free trial.

Miss Rose Hennessy, well known as a poetess and elocutionist, of Lexington, Ky., tells how she was cured of uterine inflammation and ovaritis by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For years I enjoyed the best of health and thought that I would always do so. I attended parties and receptions thinly clad, and would be suddenly chilled, but I did not think of the results. I caught a bad cold eighteen months ago while menstruating, and this caused inflammation of the womb and congested ovaries. I suffered excruciating pains and kept getting worse. My attention was called to your Vegetable Compound and the wonderful cures it had performed, and I made up my mind to try it for two months and see what it would do for me. Within one month I felt much better, and at the close of the second I was entirely well.

"I have advised a number of my lady friends to use it, and all express themselves as well satisfied with the results as I was."—MISS ROSE NENA HENNESSY, 410 S. Broadway, Lexington, Ky.—$5000 (forfeit if any part of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced)

Another new thing. Can be cut six times during a season and sprouts again with lightning rapidity. Next to Salzer's Teosinte it will make more green fodder than anything else, cheap as dirt and grows everywhere.

Of Salzer's Renovator Grass Mixture, just the thing for dying out pastures and meadows, Mr. E. Rappold, East Park, Ga., writes, "I sowed Salzer's Grass Mixture on soil so poor two men could not raise a fuss on it, and in forty-one days after sowing I had the grandest stand of grass in the county. Salzer's Grass Mixtures sprout quickly and produce enormously." 100,000 barrels choice Seed Potatoes.

Here is a winner, a prodigy, a marvel, enormously prolific, strong, healthy, vigorous, producing in thirty States from 150 to 300 bu. per acre. You had best sow a lot of it, Mr. Farmer, in 1904, and in the fall sell it to your neighbors at $1 a bu. for seed. [A.C.L.]

Mr. Myers gave a delightful dance at the Martin hotel March 12th, complimentary to Mrs. Ricketts, Misses Ricketts and Miss Florence Adair. The german was led by Mr and Mrs Jones, formerly of New Orleans, who introduced some new and graceful figures. Mrs. Jones was beautifully gowned in white satin with pearl trimmings. Mrs Ricketts was bewitchingly handsome in lavender crepe de chine. Miss Adair was unusually charming in a simple pink organdie trimmed in cream antique lace. The Misses Ricketts were becomingly gowned in pure white mull with satin trimmings. Eight couples from Plantersville and Riderville were the out of town guests. Music was furnished by the Maplesville string band.

Proper Treatment of Pneumonia

Pneumonia is too dangerous a disease for anyone to attempt to doctor himself, although he may have the proper remedies at hand. A physician should always be called. It should be borne in mind, however, that pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of the grip, and that by giving Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the threatened attack of pneumonia may be warded off. This remedy is also used by physicians in the treatment of pneumonia with the best results. Dr. W. J. Smith, of Sanders, Ala., who is also a druggist, says of it: "I have been selling Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and prescribed it in my practice for the past six years. I use it in cases of pneumonia and have always gotten the best results. Sold by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton; A. Horn, Thorsby.

Caution about the Use and Selection of Spectacles

"Persons having normal vision will be able to read this print at a distance of 16 inches from the eyes with ease and comfort; also will be able to read it with each eye separately. If unable to do so your eyes are defective and should have immediate attention. When the eyes become tired from reading or sewing, or if the letters look blurred and run together, it is a sure indication that glasses are needed. The lenses used in the cheap grade are of inferior quality and have unpleasantly formed surfaces. Continued use of these lenses must will result in serious injury from the unnatural strain upon the muscles of accommodation to supply the defects in the glasses."

Come to see me if you need a pair of Glasses. I have the latest instrument for testing the eyes.

BLACK-DRAUGHT STOCK and POULTRY MEDICINE

Stock and poultry have few troubles which are not bowel and liver irregularities. Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine is a bowel and liver remedy for stock. It puts the organs of digestion in a perfect condition. Prominent American breeders and farmers keep their herds and flocks healthy by giving them an occasional dose of Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine in their food. Any stock raiser may buy a 25-cent half-pound air-tight can of this medicine from his dealer and keep his stock in vigorous health for weeks. Dealers generally keep Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine. If yours does not, send 25 cents for a sample can to the manufacturers. The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

IN MEMORIAM

On the 10th inst at six p m the beautiful gates ajar, swung open for select angels to pass. Yes they came to accompany the sweet soul of Mrs Mary Motes back to the realms of joy and love with friends and all that heaven means. This estimable woman was universally loved in all her walks of every day life that all would catch the inspiration of her lovable sweet disposition. The writer has known her for years, and was by her side many times during her last lingering, suffering illness. Not a murmur nor a complaint was heard by her. Mrs Motes was in her 73d year and had been a devoted member of the Baptist church a great number of years. She leaves a dear, broken husband and one daughter to mourn for her precious presence. The church and her old community will miss her more because she was such a noble, dear one with such a pure record. Her son-in-law, Mr B M Gentry, says after thirty years close acquaintance, he never saw her angry. He had much more on memory's roll which he will cherish through life.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

THE NECESSARY MAGAZINE IN THE PRESIDENTIAL YEAR

The Review of Reviews is often called a necessity, in recognition of its usefulness in keeping readers "up with the times."

In Presidential election years the REVIEW OF REVIEWS is more than ever "the necessary magazine." Everybody wants to be truly and quickly informed about this or that public question that has forged to the front; to know about the new candidates and personal factors in politics, to have a complete picture at hand of the current movement of history.

In Dr. Shaw's editorials, in its authentic and timely contributed articles, in its brilliant character sketches, in its condensations and reviews of all the important articles of other magazines, and in its hundred a month of valuable portraits, witty cartoons, and interesting views, the REVIEW OF REVIEWS gives the much desired News of the world's and our own progress. "The World under a Field-glass" is the way one subscriber describes it.

Men in public life, like President Theodore Roosevelt, the members of Congress, and the great captains of industry, who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided it is "indispensable."

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

Pretty things, prettily arranged, and pretty girls admiring them, was what marked the spring open ...ing of the millinery department at P. D. Wilson's. The entire floor upstairs was given over to Miss Clara Small for the disylay of milli...ery, and the artistic arrangement reflects great credit upon that young lady. Around the room flowers were arranged in profusion, and the fairy-like creations, com...monly known as ladies' hats, were something to marvel at, but not for masculine hands to touch. I didn't dare touch them, all I could do was to gaze in rapture and wonder how on earth the ladies ever manage to wear them. Fashion is a wonder...ful thing, and twice a year—Spring and Fall—fashion decrees there shall be a change of style, hence these semi-annual displays The strains of music added enjoyment to the scene, and (this is a secret, don't tell it) I noticed several little feet gently beating time, as if it would not take much persuasion to start them dancing.

In consequence of the appoint...ment of J. Osmond Middleton, mayor elect of Clanton, to the office of county solicitor, a special election was held on Tuesday and Judson Strock was elected mayor by a ma...jority of 36 over J. P. Vanderveer. The municipal affairs of the town are not by any means what they might be, and it is hoped the new mayor will exert himself to the ut...most to improve this condition. There are some things demanded by our citizens which can be easily accomplished by the mayor and council, and which would redound to the advantage of the town. Mr. Strock is a good man, and we have a good board of aldermen, and the town expects all that is possible from them.

Last Saturday I went down to Tallassee on a visit to friends and there met several of the candidates of Elmore county. They were as nice a set of candidates as can be found anywhere and we had a good time generally, but I am going to tell you more about Tallassee next week. At night a meeting was held at the city hall and the first speaker was Col. Wm. A. Collier, who made an able speech as a can...didat for Judge of the circuit court, which was well received. In fact, he seemed to take well with the people of Elmore, and as the senti...ment there appears to be in favor of the Chilton county candidate his prospects are bright. Messrs. Tate and Holley also made lively talks, as did several other candidates, and J. L. McKenzie, the most popular man in East Elmore, presided.

The preliminary trial of the six men charged with assault with at...tempt to murder was held before Justice of the Peace E. B. Deason on Tuesday. Only witnesses were examined in the case of W. B. Smith, and the trial was continued until April 1. From last reports Mr. Clifton was doing as well as could be expected.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[We are willing to publish our subscribers views at any time, but it must be distinctly understood we do not hold ourselves responsible for these opinions.—EDITOR.]

Cooper, March 15, 1904

Editor Banner—As you were kind enough to spare me a little space in the columns of your valu...able paper last week, I came again this week with a similar request.

Our farmers are very busy this fine weather preparing land, plant...ing corn, etc.

Politics are taking rank hold on us down here. Every Democrat in Beat 10 will cast a vote for Col. A. C. Smith on the 11th of April, which I think will be right, because Col. Smith is a high toned gentle...man, an ultra Democrat, and has advocated Democracy and did not backslide and join another party seeking office, and then came back to the Democratic party seeking office. Col. Smith is not so fortu...nate as a subscriber said by 'Lige, he was not born in Chilton, but he came here as soon as he was large enough to cross Coosa river. Suc...cess to the Banner.

NEW SUBSCRIBER.

Leon, Ala., March 19, 1904

Editor Banner—After drawing out of the black game chicken and blue stem collard business I will write you from this part of God's creation. Things are very well up to date here. It seems to be a good farming country, I judge from the amount we have to eat. I have not been here but one week today and as my mind still won...ders back to the mountains and of days passed and gone, when I sit such days as today and read the Banner. So I hope I will not be imposing on her pages to ask space again for my letter.

I have not spent but little time at any one place since I left the rocks and hills north of where I sit today. Well, I have been doing the most of my traveling over land, so I have just returned to Alabama from a five day's voyage on the water, and got so low down in the country, till I felt like I was below par with anything. Well, our craft tucked the main land at Ferry Pass, Fla., seven miles from Pen...sacola and four or five miles to railroad, but I was not long in making that distance, and the first train northeast I was one of its pas...sengers back to my old State, and $4.90 brought me here, and as spring is opening I can't tell how long I will stay. From what I saw last Sunday there is a good chance for me to get in the garden and poultry business here.

DICK.

Randolph, March 22, 1904

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your valuable paper to say a few words in behalf of our home candidate for Tax Collector, Mr. J. C. Veazey. Having known him all my life I will say he is an honest, high toned Christian gentleman and has done a great good as a teacher of music. His presence is highly appreciated at the churches where he has taught school. He is greatly admired by all lovers of music. I feel sure if he is elected he will make fully as good Tax Col...lector as he has a teacher of music. I think the people of Chilton will do well to consider Mr. Veazey and cast their votes for him on April 11.

M. C. CRUMPTON.

Lily, March 21, 1904

Editor Banner—I saw an article from this place two weeks ago, and also one from Marion, Ala., in regard to E. B. Deason, which I fully endorse. I have known 'Lige all of his life and knew his parents years before 'Lige was born, and can say without the least fear of contradiction that the records of both he and his parents are without spot or blemish. 'Lige was left when quite young with a widowed mother and a brother and sister to care for, and he was very weak physically and labored under great disadvantages financially. But his his courage and vim was equal to the occasion and he braved the circumstances like a man, worked hard, thereby making a support for the family, and by self denial and hard study acquired a fair edu...cation. Later on he was elected Circuit Clerk, which office he has filled with credit to both himself and county, and now why not say to our honest home raised boy, it is enough, come up higher and reap a reward of your labors. Yes, let us say this to him by voting for him for Judge of Probate on the 11th day of April, 1904.

Today it is with a light and merry heart that I undertake to write to the Banner again, and if I write too much, dear Editor, just cut my let...ter off some. Spring is opening up very fast. Farmers are very busy in their farms; trees are budding and the little birds are whistling their pretty songs, and that indi...cates spring time. There is a great deal of sickness in our community at present. The farmers are a little behind with their work. These bright days indicate corn planting time

GONE HOME.

The angel of death, with its cold icy arms, visited the home of Mr. Oscar Bates, Feb 26, 1904, and took away his loving wife. Mollie was sick about seven weeks. She was buried at Mount Carmel cemetery. She was a devoted wife and fond mother. She leaves a husband and two little children to mourn her absence. Remember the Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. Our loss is her eternal gain. She was a friend to all, none knew her that didn't love her. We can't comfort these mourning ones and can only extend sympathy and commend them to the love and mercy of Him who doeth all things well. He alone can calm the waves of sorrow and bring peace and com...fort to the aching hearts. Your loved one is gone from you, gone to sing praises with the redeemed. Her sufferings are all over.

To you sorrowing ones live as she lived, righteous unto the end. And when the death angel calls for you you will find her at the shining gate to welcome you home.

Mollie now enjoys the glories of heaven.

The Depth of Sympathy.

The golf story ought, perhaps, to be laid away on the high shelf, but a new one comes from England by way of Tit Bits, so true to the seriousness of golf in human affairs as to express the sport forever.

A golfer who was playing about the links noticed the ragged condition of his caddie. Touched at his poverty, the good man gave the boy money to get food with and promised him a suit of clothes. Some time later, hearing that the lad's mother was dependent on him, he despatched a load of coal and a round of beef.

The lad was grateful for all this kindness, and with tears in his eyes tried to express his gratitude.

"Please, sir—"

"Oh, that's all right, my boy!" said the benefactor, cheerily. "Say nothing about it."

The caddie could no longer restrain himself. The kindly thought which lay at the bottom of his heart broke through.

"Please, sir," he cried, "I'm sorry you're such a bad player!"

HON. C. W. THOMPSON

Died Sunday in Washington of Pneumonia

Representative Charles Winston Thompson, of the Fifth Alabama district, died Sunday afternoon. His younger son, C. W. Thompson, Jr., who has been visiting his father during the present session of congress, was the only member of his family with him at the time. The remains will be carried to his home in Tuskegee and the interment will take place Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Thompson died of toxaemia, a blood poisoning, due from a virulent form of pneumonia resulting from grip. There was little hope for him Friday and Saturday. He was taken sick a week ago and gradually grew worse.

Mr. Thompson was absolutely without hope. He seemed to have a premonition that his illness would result fatally. Before he became critically ill he told his friend, Representative Wiley, that he was seriously ill and feared the worst would result. Mr. Thompson's mind was perfectly clear until Sunday morning. He then became delirious and did not recover consciousness.

The house will adjourn Monday out of respect to the late representative. Representative Wiley will present a resolution reciting that the house has learned with profound regret of the death of Representative Thompson, and asking that in the future a day be set apart in which proper respect may be paid to his memory.

General regret is expressed over Mr. Thompson's death. He had made many strong personal friends in the house and during his illness constant inquiries were made at his hotel about his condition. He was in all respects a self-made man, succeeding in life by his own energetic effort. He was a very successful business man and is reputed to have been very wealthy.

Charles W. Thompson, democrat, of Tuskegee, was born in Macon county, near Tuskegee, Ala., December 30, 1860; was educated in the common schools of the county, at the Park Hill high school at Tuskegee, Ala., and at Bryant & Stratton's Business college at Louisville, Ky.; was appointed by Governor Joseph F. Johnston in 1896 a member of his staff as lieutenant colonel, and served in that capacity until the end of his term; was a member of the Methodist church, president of the Bank of Tuskegee; was county superintendent of education for Macon county from 1886 to 1888, and 1898 was chosen without opposition to represent the Twenty-sixth senatorial district in the senate of Alabama; was elected to the Fifty-seventh congress and was re-elected to the Fifty-eighth congress, of which he was the sixth member to die.

Mr. Thompson was a widower, his wife was Miss Estelle Alley, of Tuskegee, and died about fifteen years ago. He is survived by two sons, Ernest W. Thompson, editor of the Tuskegee News, and Charles W. Thompson, Jr., one of his secretaries, and also by his mother.

The postoffice, the military academy and the sundry appropriation bills constitute the work mapped out for the house this week. The week in the senate will be devoted almost entirely to appropriation bills, beginning on Tuesday with that for the District of Columbia and following with the Indian and pension bills.

Thus, more room is made for the Anglo-Saxons."

The foreign consuls at New Chwang officially notify their governments that the Russian commander of the garrison has forbidden foreigners to go beyond the mud walls of the native city with the single exception that they are allowed to use the river bank between the foreign settlement and the foreign gunboats. This exception is made on account of the presence of the United States gunboat Helena and the British cruiser Espiegle, which otherwise would be entirely cut off from communication with their respective settlements.

The Japs have just finished a submarine boat intended to blow up men-of-war in icebound harbors. The boat can travel under the arctic ice, then rise to the surface and act the part of a torpedo, to again vanish before the enemy can realize what struck him. The vessel is on the order of an electric submarine boat, airtight and sealed, that can be raised and depressed at will. On the whole, the vessel combines the qualifications of a submarine or diving vessel with those of a torpedo boat.

Augustus Libby and Cornelius Hoff, Jewish merchants at Vladivostock, received twenty-four hours' notice from the Russian military authorities to leave the country. They had to abandon their business, sell out at a sacrifice, and travel by sleds more than a thousand miles to the nearest port on the Korean coast. No sooner had they gotten into Korea than they encountered the special service officers of the Japanese war department and they were in more trouble, their story not being accepted.

No Race This Year.

The New York Yacht Club has replied to the letter of Sir Thomas Lipton, in which the Irish baronet asked if the club would accept a challenge for a race for the America's cup under the new rule of measurement of the club. This letter was received early in January and acknowledged, but it was not deemed of sufficient importance to call a special meeting of the club for its consideration, as no challenge could be accepted for a race this year. Sir Thomas practically asked the club to bar the Reliance, Constitution and Columbia from participating in future races for the cup. These boats could not be used as defenders because the present rules of the club limit the draught of any boat to eighteen feet and these three draw twenty each.

New Steel Company.

Articles of incorporation of the Pacific Steel company are filed. The company is capitalized at $100,000,000, of which $50,000,000, all preferred stock, has already been subscribed. The directorate includes Charles W. French, of Cleveland, O., and California capitalists. The object of the corporation is said to be the construction of warships, steamships, locomotives and cars and the making of armor plate. The contract for the construction of the plant to cost $30,000,000, has been awarded.

Sugar consumption in the United States is steadily increasing. In 1881 it was 993,532 tons, ten years later it was 1,872,400 tons and in 1901 had reached 2,372,416 tons.

W. T. Allison, who lives about 15 miles from Selma, had his store, ware house, corn crib and stables burned. The entire stock of goods—in fact, all of the property enumerated—was a total loss. He did not have any insurance whatever on the property and the loss will amount to about $5,000.

Work at the Alabama Steel and Wire Company's plant is progressing so nicely that they are confident that they will be making steel by the 1st of June.

SULLY, COTTON KING, FAILS

The Bull Operator in Futures Smashed by Bears.

PANIC FOLLOWS HIS SUSPENSION

Daniel J. Sully, the Most Spectacular Figure in the Commodity Markets Since the Days of Joe Leiter, Has Gone to the Wall—Cotton Holdings Estimated at From $24,000,000 to $36,000,000.

New York City.—The suspension of Daniel J. Sully & Co., whose operations on the cotton market have been the most powerful influence there for two years, was announced on the Cotton Exchange and caused a panic. The wildly fluctuating character of the market earlier in the day had made cotton traders apprehensive of some catastrophe, but the announcement came as a surprise and dealt a staggering blow to a market which had already declined nearly three cents a pound in the last four days.

Sully was supposed to be carrying from 200,000 to 400,000 bales of cotton for future delivery. The value of this vast amount would be from $8,000,000 to $36,000,000. Sully's selling since the first of the year has been to bull prices up to a high level, and keep them there till the fulfilment of his contracts. The general belief on the Exchange was that a number of powerful spot dealers, resenting the artificial prices created by Sully, had united to smash him.

On the announcement of his failure the May option dropped from 14.32 to 12.65; July dropped from 14.82 to 12.75, and August went down to an even twelve cents.

As May and July were both selling at 16.65 on Monday, it will be seen that this was a drop of 400 points, or four cents a pound in four days.

Spot cotton, which had been selling at 14.93, dropped suddenly to 13.22.

After the first excitement of the panic had worn off, there was a rally of about 100 points all around.

Daniel J. Sully is considered by many the most spectacular figure that ever entered the cotton pit in this city. He came here from Providence something over a year ago. His rise was rapid, and in six weeks he rose from being a comparatively unknown man to have a national reputation.

It was not until he had passed his fortieth birthday that he began his wonderful career of speculation. He was born on March 9, 1861, at Providence, R. I., of Yankee stock that had not made any great impression in the financial world. A few months ago fabulous estimates of the millions of dollars of profits that he was supposed to have taken from his colossal bull speculation in cotton were made. He was not supposed to be operating alone, but who his biggest associates were Wall Street and the cotton district only guessed.

SUBMARINE BOAT LOST.

Lieutenant Mansergh and Ten Men Drowned.

Portsmouth, England.—The British submarine boat No. A 1 was run down and sunk off the Nab lightship by a Donald Currie liner and eleven persons were drowned, including Lieutenant Mansergh, the senior officer engaged in submarine work. The liner passed on and reported that she had struck a torpedo.

At the time she was struck the vessel was off the lightship, engaged in the maneuvres, and was lying in seven fathoms of water, waiting the approach of a battleship.

The boat was one of the newest of the fleet of submarine vessels, and was built from the latest models, but she has always been a bad diver. She was inspected recently by King Edward and the Prince of Wales.

The name of the liner which struck the submarine boat is the Berwick Castle; from East London, South Africa.

TWO HELD FOR MILLER MURDER

Jury Names Dr. Smith as Principal and Mrs. Miller as Accessory.

St. Louis, Mo.—Dr. Warren J. Smith was held by the Coroner's jury at Sikeston for the murder of Harry Miller. Mrs. Miller, formerly Miss Lydia Spieldoch, of St. Louis, Miller's bride of less than eight weeks, was held as accessory.

The jury found that Miller came to his death from morphine poisoning, administered by Dr. Warren Smith as principal and Mrs. Lydia Miller as accessory.

Immediately after the verdict had been announced Mrs. Miller was arrested and taken before a justice of the peace for preliminary examination. She waived a preliminary trial and was held in $5000 bail. Dr. Smith also waived examination. He furnished $10,000 bail.

He was taken from Lynchburg to Roanoke under military protection. Williams confessed the crime and also to the murder of a white woman in East Liverpool, O., and another in Pennsylvania.

JAPANESE FORCE WIPED OUT

United States Cruiser Reports Encounter North of Pingyang.

A RUSSIAN DESTROYER LOST

Japanese Army of 70,000 Troops, Under General Kuroki, Occupies Northern Korea—Four Chinese and Two Japanese Hanged as Spies at Port Arthur—Russia Has 230,000 Men Near Harbin.

Shanghai.—The United States cruiser Cincinnati, arriving here from Chemulpo, where it landed American refugees from Northern Korea, brings a circumstantial report of an encounter between 300 Russians and 250 Japanese north of Pingyang, in which the Japanese were annihilated.

The Japanese forces are now advancing from Chemulpo and the first corps of fighting line, numbering 17,000 men, has crossed the Yalu.

The Russians are strong in the Yalu district, having 70,000 men out of Korea proper, and are fortifying the north bank of the Yalu, preparatory to standing a siege. This indicates that the first great battles of the war will be fought in Korea and not in Manchuria.

Newspaper correspondents are not permitted to go more than fifteen miles north of Pingyang, and then they must have licenses from the Tokio War Office. Two American correspondents, found twenty miles north of Pingyang, have been sent back to Seoul.

Besides the advancing army, the Japanese are constantly landing more troops at Chinnampho, forty miles from Pingyang, and at Chemulpo.

RUSSIAN DESTROYER LOST.

The Skori Sunk by a Mine Laid by the Japanese Off Port Arthur.

Chefoo.—The Russian torpedo boat destroyer Skori, while under way near Port Arthur, struck a mine and was blown up and sunk. Only four of her crew of some fifty men were saved.

The Skori was of the newest pattern. She was launched in 1902. It is assumed generally that the mine which destroyed her was laid by the Japanese on the night of March 9, but even if it was an uncharted Russian mine, the disaster is likely to be equally demoralizing, especially when the destruction of the transport Yenesei is recalled.

Spies Hanged by Russians.

London.—A dispatch from Chefoo says that, according to private advices from Russian sources, the greatest anxiety prevails at Port Arthur. Despite the utmost vigilance, the place is infested with spies, who are constantly betraying information to the Japanese.

Four Chinese and two Japanese were caught during the last bombardment signaling to the Japanese fleet. They were promptly hanged.

A letter from Port Arthur puts the garrison at less than 5000 men, but says there are 30,000 troops on the whole peninsula. Provision trains arrive hourly. The railway is intact.

Japanese Troops in Korea.

Paris.—The Tokio correspondent of the Matin sends the following information concerning the Japanese military situation up to March 10, which he says comes from a sure source:

"The first army of 70,000 troops, under General Kuroki, occupies Northern Korea. The brigade landed at Gensan forms part of the second army of similar strength. The mobilization of the latter has been completed.

After the first landing a small expeditionary force landed at Haiju. It pressed on and seized Pingyang. It was followed there by troops who landed at Chemulpo. This force was sufficient to secure a strategic front against a possible advance of the Russians from the Yalu River.

These troops had terrible weather, rain being followed by frost and then by a blizzard. The infantry, however, marched twenty-five miles a day, each man carrying nearly 100 pounds. They did well, bivouacing mostly in Korean villages.

Covered by this force, a larger force is now disembarking within easier distance of the objective, while it is reported that preparations for disembarkation are also being made at the only practicable port on the east coast of Korea.

The weather is intensely cold, but the troops are being immediately pushed forward and are bivouacked with their animals in the open, and sleep in turns in Korean houses, which are warm, though dirty. Everything requisitioned is paid for, but at present the army is independent of the resources of the country.

Russia's Army 230,000 Men.

Russian Girl Forced to Marry Man Chosen for Her.

Tatyana Yusupova, an unusually handsome Kirghiz girl of seventeen, presented herself, a few days ago, before the presiding judge at the District court in Astrakhan with the following prayer:

As an infant of 5 years she had been betrothed by her father to the ten-year-old son of a neighbor, the father acting according to Kirghiz custom. The young man now claims his bride, and although the latter loves another young tribesman she is held by both parent and bridegroom to her infantile betrothal. The weeping girl prayed the judge to extend to her the right of Russian law to choose her own husband.

After a careful reference to the code the judge ruled that as the Russian law gave the fullest freedom of religious and moral rites and customs to the non-orthodox subjects of the czar, the father's power was paramount, and the disconsolate girl's appeal was refused.

There is at present no available information as to how the ladies have conquered the constitutional aversion to the tiny rodents, but the fact remains that even in the most fashionable circles ladies are the possessors of valuable mouseries and have succeeded in evolving some beautiful specimens of the house tribe.—English Exchange.

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

AN ELOQUENT DISCOURSE BY THE REV. C. L. PALMER.

Subject: "Why the Righteous Suffer and the Ungodly Prosper"—God Permits Afflictions to Come Upon His People as a Character Test.

KINGSTON, N. Y.—In the Reformed Church of the Comforter on Sunday morning the Rev. C. L. Palmer preached a scholarly discourse entitled "Why the Righteous Suffer and the Ungodly Prosper." He took his text from Psalm 73: 3: "For I was envious at the arrogant, when I saw the prosperity of the wicked."

The Seventy-third Psalm was probably composed by Asaph, who was a pious Jew, and one of the leaders of the temple chorus. The phraseology and contents indicate that he was intelligent and spiritual, and that in the course of his religious experience was exposed to the ravages of doubt. However, upon mature deliberation all doubt was overcome, and he became strong in the faith.

The particular problem that confused him was why the righteous suffer and the ungodly prosper. Why the most vicious criminal should enjoy material prosperity and consecrated disciples be subjected to suffering. If God is perfectly righteous in Himself, and supremely just in all His dealings with men, why does He allow the ungodly to succeed and the believer to fail? Why does He not obliterate every sinner and preserve every saint? Why does He permit the godly to pass through so many deep and raging seas of affliction? Why are many of the Christless so free from human misery? These are questions which have been fresh in the mind of every generation, and the only satisfactory answer is the one that sufficed the psalmist.

Before undertaking to develop so important a subject it is necessary that we divest our minds of one possible misconception. The implication of the text is not that all the wicked prosper, and that all the righteous are afflicted. It is not that all the ungodly prosper because they are ungodly, or that all believers are afflicted because they are believers. It is not true that all the worldly enjoy success, and all the righteous are discontented, unhappy and unsuccessful. The psalmist was in a pessimistic mood at the time of writing, and describes a condition from which he was eventually extricated. It is true that some godless men and women seem to be happy and prosperous, and that some devoted disciples are greatly afflicted. But it is far from the natural deduction of Scripture and experience that all the godly are unsuccessful and the wicked prosperous, though we do acknowledge that the ancient sentiment of the text is not without its modern application. We still wonder why the unrighteous prosper and the godly are afflicted.

I. WHY THE UNGODLY ENJOY TEMPORAL PROSPERITY.

We cannot deny that many worldly people have an abundance of life's blessings, and that they appear to be quite free from adversity. It is well known that many of our most wealthy people seem to be indifferent to religion. They spend their time and means either in business or seeking pleasure. Our contention is that human success or failure is not an infallible criterion by which we are to justify or condemn the government of God.

It is not uncommon for godless people to inherit property. Nor is it unusual for unbelieving parents to leave an inheritance to their children. That while there has been utter indifference to Christianity there has been no want of concern in the accumulation of wealth. And many possess a disinterested temperament that protects them from needless care and anxiety.

Unbelievers are often more shrewd than Christians. "The children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light." A life of utter absorption in the accumulation and management of money develops an acumen, one who readily discovers whatever will contribute to his personal and temporal advancement. And since we are free moral agents it is possible for one to succeed in the direction of his ambition.

Unbelievers are often less scrupulous. They will do many things for temporal comfort that others will not. A godless mortal will keep a saloon or a gambling den, from which the profits are very large. He will desecrate the Sabbath or violate any of the divine laws without hesitation so long as his personal interest is encouraged. His motto is "eat, drink and be merry, for to-morrow we die." Would a reborn soul and heir of the kingdom do the same? A true disciple of the Great Teacher would not consciously transgress any civil or religious requirement, even if by such a violation he would increase his means and comfort.

The attention of unbelievers is more concentrated on the accumulation of wealth and on personal comfort. It is about all many think of. They think about money when they retire. They dream about it at night. It is upon their minds when they awake in the morning, and they labor for it during the day. It is the only desire they have, and it is not strange that they should obtain it.

Christians are unwilling to deprive themselves of the comfort and blessing of giving. Our churches are supported by the professed followers of Christ. All the philanthropic and charitable organizations are largely sustained by those who bear the Christian name. The church has great reason to thank God for those who give so liberally toward her support, while the world is either hoarding or wasting its means, they are applying their gifts to the social, intellectual, moral and eternal improvement of others.

The long suffering of God is not to be ignored. God permits ungodly people to obtain the desire of their hearts. The sneering jest of Dionysius, the younger, a tyrant of Sicily, when, after having robbed the Temple of Syracuse, he had a prosperous voyage with the plunder is well known. See you not, said he, to those who were with him, how the gods favor the sacrilegious? The interpretation of the incident was from the standpoint of a heathen. God simply permitted him to escape.

Doubtless the ungodly are allowed to prosper, in order to test and prove the righteous. It is a test for the faithful but unfortunate to see some godless mortal carried on the sea of prosperity. But it is a test that we are abundantly able to sustain. Socrates, being asked what would be vexatious to good men, replied, the prosperity of the bad. What would vex the bad? the prosperity of the good. It is not and cannot be made to appear incompatible with the perfection of God's government that the ungodly should have a measure of material prosperity.

II. WHY THE RIGHTEOUS HAVE ADVERSITY.

Having admitted that the ungodly often enjoy temporal prosperity, it remains to acknowledge that the righteous are frequently subjected to the greatest suffering of body and mind, and if possible to ascertain the cause. Not all are greatly affected, though it is very likely that every heart sustains some burden.

Even our limited knowledge of the Scriptures and imperfect religious experiences enable us to understand why believers are often afflicted. It seems as if some were destined to be unfortunate. Everything they undertake fails, and the harder they labor the more they are disappointed. We utterly repudiate the doctrine of fate, but find ourselves confronted with the fact that some seem to be creatures of misfortune.

Many of life's adversities are brought upon ourselves. We may accuse others or even God, but in our inner consciousness find ourselves confronted with the conviction that we have been the cause of our own suffering. A man who attempted to steal wheat from an elevator brought down an avalanche of the staff of life which smothered him to death. He had transgressed the law and brought upon himself destruction.

Some of life's adversities are brought upon us by others. The social fabric is so closely woven that even one thread cannot be broken without weakening the whole. So we suffer for the deeds of others. A bank official absconds with the funds of the institution and many lose all they possess. One partner defrauds another and throws him into bankruptcy. The President is assassinated, his family broken hearted and the nation and world in mourning. An intoxicated father destroys the life of his child and the family never recover from the shock.

Unquestionably God permits afflictions to come upon His people. Adversity is required as well as prosperity. If it were not for the former we should become indifferent to the latter, and forget the source from which all blessings come. Prosperity is a more severe and refined test of character than adversity, as one hour of summer sunshine produces greater corruption than the longest winter's day. India with her famine is more to be envied than ancient Rome with her fatal apoplexy of wealth. Better grace with scarcity than plenty without saving salt.

We believe that God sometimes sends affliction to bring His children back to Himself. He takes away the idol of some heart that He may be the only object of adoration. He sweeps away houses and lands to teach His people that they are dependent on Him. One has excruciating pain to teach him the frailty of the body and the certainty of its ultimate dissolution. Spurgeon used to say that many are like boys' tops, they only spin when they are whipped.

There is a famous fairy tale in Bradwardine that will convey to our minds the interpretation that we ought to apply to the sublime doctrine of providence. A certain hermit resolved that he would travel from place to place until he found some one who could offer a satisfactory explanation of the government of God. As he was passing along on his contemplated journey an angel in the form of a man joined him. The first night they lodged at the house of a very holy man, and they spent their time in praising God and conversing upon divine things. In the morning, when they departed the angel took with him a cup of solid gold. The second night they came to the home of another religious man by whom they were most hospitably entertained. In the home they had an infant upon whom their affection centered. When they left the next morning the angel destroyed the life of the child. The third night they were entertained in a home of great wealth. When they left the following morning the angel killed the favorite steward. The last night was at the home of a godless man, to whom he gave the cup of gold as the angel left. After the fourth night the hermit asked the angel to explain why he had taken the cup and given it to another, why he had taken two lives. He replied, I will now explain. The first man was being ruined by his cup, so I took it away. The second home was more concerned in regard to the child than in the service of God. The steward was slain to preserve the life of his master whom he was plotting to destroy. The golden cup was given to the ungodly man because his only comfort was to be had here. Or in other and inspired words: "All things work together for good."

All ostensible prosperity is not true prosperity. The prosperity of the world is greatly overestimated. Some godless men succeed in certain particulars, but they have not that which is worth more than the treasures of Egypt. They are poor spiritually. They cannot purchase at the market the one great need of the soul.

The adversity of the righteous is also overestimated. They do suffer, they expect to suffer and are willing to suffer if such suffering will contribute toward justification. But it is better to be in moderate circumstances and be in the kingdom, than to roll in wealth and be outside of it. It is better to be in the kingdom with pain than out of it without.

There is only one just conclusion. It is that the government of God is perfectly just and that we are safe in its keeping. A child once said, I know that the criminal will obtain justice because my father is the judge. We know that we shall have prosperity and adversity. We know that we shall have justice because our heavenly Father is the Judge.

Peril of the Tongue.

"Not that which entereth into the mouth defileth the man; but that which proceedeth out of the mouth, this defileth the man." It makes a vital and an eternal difference to us how we express ourselves. A man is in greater danger of self-destruction by speaking than by eating. Formerly many French words were in common use by the Germans, but now the Emperor's influence is toward the substitution of German terms for the French—the idea being that, as the people speak, so they will become. This is supposed to beget a higher and more solid patriotic or national spirit—as, other things being equal, it must. Statesmen perceive this truth in the bottom principle enunciated by Jesus, and thus apply it. But in our individual lives we often forget to act on it. It harms us to think evil; it harms us even more to say what we think. It is for this reason that silence is so often golden. But it is also on the same general principle that it is worth while to speak a pleasant word—if we can do no more.—Sunday-School Times.

How to Get Warm.

Warmth is a sign of life. That it is also a very desirable part of our comfort is realized by many a one who reluctantly leaves a warm bed, and shiveringly meets the winter's cold, indoors or out, these winter mornings. If there is an open fire or a heater near by, it is a great temptation to try to get warm by taking in all the heat we can get from such a source. But some have learned a better way. They shun heat from other sources and make it for themselves. By brisk exercise of their own bodies, by the healthy, shock of a cold sponge, by an energetic walk before taking the car, they make and give out warmth, and the cold demon is routed. And this is the better way in all spheres. Created warmth is better than borrowed warmth. Your own smile of greeting to another will bring more warmth into your life than you can get by depending on another's. Your own loving word, your own unselfish act, brisk and unhesitating, with perhaps its healthy shock as of a cold sponge, will set your spiritual circulation to tingling in a way that will warm you to the core. Try it some cold day.

The offer of Andrew Carnegie to provide funds for a union engineering building as a home for the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, American Institute of Mining Engineers, American Institute of Electrical Engineers and engineers' clubs of New York having been accepted, Mr. Carnegie has placed at the disposal of these societies and the club the sum of $1,500,000 for that purpose. These recipients have provided a site on which the erection of a building, probably twelve stories in height, will be begun July 1st.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR MARCH 27.

Review of the First Quarter—Read Luke ii., 40-52; iv., 14-30—Golden Text, Matt. iv., 23—Topic, "The Mighty Works of Jesus."

Introduction. During the quarter we have studied the life of Christ from His youth to the beginning of the third year of His public ministry. The first year is called the year of obscurity, because of the little recorded about Him. The second year is the year of His greatest popularity, while the third year is the year of opposition and death. His popularity reached its height at the time of the miracle of feeding the five thousand.

Lesson I. Topic: Jesus among the doctors. Place: Nazareth and Jerusalem. Jesus grew and became strong, like other children. At the age of twelve He went with His parents to the feast of the Passover. When they start on the return trip the child is left behind. Found in the temple with the doctors of the law, asking and answering questions. All were astonished. His parents gently reprove Him. He tells them He must be about His Father's business. Returns with them to Nazareth.

II. Topic: Preparing the way of the Lord. Place: The wilderness of Judea. Tiberius Cæsar, Roman Emperor. Pilate, Governor of Judea. Herod, tetrarch of Galilee, Annas and Caiaphas, high priests. John preached in the wilderness, baptized in Jordan, preached repentance, insisted that they bring forth fruits unto repentance, a thorough reformation required of all, pointed to the Messiah.

III. Topic: Jesus overcoming Satan. Place: Mount Quarantania. Jesus goes from Nazareth in Galilee to be baptized of John. John shrinks from such a step; Jesus urges it. Is baptized. The heavens are opened, the Spirit descends like a dove upon Him, voice from heaven. Led into the wilderness, fasts forty days and nights; afterward hungers, is tempted by Satan. 1. Command stones to be made bread. 2. Cast thyself down. 3. Worship Me.

IV. Topic: Christ and His gospel. Place: Nazareth. Jesus is in the synagogue on the Sabbath day. Reads from Isa. 61: 1, 2; applies the scripture to Himself. He can save the poor, the broken hearted the captives, the blind, the bruised. Any question regarding His holy birth. He cannot heal there because He is not received; justifies His course by Elijah and Elisha; they think He puts them lower than the heathen, try to kill Him. He escapes.

V. Topic: The miraculous draught of fishes. Place: On the Sea of Galilee. Jesus walking by the Sea of Galilee, the people pressed upon Him. He entered into Peter's boat and taught them while they stood on the land, commanded Simon to "launch out into the deep" for a draught. Simon said they had toiled all night and caught nothing, but he obeyed Christ's word; a great multitude of fishes inclosed, the net was breaking, and Peter beckoned to James and John to come to their assistance, both ships were filled until they began to sink, the disciples were astonished at the miracle. They left all and followed Christ.

VI. Topic: Christ healing diseases. Place: Capernaum. Jesus is in the synagogue on the Sabbath day. Teaches the people; they are astonished at His doctrine; an unclean spirit cries out; Jesus casts him out; fame spread abroad; at Peter's house; mother-in-law healed; when the sun was down the diseased and those possessed with devils were brought to Him, and He healed them all and cast out the devils. He "suffered not the devils to speak." Jesus is not dependent upon the testimony of devils to carry on His work or to prove His divinity. There is no concord between Christ and Belial (2 Cor. 6: 14-16.)

VII. Topic: Christ's power to heal and save. Place: Capernaum. Jesus is probably at Peter's house; a great crowd at the door; a paralytic brought and carried to the roof; the roof torn up; the bed let down; Jesus saw their faith; "Thy sins be forgiven thee," the scribes reason; He speaketh blasphemies; Jesus answers them; which is easier to say, Arise, or thy sins be forgiven? The cure; the people amazed. They glorify God, saying, "We never saw it on this fashion." They saw that none but God could perform such a wonderful cure and they were filled with reverence and fear. The divinity of our Lord is here fully established.

VIII. Topic: Reasoning about the Sabbath. Place: Capernaum. While Jesus and His disciples were walking through a field of grain on the Sabbath day, the disciples plucked the grain and ate it to satisfy their hunger; the Pharisees found fault; Jesus justified their course by referring to David's act in eating the show bread, and to the priests who were obliged to work on the Sabbath; He healed a man with a withered hand; they would hit a sheep out of a pit on the Sabbath day, and a man is better than a sheep.

IX. Topic: True and false religion. Place: The Mount of Beatitudes, or the "Horns of Hattin." After a night of prayer and after choosing His twelve apostles, Jesus preached the Sermon on the Mount to His disciples and the assembled crowds. In this lesson He shows that mere profession is not sufficient; we must be doers of the word and not hearers only; the one who hears and does is likened to a wise man who built his house on a rock and when the storms came it stood; the one who hears and fails to do is like a foolish man, who built on the sand, and when the storms came his house fell.

X. Topic: The power and authority of Christ. Place: Jesus and His disciples are crossing the Sea of Galilee. Jesus is asleep; a great storm arises; they awake Christ and appeal to Him to save them; He arises, rebukes the wind and says unto the sea, Peace be still, and there is a great calm; He gently reproves them for their weak faith; they are astonished at Christ and the wonderful miracle. Let all learn to have faith in God.

XI. Topic: Herod's great crime. Place: Macherus. The death of John occurred about the time the twelve returned. Herod Antipas was ruler of Galilee and Perea. When he heard of the mighty works of Christ he said John is risen. John had rebuked sin in high places. This is necessary, for, allowed to go unrebuked, the sin is made popular and the moral sense of the community is deadened. Herod's course brought disaster to himself.

XII. Topic: Feeding the multitude. Place: A desert place on the northeast coast of the Sea of Galilee. God can supply bread where it is least likely to be found. Five thousand are fed, besides women and children; twelve baskets of fragments are gathered. After performing this wonderful miracle the people were about to make Jesus a king, but He would not permit it. He had no ambition for worldly glory. That night He prayed nearly all night on the mountain alone, and between 3 and 6 o'clock went to His disciples, walking on the waves.

Miss Ida Barnes, of Henniker, N. H., has produced from a plot of land 39 by 50 feet in area 2,750 pounds of carrots, nineteen of which weighed 50 pounds. At the same rate one acre would produce 1,229 bushels of carrots.

All railway stations in Sweden where meals are served are recognized by a sign bearing the suggestive implements which figure largely at table—a crossed knife and fork.

At the suggestion of several Democrats a Mass Meeting of Democrats of Beat Four in Chilton county, is hereby called to meet at the court house in Clanton on Friday night, March 25, 1904, at 7:30 o'clock, for the purpose of taking such action relating to the selection of delegates from the said Beat to the county convention as to them may seem best.

TIPTON MULLINS,
Committeeman Beat 4.

THE withdrawal of Robert J. Lowe of Birmingham, and Frank M. Donner of Selma, from the race for the presidency of the railroad commission, leaves the voters three candidates from which to select the president.

John V. Smith has had a fair trial as president of the commission, and it cannot well be said that he has done anything of consequence to merit his re-election. He is generally credited with being the candidate most favored by the railroads, and therefore is hardly likely to be very acceptable to those who believe the railroads have been allowed too free a hand, It would appear that Lowe and Donner have withdrawn in order to give Smith a better chance.

B. B. Comer has made such a fight against the railroads as to bring down the wrath of railroad officials upon his head, and to a large extent by his extreme course, has alienated the sympathies of many who were inclined to support him.

Reuben F. Kolb is not an extremist and has pledged himself to see that a reduction of rates is made in the interests of the people, and that the railroad commission will do its full duty both to the public and the railroads. This is as much as any reasonable man should ask, and we believe the nomination of Kolb would be to the best interests of all the people.

On April 6th and 7th there will be held in the city of New Orleans the "Southern Good Roads convention." The Governors of Texas, Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama will be invited to attend and speak; also to issue proclamations and appoint delegates. The railroads have granted one fare, plus 25 cents, to all delegates within the above named states. It promises to be the largest and most influential industrial meeting ever called in the South. State organizations will be effected, and the following subjects considered:

First—The necessity of a State Highway commission to create system and ecomony in road affairs.

Second—The adoption of the "state aid" plan, whereby the legislaturers will appropriate funds to assist the several counties in road improvement.

Third—The enactment of vagrancy laws, whereby able bodied convicts, tramps and vagrants shall be used in preparing material and in the construction of roads.

Several bills are now pending in the Fifty-eighth congress imploring Federal aid in road building. Possibly some bill may be enacted by that session. If not, the subject is receiving so much attention from all sections of the country, that it is almost certain the Federal government will enact legislation in the Fifty-ninth congress, making an appropriation to aid the several states and territories in the improvement of the common roads.

DEATH OF MR. J. L. FARR.

Mr. James L. Farr died at his home at Verbena March 18, 1904, aged 58 years. He was a gallant confederate soldier of the 63d Alabama regiment, was captured at Blakeley and imprisoned. He was buried with Masonic honors at Verbena, March 19. He was a good neighbor, a kind husband, and had many friends.

The following was read at the burial by W. F. claugton, commander of camp Gracie, U. c. V.:

Veterans and Friends:—Some two or three years ago orders from Headquarters were issued to the camps, that each camp should bury a brother with military honors. With that authority, I, the commander of Camp Gracie, with only two or three members present, will have to omit the performance of that sacred duty. While it is heartrending, yet the time will soon come when the last old Confederate veteran will perhaps lay down, and by himself, and no one will know or appreciate the deeds that are recorded in the sacred book of those that died for their country. The Brother was born in this neighborhood, and has lived with you all his life, and I have never heard of his doing any wrong. The Masonic fraternity feel kindly to him, for he built the temple his Lodge now occupies, using his hard earnings to give them a home. With love and kind remembrance we will cherish his good deeds, and may the Kind Ruler be our guide and protector, and when we cross the river, and rest under the shade, meet our comrade. Farewell, dear comrade.

General Stephen D. Lee, commanding United Confederate Veterans, has issued an official order dated March 12, 1904, fixing the dates of the reunion June 14, 15 and 16, 1904, and naming Nashville, Tenn., as the place.

WEEDS

Consumption is a human weed flourishing best in weak lungs. Like other weeds it's easily destroyed while young; when old, sometimes impossible.

Strengthen the lungs as you would weak land and the weeds will disappear.

The best lung fertilizer is Scott's Emulsion. Salt pork is good too, but it is very hard to digest.

The time to treat consumption is when you begin trying to hide it from yourself. Others see it, you won't.

Don't wait until you can't deceive yourself any longer. Begin with the first thought to take Scott's Emulsion. If it isn't really consumption so much the better; you will soon forget it and be better for the treatment. If it is consumption you can't expect to be cured at once, but if you will begin in time and will be rigidly regular in your treatment you will win.

Scott's Emulsion, fresh air, rest all you can, eat all you can, that's the treatment and that's the best treatment.

We will send you a little of the Emulsion free.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, March 21, 1904

The Republicans in the House of Representatives, last week, showed conclusively that they are a lot of four flushers, trimmers, hypocrites and cowards. It was a strenuous and most exciting week in the House. Every man whose name had been mentioned in the Bristow report that was flung into the bear pit by the chairman of the committee on Post Offices and Post Roads, the Hon. Jesse Overstreet, was boiling over with rage and wanted a chance to get at Bristow. There were nearly one hundred and fifty Republicans and about a dozen Democrats named in the report who were accused of using their pull with Beavers and Machen to get things from the Post Office Department that did not belong to them and that were unlawful to grant. As I said last week these requests mere made, for the most part, with no criminal intent. The members of congress did not know that it was unlawful to grant these requests and relied on the officers of the department to know the law in the matter. They knew they wanted the things asked for if they could get them. And, Beavers and Machen, in order to stand in with the members of congress granted them, law or no law To have themselves placed on a par with Beavers and Machen, the latter a convicted felon on his road to the penitentiary, was calculated to make the bristles rise on the back of most any man and it surely did on the members in the House who were tarred with Mr. Bristow's stick. They ranted and roared and raged for two days. They denounced Bristow as liar and a scoundrel and did other stunts that caused the House of Representatives to resemble a ward meeting in a hot factional campaign. When however, the Democrats tried to get them to pass a resolution to enter on a full investigation of the rottenness in the Post Office Department, they ran like a passal of scarred coyotes. The party whip cracked over their backs and they fell into line. They refused absolutely to investigate the very department about which so much has been written as to its rottenness, and which they were so lustily "cussing out" only a few moments before. Was there ever before such a flagrant exhibition of inconsistency? Denounce the department in one breath as being one of the worst things on the face of the earth, and in the next vote that there is nothing about it to investigate. That is what the Republicans did. When will the people get their eyes open?

In talking with Mr. P. V. DeGraw, the eastern press representative of the St. Louis World's Fair, I learn something of interest to the farmers and stock breeders of the country in connection with that great exhibition. One of the curiosities of the World's Fair will be two twin steers, probably the largest ever born in the world. These redpolled giants were born on a Texas ranch owned by William H. Goodair and purchased from him by Harry Berliner, of East St. Louis. These steers now weigh about three thousand pounds each although they are only in fair flesh. Mr. Berliner thinks they can be made to weigh 4,500 pounds by the time the Fair opens. They undoubtedly will excite much interest among breeders of stock who attend the Fiar.

Another exhibition of great interest to breeders of fine stock will be in the first shipment of Holstein-Friesian cows to take part in the Exposition cow demonstration which will arrive on the World's Fair grounds in the charge of E. B. Von-Hyne, the expert, who will act as superintendent for the Worlds Fair Holstien-Friesian Association during the demonstration. This shipment comes from Cortland, N. Y. Another shipment of Holstein-Friesian cows will be made shortly from Wisconsin. The short horn cows to participate in the demonstration will be shipped to St. Louis soon, and chief cobern has been advised by the Brown Swiss breeders that their cows will also be forwarded at an early date.

All farmers will have an interest in the rule which has important bearing on the shearing of sheep to be exhibited at the World's Fair as announced by chief F. D. coburn of the department of live stock.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

MARCH 21ST.

Consideration in the senate of the bill providing for the purchase of a site and the erection of a building for the departments of state, justice and commerce and labor was the occasion for adverse criticism of the architect who planned the white house offices. At the opening of the session Mr. Hoar introduced by request a bill to organize a colonization bureau, which, he said, was prepared by officers of the Salvation Army to secure settlement on public lands. He said it was prepared upon the advice of the late Senator Hanna, and had he lived would have been introduced by him. The bill was referred to the committee on public lands.

Mr. Carmack introduced a resolution directing the committee on judiciary to inquire and report as to the legality of the order of the commissioner of pensions granting pensions to soldiers of the civil war who had reached the age of 62 years. The resolution went over until tomorrow. An early adjournment was had out of respect to the memory of the late Representative Thompson, of Alabama, who died yesterday.

After being in session an hour and twenty minutes the house adjourned out of respect to the memory of the late Mr. Thompson. No business of importance was transacted.

En Route to Tuskegee.

The funeral party bearing the remains of the late Representative Chas. W. Thompson, of Alabama, left Washington Monday night for Tuskegee, where the last services will be held Wednesday afternoon. The congressional party will return to Washington Thursday evening.

The party consists of Charles W. Thompson, Jr., Senators Pettus, of Alabama; McLaurin, of Mississippi; Culberson, of Texas; Overman, of North Carolina, and Representatives Wiley and Clayton, of Alabama; Padgett, of Tennessee; Littlefield, of Maine; Darragh, of Michigan; Williams, of Illinois; Paterson, of North Carolina; Houston, of Delaware; Rainey, of Illinois; Brown, of Wisconsin; Scarborough, of South Carolina, and Gaines, of Tennessee.

The party is in charge of Sergeant-at-Arms Casson, of the house, assisted by F. M. Webber. The Rev. F. J. Prettyman, pastor of Mount Vernon place, M. E. church, which the late representative attended while in Washington, also accompanies the party. Representative Bowie, of Alabama, is expected to join the party in Tuskegee. Senator Morgan and Representatives Underwood and Richardson of Alabama, could not leave Washington at this time, owing to important legislation pending in congress. The other members of the delegation are now in the state.

In concluding his hearing before the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce, Admiral Walker, president of the Panama canal commission stated that actual work on the canal would be begun after the commision had made a stay of a few weeks on the isthmus for which it was to sail March 29. The engineering feat of the whole enterprise was explained to be the construction of the Bohio dam.

It will be necessary to go 120 feet below the sea level to get the proper foundation for the dam. Although there have been many ideas advanced it was absolutely necessary to be sure of any project before commencing the work of the foundation. Chairman Hepburn suggested the possibility of a failure to find the proper foundation, and asked what the commission would do in this event. He wanted to know if the construction of the canal depended on this dam.

This was a question which would have to be met, was the answer. The admiral, however, said he had no doubt that it was feasable to construct the dam.

The house committee on judiciary voted to impeach Charles Swayne, federal judge of the district of Florida.

Grover Cleveland was sixty-seven last Friday.

A Washington special says: A change in the personnel of the supreme court is at hand which may give President Roosevelt an opportunity to appoint three justices in that body before the meeting of the next congress. It is understood in judicial circles that Chief Justice Fuller, Justice Harlan and Justice Brown are about to retire, and that they will carry their intention into effect during the next few months.

At the request of the citizens of Galveston, Tex., the cruiser Atlanta, the gunboat Bancroft and two torpedo destroyers will visit that port on the completion of the Atlanta's target practice at Pensacola.

It is reported that Jonah K. Kalanianaole, better known as "Prince Cupid," the Hawaiian delegate in congress, is dissatisfied with Washington life and contemplates resigning at the end of the present session, if not before. One reason assigned for the prince's determination is the drawing of the color line in Washington, which his royal birth and superior attainments can not overcome.

Cotton exports for 1902 were $378,000,000, more than $1,000,000 a day.

Napoleon's Code.

A small, but distinguished, coterie of jurists, legislators and other public men witnessed an interesting ceremony Monday when the original manuscript of the Napoleonic code, with numerous corrections in the great emperor's own handwriting, was formally transferred from the ministry of justice, where it has reposed for many decades, to the national archives. It was just 100 years ago that this civil code, which has been adopted in part in almost all civilized countries, was adopted by the French government, and the transfer to the national archives was in commemoration of the centennial. The code consists of hundreds of little booklets, all bearing the seal of the French republic, and every one signed by Bonaparte as first consul.

A banana crop is harvested on an average of every fifteen days throughout the year. Each thrifty banana plant has many suckers or stalks growing from a single root at the same time. One or more bunches of the ripening fruit is cut from a single stalk, while the other stalks growing from the same root are left untouched, and in fifteen days another of the stalks is shorn of its fruit. This process continues incessantly during the year. In July and August it is necessary to cut off the ripening bunches every ten days, while in December and January about once a month is sufficient, the average throughout the year being practically fifteen days.

THE FIRST DIVIDEND

Of Bessemer Savings Bank was Paid Saturday

Bessemer had one of the liveliest days it has had for some time, the occasion being the payment of the first dividend to the creditors of the defunct Bessemer Savings bank. Seven hundred and eighty-two checks were made out representing a sum [illegible] 000. Of this amount five hundred checks were issued, aggregating a sum of about $30,000.

One of the largest checks drawn was by the city of Bessemer, which amounted to something near $4,000.

It is understood that Receiver T. O. Smith, of the defunct Bank of Commerce, that failed at the same time the Savings bank closed its doors, is getting matters in shape to pay a dividend at an early date. It is stated that the bank will be able to pay 75 per cent of its claims.

SHOOTING AT BESSEMER.

Resulted Fatally to an Innocent Bystander.

While resisting arrest E. H. McGilver, a negro, lost his life; Deputy Sheriff Newt Clemmons, who was attempting to capture him, was seriously, perhaps fatally, wounded, and Mrs. Willingham, a passerby, was wounded by a stray bullet. McGilver and another negro named Threat were wanted on a charge of shooting and dangerously wounding Seaborn Cook, a farmer, at Virginia Mines, from where they were en route to the city. Threat was arrested by Chief Wallace on the outskirts of the city and is in the city jail. He has made a statement saying that Mr. Cook was shot accidentally.

Later.

Mrs. W. Willingham died from the wounds caused by stray bullets from the rifles of deputies in the battle.

ILL HEALTH

Given as the Cause of Mr. Benton's Killing Himself.

With a bullet wound in his head George D. Benton, aged fifty-seven years and one of Bessemer's prominent citizens, was found dead on the porch of his residence Sunday morning by his young son, Carl. The dead man's revolver, a 38-caliber Smith & Wesson, was found near his body. For some time Mr. Benton had been very despondent and low-spirited as a result of a long and aggravated illness, and it was in this temporary state of derangement of mind that he took his life.

For a long time Mr. Benton has been prominent in the industrial and commercial development of the Marvel City and was one of the best known men in the county.

New Compress Company.

At Selma a deal was consummated by which J. B. Ellis and associates will become owners of the two compresses in Selma. The new company has as its stockholders besides Mr. Ellis all the cotton buyers, cotton merchants and cotton factors of Selma.

It will have over one hundred thousand dollars capital. The Dallas press is to be remodeled and overhauled and the old railroad press which has been out of commission will have an up-to-date modern press erected.

Opelika has been made a meal station for the Atlanta and West Point road.

Creditors Get About 75 Per Cent.

The appraisers of the defunct Shapard bank have made their report and it shows that of the $135,000 of notes, mortgages, etc., only $72,000 can be collected. The preferred creditors of the bank will get only about 75 per cent of their claims.

In a letter received from Hon. Sydney J. Bowie, he states that he has had advices from the department of agriculture which informed him that Messrs. W. G. Smith and F. M. Meeker, who have charge of the soil survey in Sumter county, will come to Selma about the first of October and begin a thorough test of the soil of Dallas county.

Seriously Injured.

Morrow Blackburn was seriously, perhaps fatally, injured by falling from an electric crane in the Ensley steel plant. His arm was broken, his hip dislocated, and it is feared that he was injured internally.

Mr. Blackburn is an electrician and was at work on a crane. In attempting to come down he missed his footing and fell a distance of over forty feet. Mr. Blackburn is 32 years of age and was recently married.

Selma will entertain the state's Red Men during May.

Eufaula's Carnegie library will be completed this week.

One of the odd specimens shown in the United States national museum exhibit at the world's fair will be a restoration of the stegosaurus, life-size and made of papier mache.

The court has overruled the motion for a new trial in the case of George B. Warner, who was recently given a death sentence for the murder of Pulaski Leeds, the superintendent of machinery of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad company and sentenced him to be hanged on April 23.

MORO TREATY ANNULLED

Rights Conferred by General Bates Declared Forfeited.

NATIVES FIGHT FOR SLAVERY

United States Troops Defeat Them and Capture Cannon and Ammunition—The Sultan of Sulu and His Subjects Commanded to Obey the Laws of the Philippine Commission.

Washington, D. C.—Secretary of War Taft told the House Committee on Insular Affairs of a rebellion that has broken out among the Moros because of a proclamation issued by the Philippine Government abrogating the Sulu treaty and prohibiting slavery. General Wade reported from Manila that a reconnoitring force east of Cottababo, Province of Moro, was attacked by a force of Moros, who rebelled against the anti-slavery law. General Wood telegraphed that the Moro position was shelled and the Moros were flanked and their outworks taken. Twenty-one old Spanish cannon and thirty-three Lantaka guns, besides large quantities of arms and ammunition were captured in the works, which were strong and well constructed. The Moro loss was considerable. There were no casualties on the American side.

In reporting this engagement to the House Committee, before which he appeared in the interest of the bill to provide for the more effective administration of civil government in the Philippines, Secretary Taft explained that some time ago he sent a cablegram to Governor Luke Wright, telling him to notify the Sultan of Sulu and the Dattos, who made a treaty with General Bates on August 20, 1899, that the treaty is abrogated and annulled, and that the Sultan and his Dattos have forfeited the annuities which were to be paid them under the treaty, and that they must henceforth obey the laws of the Philippine Government. Secretary Taft took the position that the Sultan of Sulu treaty was a mere modus vivendi, and that it has not been complied with by the Sultan of Sulu.

Before Secretary Taft entered upon the duties of Secretary of War Secretary Root directed the Philippine Commission to take up the subject of legislation for the Moros and submit it to Washington for approval. The object was to do away with polygamy and slavery and introduce a form of trustworthy government in the Moro country.

As the Moros are Mohammedans, there is more than ordinary difficulty in governing them. It has been said that our success thus far has been due to an understanding with the Porte under which the pilgrims to Mecca have been influenced every year to go home and counsel good will toward the United States.

UNION MEN BANISHED.

Telluride Citizens' Alliance Gets Rid of Trouble Makers.

Telluride, Col.—Between sixty and seventy-five members of the Telluride Miners' Union and sympathizers who were recently deported, but who returned when the militia were called away, were forcibly taken from their homes and boarding houses by 100 armed members of the Citizens' Alliance. They were then put aboard a specially chartered train and deported to Ridgway.

The men were warned individually and collectively after they were forced into the two cars of the train never to return to Telluride on pain of death. To make this warning more impressive the Alliance members fired a number of volleys at the departing train.

The decision to deport the unionists and their sympathizers was reached at a recent meeting of the Alliance. This meeting was largely attended. The strike situation was discussed and it was the consensus of opinion that something radical must be done. The running out of town of the union agitators and their sympathizers was finally suggested and promptly agreed to.

FRAUD IN ARMY PAY ACCOUNTS.

Two Lieutenants Are Brought Back From Manila For a Court-Martial.

San Francisco, Cal.—Lieutenant G. S. Richards, of the Twenty-third Infantry, and Lieutenant F. B. Neilson, of the Twelfth Cavalry, who arrived from Manila on the transport Thomas, have come here under arrest to appear before a court-martial appointed by General MacArthur. The two young men are charged with having duplicated their pay accounts in the Philippines.

Major Webster, of the Pay Department, made a special trip from Manila under orders from the War Department to report to General MacArthur as a witness.

FRENCH CABINET DEFEATED.

Loses in Vote on Amendment to Congregational Teaching Bill.

Paris, France.—The Government was defeated in the Chamber of Deputies in connection with the bill suppressing Congregational teaching. An amendment offered by M. Caillaux extending the period of suppression from five to ten years was carried against the opposition of Prime Minister Combes.

The vote was 282 to 271. The stability of the Government does not appear to be affected.

BURKETT SUCCEEDS DIETRICH.

Leading County of Nebraska Declares For Him in Primaries.

Lincoln, Neb. — In the Lancaster County primaries practically every precinct declared for Representative E. J. Burkett for United States Senator to succeed Charles H. Dietrich.

Burkett has no opposition. The Republican State Convention, which meet here May 18, will select a Senatorial candidate.

IRISH DEFEAT BALFO[UR]

British Ministry Beaten in H[ouse] of Commons by Eleven Vote[s]

Premier Declines to Accept Result as Cause For Resignation—Coup Planned by Liberals.

London, England.—Mr Balfour's [gov]ernment was defeated in the Hou[se] Commons by the combined Liberal [and] Nationalist vote. This reverse [is] due to the prohibition by Mr. [Gi]bson, Chief Secretary for Ireland, [of] the teaching of Gaelic in the [hi]gher grades of the Irish National schools. Mr Balfour, though defeated by a [ma]jority of eleven on this question, [will] not regard the vote as one of want of confidence and he will not resign on this account. This determination is strengthened by the fact that shortly after the foregoing defeat he was able to secure a majority of twenty-five.

On the question of Catholic education the Nationalists had previously voted with the Unionist government, but while so doing they were planning the downfall of the Conservatives. The mine so ingeniously laid was sprung with a success that thrilled the country. The strategy with which the attack was planned and the scenes which marked its culmination recalled the times when Gladstone and Parnell waged a titanic struggle in the same arena.

It is learned that the Premier regards it as one of the essential principles of his party to keep the reins of government, at least for the present. What he may do after Easter still remains in doubt. The blow administered makes the Premier's task of holding his party together doubly difficult and many supporters of the Government frankly said that they favored an early dissolution of Parliament rather than again undergo the humiliation experienced.

By a curious coincidence the [first] other defeat suffered by the Unionist party since Lord Salisbury came into power, and which endangered the existence of the Government, occurred nearly eight years ago, on Sir Thomas Esmond's amendment to Gerald Balfour's Land Purchase bill, which again fell to the lot of the present Premier, whip of the Irish party to declare the Government in a minority, which on that occasion was one of only [two] votes.

STRIKE RIOTS IN CHICAGO

Drivers of American Can Company Stoned and Dragged From Wagons.

Chicago, Ill.—A series of riots occurred between striking employes of the American Can Company and the teamsters who had refused to work in sympathy with the strikers. The first disturbance was in the North end of the city at one of the stables of the Can Company, several men being injured and two pickets arrested.

Two pickets were doing duty in the neighborhood when six teamsters attempted to leave the stables with teams. The pickets by signals summoned about twenty helpers. The drivers were stoned and dragged from the wagons, the assailants escaping when a patrol wagon loaded with police arrived.

A second fight took place at the company's South Side barn. Escorted by police several wagons succeeded in reaching half way to a railway freight house, followed by threatening crowds. At Twenty-sixth street and Western avenue the police charged a mob which was showering missiles on the drivers. The wagons reached their destination after the police had captured a number of the rioters.

STILL AFTER HEINZE

Butte and Boston People Say He Owes More Than $1,000,000 of Debts.

Butte, Mon.—Another chapter in the attempt of court was preferred against F. A. Heinze and some of his associates and officials before Judge Knowles of the Federal Court, by the Boston and the Boston and Montana companies. It is alleged that Heinze caused violated an injunction issued in 1898 on a portion of the Johnstown claim, and have taken out ore valued at $110,000.

The defendants have been ordered to appear for trial in the near future. The application has also been made to make perpetual the order to inspect the mines. Heinze and Michael Davitt workings, it being charged that further infringement has disclosed a continuance of the injunction in the case of Davitt, and that the value of ore taken by Heinz amounts to more than $1,000,000.

TIME GRANTED MACHEN.

Machen and the Others Have Until April 23 to Docket Appeals.

Groff, convicted of conspiracy to defraud the United States in connection with the Postoffice Department investigation, until April 23 next to file bill of exceptions and to docket the appeal in the Court of Appeals.

It is probable the appeal will not be heard until fall. None of the Postoffice Department cases in which indictments have been reported will be tried prior to October.

THE OLD FOLKS AT HOME

...re Never Without Peruna in the House for Catarrhal Diseases.

MR. AND MRS. J. O. ATKINSON, INDEPENDENCE, MO.

...NDER date of January 10, 1897, Dr. ... Hartman received the following letter: "My wife had been suffering from a com... tion of diseases for the past 25 years. "Her case had baffled the skill of some ... the most noted physicians. One of her ... worst troubles was chronic constipation of ... veral years standing.

"Your remedies do all that you ... aim for them, and even more. Ca... rrh cannot exist where Peruna is ... ken according to directions. Suc... ss to you and your remedies."

John O. Atkinson.

In a letter dated January 1, 1900, Mr. Atkinson says, after five years' experience with Peruna:

"I will ever continue to speak a good word for Peruna. In my rounds as a traveling man I am a walking advertisement for Peruna and have induced many people during the past year to use Peruna with the most satisfactory results. I am still cured of catarrh." John O. Atkinson, Box 272, Independence, Mo.

When old age comes on catarrhal diseases come also. Systemic catarrh is almost universal in old people.

This explains why Peruna has become so indispensable to old people. Peruna is their safeguard. Peruna is the only remedy yet devised that meets these cases exactly.

Such cases cannot be treated locally; nothing but an effective systemic remedy could cure them. This is exactly what Peruna is.

If you do not receive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

LITTLE THINGS Worth Knowing

Nevada boasts that she has the largest tree in the world. It is said to be 665 feet tall.

In some of the theatres in Germany it is customary to turn on green lights to indicate a long intermission.

At Folkstone, England, there is a club of twenty six men who have undertaken to take a sea bath every day throughout the year.

Tulare Lake, in California, once navigable by steamers, is now perfectly dry. A man on foot can cross it safely at any point, and in some places the ground is hard enough for a team to drive over.

Vienna telephone booths are furnished with napkins bearing the inscription, "Wipe, if you please." The napkins are changed frequently, and this undoubtedly serves to keep the mouthpieces of the transmitters in good condition.

Paul Desmuke, of Angleton, Texas, who has just been elected justice of the peace, is without arms, but performs wonders with his feet. With them he handles a knife and fork with dexterity, and writes with ease. For six months he was County Clerk, kept the records accurately, and they are models of neatness.

TURNING A JOKE TO ACCOUNT

One of the Practical Kind Made to Yield a Profit to Its Victim.

The Rev. Thomas P. Hunt relates in his "Autobiography" an instance of a practical joke turned against the joker to the profit of the intended victim. Mr. Hunt was in New York, soliciting subscriptions for a Southern school. One man to whom he applied referred him to another, saying that he would subscribe $50 if the second man gave anything, and handed Mr. Hunt a letter of introduction. Mr. Hunt found the second man in his counting-room, surrounded by his friends, and presented the letter.

The man read it with a smile, writes Mr. Hunt, and handed it to his friends, introducing me and explaining my mission. I saw that fun was brewing. He began:

"I understand that you are collecting money, and that you are a minister of the gospel?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, you preach that men ought to give of what they have. If I were to ask anything of you, you would have nothing to give but your blessing. If I refused to take that, I should get nothing."

"Yes, sir, if that was all I had to give."

"Well, sir, I am a dealer in hardware. Will you take this hammer?" He handed me a very fine one from his sample case. I took it before he had time to draw back, thanked him for it, and got him to enter his name in my book.

There was a laugh, but not at me. I was treated very handsomely by all present. I did not care about the hammer, but I had my eye on the $50 promised by the first merchant on condition that I got anything out of the hardware dealer.

I went back with the hammer, and the man paid the $50, but laughed louder than the dealer in hardware. It seemed that the giver of the hammer was a generous, liberal and social man. He gave by the hundreds to race courses, club rooms and such things, but not a cent to religious purposes. The hammer was his first departure. The news soon spread that he had given something for a religious institution.

The next day, as I was passing down Wall street, a gentleman addressed me and asked me to walk in. Several of my friends of the day before were in his room. He asked to see my subscription book, as he intended to subscribe. He gave me $10. Looking over my book, he called to his friends, "Here is the hammer, as certain as pay day!"

They enjoyed the joke, and many a dollar I got for the sight of that name.

Future of the Wireless.

The probability is that the perfecting of the wireless system will not be nearly so prolonged as the cable authorities predict, nor yet as speedy as the wireless enthusiasts hope, but that its gradual evolution and employment will enable it to be introduced into a variety of commercial enterprises, especially on the sea, without dislocating established mediums of round-the-world communication. As petroleum, gas and electricity are now in general use as illuminants without disturbing an equal balance of enterprises, so there would appear to be as good a prospect for the telegraph and the radiograph to work in harmony.—P. T. McGrath, in National Magazine.

Billion Dollar Grass and Alfalfa.

When we introduced Billion Dollar Grass three years ago, little did we dream it would be the most talked of grass in America, the biggest, quick, hay producer on earth, but this has come to pass.

Agr. Editors wrote about it, Agr. College Professors lectured about it, Agr. Institute Orators talked about it, while in the farm home by the quiet fireside, in the corner grocery, in the village postoffice, at the creamery, at the depot, in fact wherever farmers gathered, Salzer's Billion Dollar Grass, that wonderful grass, good for 5 to 14 tons per acre, and lots of pasture besides, is always a theme worthy of the farmer's voice.

A. Walford, Westlore Farms, Pa., writes: "I have 60 acres in Salzer's Alfalfa Clover. It is immense. I cut three crops this season and have lots of pasture besides."

The Talamancans are Indians of Panama, not far from the canal and about half way across the isthmus. They live almost in the primitive style of their ancestors in the days of Columbus and have little intercourse with whites, beyond trading fowls and pigs for tobacco, trinkets and ammunition. They speak their ancient language and still use the blow gun and spear. They live in huts of palm thatch, with a number of domesticated animals; for instance, the wild deer, peccary, tapir, and even the tiger cat. They hunt, fish and cultivate Indian crops and cassava. They have more fear of an evil than faith in a good spirit, are polygamists, and their simple government is hereditary. Their king is a despot as far as custom or law permits, and their "sokee," or medicine man, is lawyer, priest and doctor all in one. Their life is on the whole one of dreamy contentment. Apparently they are an inferior race to the Aztecs, who probably ruled them.—London Globe.

"Aren't you afraid that a great many people will criticise you for becoming rich?" "Yes" answered Senator Sorghum. "But the chances are that if I had stayed poor they wouldn't have noticed me, even that much."—Washington Star.

EIGHT YEARS OF TORTURE.

No suffering more keen than kidney suffering. Sick kidneys make bad blood; cause weak, stiff and aching backs; cause blind, sick and dizzy headaches, lack of appetite and loss of sleep; keep you all tired out and spoil digestion.

To have perfect health you must cure the kidneys. Read how one man was cured by Doan's Kidney Pills after eight years of torture.

Henry Soule, of Pultney St., Hammondsport, N. Y., says: "For eight years I suffered constant agony from kidney complaint. I endured the worst torture from gravel and the kidney secretions were excessive and contained sediment like brick dust. I had to get out of bed from ten to twenty times a night and the loss of sleep wore me out. Indigestion came on, and the distress after eating was terrible. Doan's Kidney Pills effected a complete and lasting cure, and after the symptoms of kidney trouble were gone my stomach began to work as it should. This lasting cure, especially in a person of my age, proves the great value of Doan's Kidney Pills more convincingly than could any words of mine."

Doan's Kidney Pills sold by all druggists; price, 50 cents per box, or mailed on receipt of price by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Write for free trial.

Miss M. Cartledge gives some helpful advice to young girls. Her letter is but one of thousands which prove that nothing is so helpful to young girls who are just arriving at the period of womanhood as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound too highly, for it is the only medicine I ever tried which cured me. I suffered much from my first menstrual period, I felt so weak and dizzy at times I could not pursue my studies with the usual interest. My thoughts became sluggish, I had headaches, backaches and sinking spells, also pains in the back and lower limbs. In fact, I was sick all over.

"Finally, after many other remedies had been tried, we were advised to get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am pleased to say that after taking it only two weeks, a wonderful change for the better took place, and in a short time I was in perfect health. I felt buoyant, full of life, and found all work a pastime. I am indeed glad to tell my experience with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, for it made a different girl of me. Yours very truly, Miss M. Cartledge, 533 Whitehall St., Atlanta, Ga."

At such a time, the grandest aid to nature is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It prepares the young system for the necessary changes, and is the surest and most reliable cure for woman's ills of every nature. Mrs. Pinkham invites all young women who are ill to write her for free advice. Address, Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

Mrs. Estes, of New York City, says:

"Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—I write to you because I believe all young girls ought to know how much good your medicine will do them. I did dressmaking for years before I was married, and if it had not been for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I do not believe I could have stood the strain. There is no other work that is such a strain on the system. Oh, how my back used to ache from the bending over! I would feel as though I would have to scream out from the pain, and the sitting still made me so terribly tired and weak, and my head throbbed like an engine. I never could eat after work, I was so worn out. Then I was irregular, and had such frightful cramps every month they would simply double me up with pain, and I would have to give up working and lie down. But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound changed me into a strong, well woman. Yours very truly, Mrs. Martha Estes, 513 West 125th St., N. Y. City."

No other female medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of female troubles cured. Sold by druggists everywhere. Refuse all substitutions. Remember every woman is cordially invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham, if there is anything about her symptoms she does not understand. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass.

$5000 FORFEIT if we cannot forthwith produce the original letters and signatures of above testimonials, which will prove their absolute genuineness. Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co., Lynn, Mass.

COMMITTEE ON CORRESPONDENCE.

Highland.

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your columns to say a few words in regard to my school, which has just closed at Highland, five miles southwest of Clanton. I went among those people almost an utter stranger, but found them all that heart could desire. The patrons especially, and the people of the community treated me with utmost consideration and kindness. I boarded with the family of Mr. W. F. Culpepper, and was treated so cleverly and nicely that I felt at home from the very first day.

The average daily attendance was about thirty. The students were so obedient and studious that it was a pleasure to be with them. My school closed on the evening of the 16th with a nice little concert in which all the students took part. The dialogues and recitations were all well committed to memory, and they all acquitted themselves in a praiseworthy manner. The entertainment of the evening was varied by appropriate music by Mr. John Grimes, his son Eddie and Mr. Will Littlejohn. There was no misbehavior or confusion and all seemed to enjoy it very much.

In conclusion, I will say that I cannot say too much for those people for their kindness towards me, and hope these cordial relations will continue many years hence.

Proper Treatment of Pneumonia.

Pneumonia is too dangerous a disease for anyone to attempt to doctor himself, although he may have the proper remedies at hand. A physician should always be called. It should be borne in mind, however, that pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of the grip, and that by giving Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the threatened attack of pneumonia may be warded off. This remedy is also used by physicians in the treatment of pneumonia with the best results. Dr. W. J. Smith, of Sanders, Ala., who is also a druggist, says of it: "I have been selling Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and prescribed it in my practice for the past six years. I use it in cases of pneumonia and have always gotten the best results. Sold by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton; A. Horn, Thorsby.

Dragging Pains

2825 Keeley St.,
Chicago, Ill., Oct. 2, 1902.

I suffered with falling and congestion of the womb, with severe pains through the groins. I suffered terribly at the time of menstruation, had splitting headaches and rushing of blood to the head. What to try I know not, for it seemed that I had tried all and failed, but I had never tried Wine of Cardui, that blessed remedy for sick women. I found it easy to take and soon knew that I had the right medicine. New blood soon [illegible] and after using eleven bottles I was a well woman.

Mrs. Bush

Mrs. Bush is now in perfect health because she took Wine of Cardui for menstrual disorders, bearing down pains and blinding headaches when all other remedies failed to bring her relief. Any sufferer may secure health by taking Wine of Cardui in her home. The first bottle convinces the patient she is on the road to health.

AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

THE NECESSARY MAGAZINE IN THE PRESIDENTIAL YEAR

The Review of Reviews is often called a necessity, in recognition of its usefulness in keeping readers "up with the times."

In Presidential election years the REVIEW OF REVIEWS is more than ever "the necessary magazine." Everybody wants to be truly and quickly informed about this or that public question that has forged to the front; to know about the new candidates and personal factors in politics, to have a complete picture at hand of the current movement of history.

In Dr. Shaw's editorials, in its authentic and timely contributed articles, in its brilliant character sketches, in its condensations and reviews of all the important articles of other magazines, and in its hundred a month of valuable portraits, witty cartoons, and interesting views, the REVIEW OF REVIEWS gives the much desired news of the world's and our own progress. "The World under a Field-glass" is the way one subscriber describes it.

Men in public life, like President Theodore Roosevelt, the members of Congress, and the great captains of industry, who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided it is "indispensable."

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

It was a jolly crowd that left Clanton last Saturday night on a trip to Pensacola to see the U. S. battleships and other war vessles lying in the harbor there. All Clanton was at the depot to see the start, and when the 112 excursionists got aboard the train the population was diminished to that extent. A special car had been engaged, upon each side of which a streamer proudly proclaimed to the world: "We are from Clanton, Ala." but one car not proving sufficient, a second was added at Montgomery. A mighty cheer went up as we pulled out of the depot on No. 7, and the night journey was commenced. every man (by the by there were no ladies) making himself comfortable. At Coopers and Verbena more jolly fellows were added to the crowd, and the inhabitants of those thriving towns stared in astonishment at this exodus from Chilton.

At Montgomery a four hours stoppage was made and the boys dispersed in every direction taking in the sights of the capital city. Promptly at 11 o'clock the train pulled out and the lively boys commenced a night of fun and jollity. Sleep was out of the question, "Nature's soft nurse" had a night off so far as this jovial party was concerned. Through the night the train rushed on, making occasional stoppages. Alabama was left behind, and in the light of early morning we arrived at Pensacola.

It had been a warm time throughout the night, but this part of the Land of Flowers was cold and gloomy. A piercing wind prevailed, and showers of rain fell continuously during the day. But that matter, we were all out for a good time and were going to have it irrespective of climatic conditions, although it must be confessed an overcoat would have been mighty comforting. Down to the wharf trooped the whole crowd, and there before us, on the bosom of the noble harbor, placidly rode at anchor a magnificent fleet of Uncle Sam's war ships, while a number of other vessels were visible in all directions.

A night ride and a cold morning called for breakfast, and a move was made for that purpose. Thronging the streets were sailor men by the hundred, and while we discussed breakfast a jolly tar told of the wonders of the deep and the terrible perils he had encountered. Early as was the hour, he had been "up against" something that morning that gave a zest to his narrative of adventure. The remainder of the morning was spent in a sail around the harbor on a steamboat, passing the several ships at anchor, down to the navy yard, and in the dry dock was seen the "Nashville" undergoing repairs. Among the ships we passed were the Brooklyn, the Maine, the Kearsarge, the Baltimore, the Machias, the Florida, the Bancroft, the Cleveland, the Nevada, the Arkansas, and on two or three ships was noticed this legend "United States navy, Collier," which caused one people to remark that surely if the United States navy was for Collier, then every voter in Chilton county should be for Collier also.

In the afternoon visits were made to some of the war ships, and the visitors had explained to them the working of the massive engines and guns. To describe the intricate and complicated mechanism of a modern man-of-war is more than can be attempted here, such wonders must be seen to be understood.

There was a very cunning man,
Thought he knew everything,
Undertook to show them
How they work the steam engine.
You see that little crooked thing
That looks so mighty strong,
Mocks that other crooked thing
When it shoves the boat along."

It was a weary but happy crowd that returned to clanton Monday morning, two nights of traveling and a long day of sight seeing is hard work, but all declared they had a pleasant trip. Will Sargent made all the arrangements for the special coach and made an excellent conductor. A chilton boy, Joe Willoughby, is on the Baltimore and looks as if a sailor's life suited him.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[We are willing to publish our subscribers views at any time, but it must be distinctly understood we do not hold ourselves responsible for these opinions.—Editor.]

Clanton, Ala., Feb. 27, 1904

To voters of chilton county:

An informal conference of Democratic and conservative citizens has been held here for the purpose of discussing the nomination of men in the primary April 11th, who are qualified to make a winning fight against the opposition in the general election. At the conference only the nomination for Probate Judge was considered at this time.

The question of selecting a candidate was considered merely from the standpoint of what is best for the general public. After mature deliberation, the conclusion was reached that the public wellfare would be best subserved by nominating Hon. S. M. Adams at the head of the ticket. There are no reasons to make a change, for Judge Adams, it is admitted by all, has made a most capable, efficient and satisfactory officer. He has not had, or sought the guidance of any higher officer or other person, in all cases he has depended on his own judgment. His books, after two seperate inspections by the State Examiner, have been found correct. He is always on deck to serve the general public, the rich and the poor alike. Some of the largest and most important estates, in which intricate questions of law have been involved, have been settled during his term of office, satisfactorily. No citizen, it matters not how lowly and humble he might have been in circumstances, has ever gone to Judge Adams for counsel and guidance and been turned away. His strong individuality has, at all times in his career, made him the champion, and does now make him the champion of right against might, of the weak against the strong.

The above are questions of tested qualifications in an officer, which necessarily force themselves upon the mind of a citizen who has the county's interest, as well as his own, at heart. Yours truly,

COMMITTEE,
by J. C. Dennis, Wm. M. Adams,
Committee appointed by Conference.

The foregoing letter, endorsing the candidacy of Judge Adams for Judge of Probate, was not published or sent to anyone, for the reason that Mr. A. C. Smith seemed to to think that it did him an injustice. Therefore, Judge Adams, not desiring to do Mr. Smith or any one else any injustice, asked the committee to not publish or send same out, bnt since Mr. Smith has seen fit to read the same in several of his speeches, claiming that it does him an injustice, the letter is now asked to be published in order that all may read its contents and see for themselves that no injustice was done or intended toward Mr. Smith or anyone else.

WILLIAM A. COLLIER,

THE CHILTON COUNTY CANDIDATE FOR JUDGE OF THE FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT.

There are few men in Chilton county who will fail to recognize the picture above. For more than 30 ears Col. W. A. Collier has been a conspicuous figure in our county, as a lawyer, and for many years as chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee. He was a young man when he first came here and is growing old amongst us. In thirty years a man who practices the legal profession becomes thoroughly well known to the people and they in turn become acquainted with him. When only a boy of sixteen he entered the service of the confederacy and served throughout the war.

As a lawyer, Col. Collier has made an excellent reputation not only in this county and district, but throughout the State and in various parts of the United States. His legal ability is unquestioned—none will dispute that he is a sound legal adviser whose construing of the law can be relied upon as correct. In the conduct of his legal practice Col. Collier has never allowed his political preferences to interfere with his duty to his clients, he has expounded the law in their interests, and in numerous cases has carried judge and jury with him, and in many instances the Supreme Court of Alabama has upheld him in his construction of the law. No man can possibly make an efficient judge unless he is possessed of a perfect acquaintance with the statutes to be enforced, and in this particular Col. Collier is pre-eminently qualified to act as judge.

With ripe experience, and still in the prime of manhood, the opportunity has unexpectedly presented itself to him to attain the distinguished position to which all lawyers aspire. The legislature, in its wisdom, created a new judicial circuit, of which Chilton county forms a part. A judge was appointed highly acceptable to the people, and it was hoped he would for many years preside over the circuit. But the Supreme Judge has seen fit to remove Judge Winter from his earthly labors, and therefore it devolves upon the people to elect his successor.

Four counties comprise the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit—Montgomery, Elmore, Autauga and Chilton. Of these four counties, two, Elmore and Autauga, have declined to put out a candidate, and the other two, Montgomery and Chilton, have each produced a gentleman seeking the suffrages of the people as judge of the circuit.

Chilton county, long debarred from any political influence in the State, is confidently expected to assume her proper position in the coming election, and in the primary of April 11 the nominees are practically elected. For the first time the people will say who shall be their judges—from the Supreme Court down. For the first time the people of Chilton have the opportunity to say who shall be the Judge of their Circuit Court, and county pride and patriotism calls upon them to support and vote for their home candidate.

Judge Collier of Chilton has an alliterative, alluring sound which appeals to the patriotism of all the people of Chilton county, and it is in the firm belief that he can rely upon the solid vote of his fellow citizens in the county that Col. Collier submits himself as their candidate for judge.

That the legal profession of the district recognize his ability is evidenced by the following testimonials:

We, the undersigned members of the bar of Chilton county, take pleasure in endorsing Hon. William A. Collier for the office of Judge

Japan is mining 2,000 tons of coal a day, nearly 1,000,000 tons yearly, and the supply is of fine quality, apparent ly inexhaustible. Twenty-five years ago the output was only 300 tons a day.

The literary taste of the editors of the Congressional Record is something shocking. Each day the prayers of the chaplain of the house are printed, but not one of Dr. Edward Everett Hale's petitions, has yet appeared. If published they would probably increase the circulation, suggests the Indianapolis Journal.

There is in San Francisco a two-story building that is but six feet eight inches wide and twenty-one feet high, standing on a lot fifty feet deep. It has been standing for fifty years and is used as a barber shop. It is owned by eleven persons. Eight of the holders own a one-thirty-sixth interest each, giving each a title in fee simple to just two and two-ninth inches front footage, with a depth of fifty feet.

Worth, the famous Paris arbiter of fashion for women, says that no dressmaker has ever dreamed of reviving such an unesthetic costume as the crinoline. He also declares that for several years to come, in his opinion, tailormade dresses for morning wear and soft, clinging robes for the evening will be the correct vogue.

It is not generally known that the jackal is a greater destroyer of humanity in India than the tiger. Statistics published by the Government of India show that while 928 persons were killed by tigers, more than 1000 children were carried away by jackals. In America the jackals of politics are more destructive of good government than are the lions.

Enterprising printers might make a good thing by publishing "revolution cards" for sale in Santo Domingo. They should be printed in the same style and shape as the polo score cards, with the makeup of each team, average of previous games and schedule of coming revolutions. Then people would stand some chance of keeping track of the disturbance.

In Germany they make condensed eggs! The superfluous water is removed and sugar is added. The condensed eggs are put up for the market in hermetically sealed boxes, a one-pound box containing about fifteen eggs. This article finds a good market in South Africa, but during the present egg famine they might be imported into this country with more or less profit.

The royal family of Sweden is a thrifty one. It has a civil list of very nearly $500,000 from Norway and Sweden, and in addition the King has a little more than $82,000 a year from the fund voted to King Carl XIV. and his successors. At the same time His Majesty has palaces both in the city and country, in Sweden and Norway, and he owns stock in many undertakings.

Play distinguishes the higher from the lower animals, and it signifies possibility of education. Fishes do not play at all; the lower animals cannot be taught to play, and birds are entirely devoid of that instinct. But the kitten and the lamb are essentially playing animals. The human young, however, are the true players, and, in reality, it is play that develops them into manhood.

Battlefields afford no such displays of heroism as conflagrations do. To charge up to the cannon's mouth with thousands of comrades is a small thing compared with going alone into a burning building, groping through the smoke up stairs that cannot be seen, and may be on fire, and searching an upper room for a person threatened with an awful death, comments the Philadelphia Record. The engineer who stands by his engine with a collision impending; the fireman who crawls into an engine room where a steam pipe has burst and shuts off the steam that parboils him; and from which he does not always escape; the man who steps out into the street in front of a runaway team, catches the bridle, is dragged for a block, but stops the horses—these and other heroes of every day life have not the support of numbers and discipline; they rarely look forward to promotion, and still more rarely to monuments for their rewards; but the men who wear the Victoria Cross or the Iron Cross are not greater heroes.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

MARCH 26TH.

The senate committee on judiciary ordered a favorable report on a bill to protect the president of the United States.

The house began consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill. Ten hours was fixed for general debate on the measure, but at the end of an hour and a half there were no speakers ready to continue, and the house adjourned for lack of talkers.

Mr. Hemenway summed up the fiscal condition for the next fiscal year, showing that after all the legitimate expenses had been paid there would be $22,000,000 surplus for the year.

A number of minor bills were passed by unanimous consent.

MARCH 28TH.

The senate for three hours discussed the recent order of the pension bureau making old age an evidence of disability and then passed the District of Columbia appropriation bill. The discussion of the pension bill was based on the resolution offered some days ago by Mr. Carmack directing the committee on judiciary to inquire into the authority of the executive branch of the government to make such an order. Mr. Carmack contended that no such authority exists, but several republican senators argued that the order was in line with the regulation issued by Judge Lochren, commissioner of pensions under Mr. Cleveland, fixing 60 years of age as an evidence of infirmity.

Mr. Proctor presented a partial report on the army appropriation bill. He said that among the items disagreed to was that giving advanced rank to retired officers who had served in the civil war. He said that the house had accepted the senate provision for an increase in the engineer corps of the army, but that the senate had receded from its amendment for a three battalion regiment of native troops in Porto Rico. The report was accepted, and a further conference ordered.

The sundry civil bill was before the house, but debate took a wide range. Mr. Gillette, of Massachusetts, devoted considerable time in arguing some of the statements recently made on the floor by Mr. Speight, of Mississippi, regarding the race question. Mr. Gillette declared he had supposed there were no social grades in the United States, but that every man had the right to choose his own friends and associates among those most in sympathy with himself.

The tobacco trust was considered for some time and a resolution adopted providing for the printing of 14,000 copies of the merger decision for the use of members of the house.

An order issued by the war department, and which is of the greatest importance to the enlisted forces, prescribes the rules governing the purchase of discharges from the army. Discharge by favor is declared to be illegal and the only exceptions to the system of purchasing discharges is the case of a soldier who is the sole support of a surviving parent and who may be discharged after one year's service. Discharge by way of favor to veterans is prohibited. The purchase price of discharges is forty dollars.

Secretary Taft has made an adverse report on the bill which provides for the promotion to a major generalcy on the retired list of Brigadier General George Sternberg, retired, former surgeon general of the army. The action of the secretary is taken on the principle that specific promotions by legislative action are unwise and unfair to the line of the army.

Representative Gill, of California, has prepared and submitted a minority report against the resolution adopted by a majority of the committee on the judiciary to impeach Judge Swayne, of the northern district of Florida, for high misdemeanors. Every ground urged by the committee for impeachment is attacked in this report.

It has been definitely announced at the white house that President Roosevelt will not attend the St. Louis fair. He will make no more engagements to leave Washington until after the election. Mr. Roosevelt will make only one trip away from the capital and that will be to attend the Gettysburg memorial day exercises. The date for this was arranged months ago.

The eulogies of the late Senator Marcus A. Hanna will be heard in the senate Thursday, April 7th, instead of March 31st, as previously ordered.

There are 13,000,000 men of military age in the United States.

Increase of pensions under the new order to those who are now drawing pensions under the act of June 27, 1890, would require the following sum: Increase to those 62 years of age, $1,453,888; those 65 years of age, $1,606,530; increase to those 68 years of age, $374,040, or a total of $3,470,568, making a grand total of $14,174,568.

It is stated that the Northern Securities company is seeking a home in Cuba.

BURTON CONVICTED

In the Realto Grain Company Case.

Joseph Ralph Burton, senior United States senator from Kansas, was convicted by a jury in the United States district court on the charge of having accepted compensation to protect the interests of the Rialto Grain and Securities company of St. Louis before the postoffice department. The jury deliberated for forty-one hours.

For a time there threatened to be a disagreement in the jury.

A motion for a new trial was immediately filed by the counsel for the senator. Judge Adams thereupon ordered that Senator Burton appear in court either in person or by proxy at 10 o'clock from day to day until the court has heard the arguments for a new trial, and if decided against him to receive his punishment.

Senator Burton was indicted in January last. Although as a member of congress he could not be arrested until after that body had adjourned, he voluntarily surrendered himself to the prosecution authorities. He still had two years to serve in the senate. If the verdict is sustained Senator Burton will lose his seat in the senate and forever be prohibited from holding any office of public trust.

Senator Burton's recourse is an appeal to the United States circuit court of appeals, which body is the final arbitrar in his case.

Members of the senate committee on privileges and elections have discussed informally the conviction of Senator Burton, but until the matter comes before the committee the members are loath to give their personal views. It will take a formal action by the senate to declare Burton's seat vacant and this will not be done until a court of last resort has passed upon it. Senators know of no precedents, as no convictions of senators are within recollection.

Peculiar Will.

Copies of a remarkable will left by Colonel C. M. Strader, U. S. A., retired, have been received by several prominent friends of the dead man.

Colonel Strader requests that his body be cremated at Philadelphia and the ashes taken to Louisville, his birthplace, there to be scattered on the waters of the Ohio river.

"If, after this process," reads the will, "the angel Gabriel, for whom I have all due respect, can with his trumpet arouse me from the dead, he is a 'darling,' and I will take off my shadowy hat to him.

"I will pass away believing in no other diety than that which is specified by Pope as being 'The First Great Cause—Least Understood,' believing that my first duty is to my fellow man, and that he who lives this life in justice to his people, and follows the precepts of Him who said 'love thy neighbor as thy self' has nothing to fear from the hereafter—no matter what it is.

"With best wishes to you all, and 'drink hearty.'"

Guns were invented by Swartz, a German, about 1378, and brought into use by the Venetians in 1382. Cannon were invented earlier and at Amberg may still be seen a piece of ordnance inscribed 1303. Cannon were first used at the battle of Cress in 1346. In England they were first used at the siege of Berwick in 1405. It was not until 1544, however, that they were cast in England. They were employed on shipboard by the Venetians in 1539 and were in use among the Turks about the same time.

Ft. Payne Boy Takes Revenge for Whipping.

Another Near Tuscaloosa.

A report comes from Duncanville of a shooting which occurred last week, the victim being W. P. Curry, who was shot by Harold Curry, his eldest son, who is about 23 years of age. Curry is a very prominent farmer, he and his son being both well known in Tuscaloosa.

It is said by some that young Curry went into his father's room and without a word shot him and walked away, while others state that the father was under the influence of liquor and was very cruel to his wife, the treatment going beyond the endurance of the son.

ALABAMIANS CALLED.

Witnesses Against L. C. Harding at Tampa, Fla.

L. C. Harding, who was recently wanted by the Alabama authorities for obtaining money by fraud from several banks in that state and whom Governor Jennings, of Florida, refused to surrender upon the requisition of the governor of Alabama, is in jail at Tampa, Fla., on a charge of using the mails for fraudulent purposes. He is to have a hearing Saturday, and in order to secure evidence that will hold him the United States district attorney filed in the federal court a petition for witnesses to be summoned from Alabama.

The petition was granted and the subpoenaes have been issued and forwarded to the federal authorities in Alabama.

Harding will make a desperate legal fight to keep from being sent back to Alabama for trial, for he realizes that if he is not convicted in the federal court he will be tried in the state court of Alabama. When Harding was first arrested in Brooksville it was learned that he had an arrangement with the station agent and train men to notify him when any strangers came to town. He was constantly on the lookout for the authorities and it was only by pretending to be a land buyer that a deputy marshal finally got into the town without Harding being given the tip.

Asked $60,000; Awarded $400.

Damages in the amount of $400 was allowed J. W. Galliher, plaintiff in a suit against the Labor Review and others in the Anniston city court. The suit was originally for $60,000.

The cause of the suit was that the name of Mr. Galliher was published on the alleged unfair list of the carpenters' union. The newspaper was a weekly published there by T. J. Lamar and his brother, Charles Lamar. It ceased publication about three months ago. An appeal will be taken.

In an hour this young girl had passed to the great beyond, and her mother followed.

Under cover of darkness Sunday morning Vice Admiral Togo made another attempt to bottle up the Russian fleet in Port Arthur, but he failed again, and when after daylight Vice Admiral Makaroff steamed out to give battle the Japanese commander refused the challenge and sailed away. The Japanese practically repeated the tactics of February 24th by sending in four fire ships preceded by a torpedo flotilla, armed with Hotchkiss guns. The attempt was discovered by means of the searchlights and fire was opened from batteries and gunboats guarding the advance to the harbor. The Russian torpedo boat destroyer Silni was outside on scouting duty, and to the dash and nerve of her commander, Lieutenant Krinizki, is chiefly due the complete defeat of the plans of the Japanese. Seven Russians were killed and the commander and twelve of the crew were wounded.

Plans for Russian Canal.

The Russian state department is apprised that plans are completed for the proposed Riga-Cherson canal, which is to connect the Baltic with the Black sea. The distance is 1,468 miles, and the canal will cost about $180,250,000, and is designed for ships of heavy draft.

The review for the quarter just ended shows that 261 woodworking industries were established, that class of industry leading all others in point of numbers. Next in importance are natural gas and oil companies, of which ninety-three new ones were organized during the quarter. There were sixty-one new telephone companies, sixty ice and cold storage plants, fifty-two electric light and power plants, forty-six cotton and woolen mills, forty-five compresses and thirty-four iron working plants, [illegible] three oil mills and refineries and forty water works plants.

Frost Needles.

Reports from fruit growing sections of north Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee adjacent to Chattanooga are to the effect that the promised immense peach crop is safe. Its value means from $1,000,000 to $2,000,000 to the fruit growers of the section. From only one source, Rhea county, Tennessee, has the peach and plum crop been reported killed by last Monday's cold snap. The loss there will reach probably $150,000.

Central Texas was visited by frosts at many points Monday night. Fears are felt for cotton, which had been planted early in an effort to escape the boll weevil, thousands of acres having been sown. It is also thought that much tender garden truck was injured, but the fruit is believed to be safe.

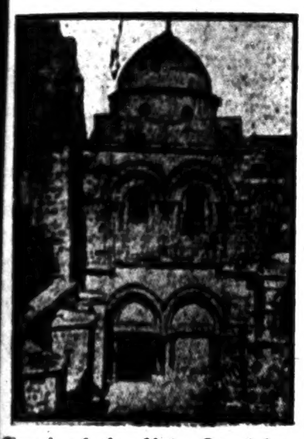
Scenes from the Land of Christ

HERE in all Christendom is there a child who has been taught to say, "Now I lay me down to sleep, I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to keep," but has heard this Scripture.

"Now, when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod, the King, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, saying, Where is He that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen His star in the east, and are come to worship Him."

At Bethlehem may be seen the Church of the Nativity, the oldest



Church of the Holy Sepulchre.

He was born into a land that had been ruled by great rulers, oppressed by infamous tyrants, fought over and plundered by merciless generals, and so seamed and scarred by wars, famines and pestilences, that every stone in its ruined walls and on its rock strewn plains was a silent memorial of woe; every tree that leafed, and every flower that bloomed was rooted in blood drenched soil.

In the little city of Nazareth, the Saviour of the world made His home for thirty years, and here He worked in his boyhood days as the "Son of the Carpenter." At the time of Christ, Nazareth was a despised city of Galilee. When it had been told round and about that the Messiah, long looked for by the Jews, had come in the person of the Son of Joseph, the question was asked, "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?" Since the time of Christ, the city has suffered the vicissitudes of wars at the hands of Greeks, Arabs, Crusaders and Turks, at times being almost eradicated, but always reviving to become again the prey of contending powers.

The history of the "Holy City" is the story of a nation, a narrative of incredible wars, or irrepressible religious faith, of peace that was slavery, of wonderful rulers, of prophets without peers, of vitality and valor that are astounding and of a conclusion so pitiful that even now the civilized world is moved with sorrow when it reads the tragedy of this people. But to the Christian heart Jerusalem is, and always will be, thought of as the place of the Saviour's sacrifice.

It was here, when but a child, that He confounded the wise doctors and here that He scourged the money changers and drove them from the Temple. It was here that He wept over His people, and it was here that Pontius Pilate took water and washed his hands before the multitude, saying: "I am innocent of the blood of this just person: see ye to it."

The Jerusalem of to-day is a mile long by half a mile wide, and its population is between 15,000 and 20,000 souls. Of this number one-third are Jews, one-third Mohammedans, and one-third Christians of the Greek Church. The City of David, or its ashes and debris, lies buried from twenty to forty feet under the accumulations of a score or more of centuries. It is for what they have been, and by no means for what they are, that people have come to sanctify and venerate these ruinous masses of buildings on the four mounts. The streets, houses and inhabitants of the Holy City are as filthy as those of any other Oriental city, if not worse. The very city reeks in filth, and its towering masses of ruins and wretchedness mark the spot where the greatest tragedy in the world's history took place.

JERUSALEM OF TO-DAY.

If we take the Mount of Olives from the Christian religion, from the time when the Saviour's feet first trod its dusty paths until the moment when from its heights He ascended into heaven, there would be destroyed one of the saddest pictures that uplifts of the most beautiful as well as one mankind. Every foot of that mount is sacred earth, even to people who have never seen and never expect to see the place that Christ hallowed by prayers and benediction. The days of its glory ended when the feet of the toiling Master ceased their journey and the cloud of God enveloped and bore away from its summit the great Regenerator of the world.

The most important building in Jerusalem is the Church of The Holy Sepulchre, supposed to be located on the ancient site of Calvary, and said to cover the famous sepulchre in which the Lord's body was laid after the crucifixion. This chapel, while not large, was magnificently decorated and formed a part of a church over the rock upon which the cross was erected. The Crusaders, during their occupancy of the city, added considerably to the extent of the structure, which they found in existence. After they were expelled by Saladin and his hosts, the Greeks succeeded in getting possession of a portion of the place. To-day the church is controlled by a syndicate of faiths of the Eastern Christians, but with the Turk seated as guardian in the bazar into which the area front is converted. As for Jews, one could not, if it would, obtain an entrance. Upon the walls of the church are many scriptural happenings, ideas of the Crusaders and other works of the sculptor's art.

AN EASTER-EGG GAME.

AN Easter game which does not have to do with eggs is like a Thanksgiving dinner without turkey.

Almost every boy has played at breaking eggs, that is, knocking his egg against some other boy's egg to see which of the two will break. It is essential, of course, that both eggs should be hard boiled, otherwise the contents of the egg which is broken are likely to spread disaster.

If a boy is not convinced of his rival's honesty it is an excellent plan to make sure that the egg which is to be broken is really an egg and not an imitation made of wood or china. On more than one occasion boys have been astonished at the wonderful breaking powers of some egg only to find that the owner of the phenomenon had been playing a game at the expense of his companions.

A most interesting way of breaking eggs, or rather of trying to break an opponent's egg is found in the game of "Rolling." There is much more in this game than merely knocking the eggs together, and the ability to win depends much more upon the skill of the player than it does upon the toughness of his egg. The game can be played either indoors or out of doors.

If the game is played indoors a small inclined plane must be made by leaning a sewing board or some other flat surface against the wall or upon a box shown in the illustration. Out of doors a pile of sand or dirt or the side of a hill will answer the purpose of the board.

The diagram shows an imaginary "run," the plane on which the game is played. The "run" is divided into two equal parts by a heavy line running down the centre.

One side of the "run" is known as the red territory and one side is known as the black territory.

The eggs, as in the case of the ordinary breaking game, must be hard boiled, and after the fashion of Easter eggs can be decorated with bright colors.

The players place their eggs at the top of the inclined plane (see A and B of the diagram) and start the eggs rolling obliquely toward the point C, where they will, of course, strike each other. After a little practice the eggs can be made to hit each other every time, particularly if the small end of the egg is turned toward the line.

Turning the small end of the egg toward the line gives the eggs a tendency to roll in toward the line.

DIAGRAM.

E and D are two small black circles drawn about three inches from the line which divides the red and black territory.

If an egg is broken at the point C the opposing egg wins fifty points, which gives its owner the game.

If the eggs do not touch each other no count is scored.

If the egg rolled from the red territory, often striking the black egg, rolls between the circle E and the central line it counts ten points; if it rolls on the far side of the circle, counting by the central ine, it counts fifteen; if it rolls directly over the circle it counts twenty-five.

The black egg may roll up its counts in exactly the same way by making inroads into the red territory.

If the eggs show a tendency to break when they reach the bottom of the run place a cushion or some other soft substance in their way to soften the fall.—J. C. Beard, in the Los Angeles Times.

HEY GROW

Mark well yon slender stalk of green
Just springing forth the clods between
While April airs are chilly;
With filmy leaflets closely curled,
It looks a tiny banner furled,
But soon will be a lily.

A sparrow's weight would bend it low,
A little flood would overflow,
A little frost would kill it;
And e'en when grown it reaches up
And lifts to heaven a heavenly cup,
A little dew would fill it.

Yet all the power that Newton saw
Bind in one vast and equal law
Pebble and planet glowing,
Cannot, when spring is come, keep hid
The lily 'neath its coverlid,
Nor stay its buds from blowing.

It knows no labor but to bloom—
God's darling need no cares assume,
No tribute pay but beauty;
It cannot but live in the light,
And still to keep its garments white
Is nature more than duty.

What if to-morrow it must die?
Is there no Easter in the sky
To earth's dead blossoms given?
Yon world would forfeit half its bliss
If what is sweetest here in this Brief springtime, had no heaven.

"Much more, O ye of little faith"—
(This is the word the Master saith)
"Much more to you His will is!"
—Nay, but it were enough for me
Could I, O Master! only be
To Thee as are Thy lilies.
—W. H. Woods, in Youth's Companion.

The Saxon Easter.

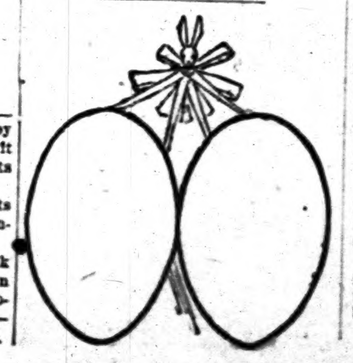
Our Saxon ancestors kept up the celebration of Easter for eight days. It was a kind of thanksgiving, the length of time devoted by the pagans to their spring festival. After the long lenten season they seemed to have become tired of so much goodness, a feeling which their descendants seem to appreciate, tired of giving up pleasure and worldly attraction; this, together with the natural welcome to the spring, gladly prolonged the festivities.

AN EASTER DUEL.

The Brothers Egg were both in love,
And with the same young lady;
A duel they resolved to fight,
So chose a place quite shady.

Miss Leghorn Egg (that was her name)
Heard of the coming duel,
And said at once she'd do her best
To stop a fight so cruel.

She called a friend, Miss Specklespot,
And to the woods they hurried,
And there they found the Brothers Egg
A-fighting, as she worried.



THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR APRIL 3.

Subject: Jesus Visits Tyre and Sidon, Mark vii., 24-37—Golden Text, Heb. xii., 6—Memory Verses, 31-33—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. A mother's plea (vs. 24-30). 24. "From thence He arose." That is, after delivering the discourses at Capernaum. Edersheim thinks that Jesus and the twelve apostles went immediately to the north country, while others think there was a short delay in, or near, Capernaum before starting out. "Borders of Tyre and Sidon." Tyre and Sidon were heathen cities on the east coast of the Mediterranean Sea. Their religion was a base and corrupting nature worship. Beelzebub, the name adopted by the Jews as a name for Satan, was one of their deities, who was supposed to be the author of "all the pollutions of idol worship." "Into a house." In all probability the house of a Jew. Edersheim thinks He must have tarried here several days, the fact that He desired to be kept hid, but could not, would suggest this. "No man knew it." He judged it proper to conceal Himself awhile from the Pharisees, who were plotting against Him. "Could not be hid." It seems that He was personally known to many of this country, who had seen and heard Him in Galilee.

25. "Whose young daughter." The actual sufferings of the daughter were great, but the sufferings which the mother endured by sympathy were still greater. Our sufferings for others are great in proportion to the amount of love we have for them. Hence, the greatest sufferer on earth was Christ. "An unclean spirit." Matthew says her daughter was "grievously vexed with a devil." This was certainly a sad case. Nothing can destroy the peace of a home more than to have a daughter possessed with Satanic influences. The spirit that possessed this girl was an unclean—a vile spirit. "At His feet." This at once showed the humility of the woman; she assumed the most lowly attitude possible as she appeals to His mercy.

26. "Woman was a Greek." By language. The Jews called those who were idolaters Greeks, or Gentiles. "A Syrophenician by nation." A Syrophenician Phoenicia belonged to the Roman province of Syria. She was a Syrian of Phoenicia. "Besought Him." Earnestly entreated Him. The case was an urgent one, and, on her knees, at His feet, she poured out her request. "Would cast forth." She believed He had power to do this. Matthew says she "cried unto Him saying, Have mercy on me, O Lord, Thou son of David." She pleaded for mercy; she knew she could make no claim upon Him in any other way. The woman recognized Jesus as the Jewish Messiah, she called Him "Lord" and "The son of David." "The devil, etc." Here is a plain, straightforward confession. There is no effort to cover up the family troubles, and gloss over matters, and make it appear that, after all, her daughter is "quite respectable."

II. Faith triumphing (vs. 27-30). 27. "Jesus said." The woman's discouragements were great: 1. Her advantages had been small. She was a heathen woman, with but little means of even obtaining the light of the Hebrew Scriptures. 2. At first Jesus did not reply to her request (Matt. 15: 24). 3. The disciples besought Him to send her away. 4. When Jesus did speak He seemed to repel her. The soul, seeking salvation, frequently meets these same tests, and many become discouraged by them. "The children." The Jews. "First be filled." They are the favored people. The gospel was first to be offered to the Jews, and to them our Lord's personal ministry on earth was chiefly restricted. Jesus told her that His blessings were for the lost of Israel (Matt.) "Not meet." It is not suitable—not the proper thing to do. "Children's bread." To take those blessings that belong to the Jews. "Unto the dogs." This was the severest test of all. The Gentiles were considered by the Jewish people as no better than dogs, and Jesus only used a form of speech which was common; but it must have been very offensive to the heathen. Would this woman resent it? Would her pride at last be stirred? No. She "shrunk and shriveled" into nothingness at His feet, and her faith still held on for the desired blessing.

28. "Yes, Lord." "Truth, Lord" (Matt.) It is all so. The Jews, the favored ones ought to be blessed first: I know I am a heathen, only a Gentile dog. "Yet." Now follows (1) an answer to His argument against entertaining her petition, and (2) a most touching appeal to His clemency. "The dogs, eat of the children's crumbs." I only ask such kindness as the dogs of any family enjoy. If I am a dog, give me at least a dog's fare.

29. "For this saying." Her faith had triumphed. Jesus said, "O woman, great is thy faith" (Matt.) There are several other graces that shone bright in her: wisdom, humility, meekness, patience, perseverance in prayer; but these were the product of her faith, and therefore Christ commends that, because, of all graces, faith honors Christ most; therefore, of all graces, Christ honors faith most. "Devil is gone." Now, at this very moment, thy request is granted. Though our Lord's mission was to the lost sheep of Israel, yet He always honored personal faith in Himself, wherever found. "Persevering faith and prayer are next to omnipotent. No person can thus pray and believe without receiving all his soul requires.

III. A man healed (vs. 31-37). 31. "Departing." Leaving the "borders" of Phoenicia, Jesus made a circuit to the southeast. He crossed the Jordan and sought seclusion in Decapolis, southeast of the Sea of Galilee. 32. "One; deaf." The healing of this man is related only by Mark. "An impediment." He was not a mute, but a stammerer. "Beseech." Earnestly entreat. This shows their faith in Christ's ability. 33. "Took him aside." The man would thus be more deeply impressed, and a public healing would cause the people to come together in great crowds. "Put His fingers, etc." Some external sign was needed to show to others that the result really proceeded from Christ. He put His fingers into his ears to mark the ear-drum that was to be quickened; he spit and touched his tongue to show that its stiffened muscles must be lubricated into liberness; He looked up into heaven to show that the source of power was God; He spoke the word to mark that the effect was instant in time upon the command. 34. "Sighed." Christ's sympathies were touched, and He sighed when He saw the suffering and sorrow around Him. "Ephphatha." The actual Aramaic word used by our Lord. 35. "Spake plain." When Christ undertakes a case He always does in complete work. In verses 36 and 37 Jesus charged them to tell no man, but they published it so much the more and were astonished beyond measure.

IN Montgomery and some other counties the Board of Registrars have made appointments for the registration of voters holding certificates from other counties, and competent legal opinion is expressed that young men who have become of age since the last registration are also entitled to register now in time to vote at the coming primary. We are of the opinion that the Chilton Registrars should meet and register all those who are entitled to register, and hope that they will meet at the court house, clanton, on Friday and Saturday of next week.

THE near approach of the primary, only one week from next Monday, causes all thinking men to come to a decisive point. We are not advocating the cause of any particular candidate for county office, but we must say that chilton cannot produce a better set of men from which to select our county officers. But there are other matters to be considered—not only county officers, but State officers have to be nominated, and in this primary the people nominate the judges of the supreme court, the circuit judges, the chancellors, circuit solicitors, and the president of the railroad commission. Everyone knows that the Democratic nominees are the men who will fill the state offices, then why should any man deprive himself of the right of voting for whichever candidate he prefers, for the simple reason that there may be opposition candidates for some county office?

ADDRESS OF DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Democratic Executive Committee held in Clanton on the 2nd day of February, 1904, it was unanimously decided to issue an address to the people.

We believe that most men, in their cooler and better moments, are moved by what they believe to be right, and that, if this were not so, the world would grow worse instead of better. There must be differences of opinion, but such differences should be based upon principle, and those adhering to the one side or the other should have some great aim in view; some aim which rises higher than individual interest and looks to the well being of humanity in general.

In a free government, such as we enjoy, the well being of the State is a matter which engages the pride and patriotism of all good citizens. There is hardly an Alabamian, regardless of his political views, whose patriotism would not be insulted, if, while sojourning beyond his beloved State, he should hear her reproached, and there is hardly a man in Chilton county who would not enjoy seeing his county take that rank among the other counties of the State to which she is entitled by reason of her natural advantages, her women, her men and her patriotism. As matters now stand Chilton does not enjoy her merited place as one of the counties of Alabama. She does not rank as Republican, Populist, or Democratic. There are few such cases in the history of republican governments. She is not recognized by Republicans because they know she is not Republican. She is not recognized as Populist, because there are no other Populists to recognize her. She is not recognized as Democratic, because she has not been Democratic. She stands aloof, passing down the highway of Time and no one knows, and few seem to care, where. Is there any good reason why this course should be further pursued? If so, what is it? We know of none. The sore toes of a few men furnished no reason to a man who loves his country for continuing this nothiness. If you believe in the principles of the Republican party, go to work and do something for our county in that party, if you can. If you are a Populist you came from good Democratic stock and won't you now come home where you can do some good. You don't believe that Chilton county should remain in this condition or, that our pride and patriotism should have no other shape than that given it in the Smart Alex catch words and cheap phrases of hatred and abuse, which so easily slip from the tongue of the small politician. We shall not indulge in abuse. Let the dead past bury its dead. If others have anything to offer you, weigh it in the light of reason and patriotism.

We offer to the white men of Chilton county the hand of fellowship. Let us all take communion at the same table, as authorized by the State authority of our party. We invite you to join us for the good you may do us and we may do you. Let's forge our swords into plowshares, and turn our discordant quarrels in to the voice of peace. General Lee did not look backward at Appomattox to find an excuse for Guerrilla warfare but brave patriot that he was, accepted the results of war and at once began to make the best of the present and future.

Come with us. Your heart is already there, for we are brothers, and your interest is also there. Help us nominate a Supreme Court, a President of the Railroad Commission, the Circuit Judge, the Solicitor, the Chancellor, county officers, and to select delegates to the National convention, and electors for President and Vice President of the United States. Our party brings this opportunity to your door, and with the least possible inconvenience to you, your vote may be cast directly for the man of your choice for these important offices. Some of these officers will be called upon to pass upon the life, liberty and property of some of our citizens, and we want your voice in their selection.

It is far from us to ask that you support any particular candidate. We invite you to fairly consider the ends to be accomplished, and when you have done this, we believe that you can not agree that political parties should be guided by prejudice, but that good American citizens should always be moved by reason and patriotism.

Let us stand together for the good of all.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, March 28, 1904

There is a disposition here on the part of many Democratic senators to fight the appropriation asked for by Secretary Cortelyou, of the Department of Commerce and Labor. They say that he does not hesitate to ask for money galore, but that he does nothing and so far has apparently made no attempt to do anything to obtain facts concerning the operations of the trusts in this country with the view to the widest publicity and the passage of legislation to curb them when found to be in the criminal class and out of the reach of the legislation now on the statute books. For that very reason there may be a spirited debate in the Senate on further large appropriations for Mr. Cortelyou's department. There is also talk of the resignation of Mr. Cortelyou.

In this connection there is much talk here anent the interview with the Attorney General of the U. S. immediately following the Northern Securities merger decission by the Supreme court. There is an unwritten law here that the President and the cabinet officials cannot be interviewed, and no matter what they might say to any newspaper man here they would not be quoted in the papers without their full and free consent. So, the conclusion is irresistible that the Attorney General sent for the representive of the Associated Press in order to say what he was quoted as saying the very next morning after the merger decision was rendered. That interview was clearly a "sop" to the trusts. In order to allay the ranking feelings of the trusts over the merger decision; he gave it in clear and unmistakable terms this was to be the last fight of the administration against the trusts and they might rest easy the balance of the year, or, for that matter the remainder of the time that Roosevelt occupies the White House or that Knox is the Attorney General. In the language of the Attorney General, the administration "does not intend to run amuck" with the business interests of the country. If that does not mean in substance what I said above then I do not know the meaning of the language of the average national politician and my work here has been in vain. I have maintained all along that this is exactly what the people of the country might expect from this administration. It has been endeavoring with might and main to get the people to believe that it was "again" the trusts, but the decision of the Supreme court, by a bare majority vote against the merger, was as much a surprise to the Attorney General as it was to the criminal combine involved in the decision, hence he made haste to get to the trusts of the country with a disclaimer that they intended to pursue the matter further.

CHARLES A. EDWARDS.

PROFIT

The matter of feed is of tremendous importance to the farmer. Wrong feeding is loss. Right feeding is profit.

The up-to-date farmer knows what to feed his cows to get the most milk, his pigs to get the most pork, his hens to get the most eggs. Science.

But how about the children? Are they fed according to science, a bone food if bones are soft and undeveloped, a flesh and muscle food if they are thin and weak and a blood food if there is anemia?

Scott's Emulsion is a mixed food; the Cod Liver Oil in it makes flesh, blood and muscle, the Lime and Soda make bone and brain. It is the standard scientific food for delicate children.

Send for free sample.

LAKE REGION STORM SWEPT

DAMAGE AT HAMMOND, IND.

One of the Most Severe Tornadoes Ever Known in the West Devastates Western Indiana, Northern Illinois and Eastern Michigan — Chicago Suburbs Suffer Greatly—Rainfall Injures Crops.

Chicago, Ill.—One of the most severe tornadoes that ever swept over this part of the country wrought enormous damage in Western Indiana, Northern Illinois and Eastern Michigan.

Widespread damage was done at Hammond, Ind., the first spot where the wind, rain and lightning worked their havoc. North of Chicago, at Evanston, where the Northwestern University is located, Rogers Park and Thornton report by telephone, through circuitous routes, that the loss of property was attended by loss of life.

The town of Indiana Harbor, twenty miles southeast of Chicago, on the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad, was the heaviest sufferer. One man, L. Barker, the proprietor of a dry goods store, was killed and fifteen persons who were in his store when the storm struck, were injured, some of them seriously. Ten other persons were hurt in the town.

Barker's store was entirely demolished. Eighteen residences were blown down, and several persons were hurt in the ruins of their homes.

In Grand Crossing, eight miles south of the centre of the city, a number of buildings were wrecked, freight cars blown about the yards, and the tracks of the railroads covered with debris to such an extent that the majority of incoming trains were compelled to call upon their passengers to assist in removing the wreckage from the tracks so that the trains could proceed.

The telegraph and telephone companies suffered greatly south of the city. Street car lines from Chicago in the direction of Whiting and Indiana Harbor were all out of business, their wires having been blown down.

To the north of the city the storm was also severe, much damage having been done in the suburbs of Evanston, Rogers Park and Thornton.

In the city proper no buildings were damaged to any extent, although there were a number of leveled chimneys, and the smokestacks of a few factories lost their tops.

In Thornton the frame dwelling of E. Gardner was blown into a stone quarry and was deduced to kindling wood. Gardner was fatally hurt, and his wife sustained serious injuries. Several other people were injured and it was impossible to summon aid by telephone or telegraph. Mounted messengers were sent to the town of Dalton, five miles away, to summon medical aid. The Lutheran Church at Thornton was blown down and a number of residences damaged.

The fall of rain west and north of Evanston, which is twelve miles north of Chicago, was so heavy that the crops were badly damaged. It is said that the loss to the winter wheat in this section alone will amount to $50,000.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—A small but destructive tornado struck the south end of the city, doing damage that reaches into the thousands. Two persons were injured, barns were laid flat, chimneys and other portions of houses were blown away, stock was killed, houses were thrown from their foundations and trees uprooted. Besides, there was considerable damage by lightning.

STRIKE BATTLE IN TENNESSEE.

Train Load of Miners Fired On From Ambush.

Dayton, Tenn.—A train load of miners returning from the mines of the Dayton Coal and Iron Company was fired on and four or five men were wounded.

The attacking party was concealed in the rocks and bushes. The assailants used shotguns and Winchesters.

The volley was returned by officers on the train, and one of the assailants was wounded.

The attack grew out of friction between union and non-union men, because the latter have refused to join in a strike that has been pending several months.

SHOT HIS WIFE AND CHILD

Brooklyn Restaurant Keeper Then Killed Himself.

Maddened by Jealousy Christian Kirschoffer Attempts Triple Tragedy—Shooting Preceded by Quarrel.

New York City.—Driven to madness by jealousy of his pretty wife, Christian Kirschoffer, forty years of age, shot her, killed his four-year-old son, Freddy, and then sent a bullet into his own brain at his boarding-house, at South First street and Kent avenue, Williamsburg.

The shooting was preceded by a brief quarrel, which was ended by the husband drawing a revolver.

The wife picked up the boy, and, screaming, started to run from the room. She had reached the door when the man fired. One bullet pierced the child's head and another struck the woman in the face.

Kirschoffer then fired upon himself, the ball entering his temple. He was dead when the ambulance arrived.

No one saw the tragedy but the family servant, Fanny Curry, who was on the floor below. She said Kirschoffer, on returning from a butcher shop, handed the purchase to the girl, and then turning to his wife, told her sternly he wished to see her and the boy upstairs.

When Policeman Fallen, brought by the servant, rushed into the parlor on the second floor of the house, he found the husband dead and the boy unconscious with a wound in his head on the floor beside him. The wife leaned out of the window unconscious with a gaping wound in her right temple.

The servant says the jealousy of Kirschoffer had been manifested a great deal of late and the husband had insisted upon the wife explaining in minute detail how she spent the time when he was absent. This demand she had resisted and altercations had been frequent.

TORNADO WRECKS TOWN.

Great Damage Done by Wind and Hail in Missouri.

Higginsville, Mo. — Fifty buildings were partly wrecked, one man was mortally wounded and several others hurt, the town was in total darkness and the streets are strewn with debris as the result of a tornado and hailstorm which swept over Higginsville.

Corder and Alma, Mo., were considerably damaged. According to meagre reports several houses in both places were wrecked.

It is said that 2000 windows were broken by the storm here. More than fifty houses were unroofed. The loss is $40,000.

SENT POISON CANDY TO SELF.

Dye had disclosed to her that he had a wife who had discovered their attachment. Miss Nelson committed suicide. The cancellation stamp on the box is similar to the stamp used in the Pierre postoffice. It is said that Miss Nelson, in letters written to Mrs. Dye, had threatened to take poison.

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

AN ELOQUENT DISCOURSE BY THE REV. A. B. KINSOLVING, D. D.

Subject: Presumptuous Sins—The Commonest Sin Among Men Is Sacrificing the Interests of the Spiritual and Eternal to the Carnal and Temporal.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Dr. Arthur B. Kinsolving, rector of Christ Church, preached an excellent sermon Sunday morning, on "Presumptuous Sins." The two texts were from Matthew iv. 5 and 6: "Then the devil taketh him into the holy city and he set Him on the pinnacle of the temple and saith unto Him, If Thou art the Son of God cast Thyself down for it is written, He shall give His angels charge concerning Thee, and on their hands they shall bear Thee up, lest haply Thou dash Thy foot against a stone." Jesus said unto him, "Again it is written, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God." and Psalms xci. 11: "Keep back Thy servant also from presumptuous sins; let them not have dominion over me; then shall I be upright and innocent from the great transgression." Dr. Kinsolving said:

In pursuing our purpose of trying to interpret the unfolding life of the Lord Jesus and to read its lessons for ourselves we preached last Sunday the temptation of Jesus. We found in the narrative of the temptation a record of just a mental and spiritual struggle as we should have expected Him to go through at this stage of His career. It is impossible to suppose that He could have decided instantaneously and without long meditation and conflict upon the plan of His life as the "Son of God." Clearly He had a plan and adhered to it throughout life.

We remarked upon the deep interest that each one of us has in the moral struggle and victory of Jesus and how just in proportion as we are led by the Holy Spirit to lofty and noble ideals of life, we are conscious of these subtle earthly lures which would deflect us from our truest paths.

We spoke of the fatalistic non-resistance to temptation so much in vogue nowadays as something not worth while, because in a world where the frailty of man is exposed to such overwhelming allurements of world, flesh and devil, it is certain beforehand that a vast percentage of men and women will fall. The Maker of men and not the victims of sin is the most responsible, so the school teaches, and by such doctrines the person assailed is induced to yield "without a struggle." Jesus' conflict and victory teach us that this is a libel upon God. Through a putting forth of such strength as we have, through a prayerful desire to be and do what is right, our vision is cleared and our wills grow strong, and while God can never entirely shelter us from temptation He can and does defend us in temptation, and with every solicitation to wrongdoing show us the way of escape.

Then we tried to learn the lesson of Christ's first temptation. The question which first confronted Him as our representative was the old and ever-pressing question of daily bread. The tempter proceeds upon the assumption that all man needs for his sustenance is food for the physical life. You have a right to this, he says, on any terms, and there is nothing else to be considered by comparison with this. So make provision for yourself and the body's bread first. "You are to feed the hungry; feed first yourself." "If Thou art the son of God, command that these stones be made loaves—and then You may live to execute Your Father's business."

The answer of Jesus came from a Man gaunt and weary by long fasting and days of conflict. "The physical life is not man's only life, and I will not act as if it were," He says, "by exempting Myself from privations which I have come to share with My brethren. If I am hungry, that lies within the will of God for Me, and I choose hunger in that will, rather than satisfaction outside of and against that will. I will not hurt or kill My moral or spiritual life as the filial, dependent and obedient Child of God by providing on guilty terms for the feeding of My bodily life. For if, through privation, the bodily wrapping of life should perish there would still be left My essential manhood and My eternal relationship with the Father. Therefore I choose the obedient and dependent life, and will trust the care and wisdom of My Father unto the end."

Jesus there enunciated a philosophy of life which is as sane as it is lofty and spiritual. Perhaps the commonest sin among men is sacrificing the interests of the spiritual and eternal to the carnal and temporal. All about us they are prone to live as if man did live by bread alone, and where this is true they will have bread on any terms, and getting it becomes the consuming passion of life. By choosing, instead, the hunger that resulted from dwelling in the will of God, rather than the passing gratification gotten at the price of disobedience, our Master won for us the great initial victory over temptation, and by His spirit and example has been leading millions to victory along the same path ever since.

In the second temptation—I take the order given in St. Matthew as the natural order—the point of attack has changed. The tempter had sought to overthrow the obedience of Christ by an assault upon His physical appetites and faith in His Father's care. He had overcome the temptation through the strength of His trust in God. Now the attack is made upon Him through that very trust. "An unswerving loyalty and confidence in the will of God has been discovered that loving trust it was which made Him choose to suffer the pangs of hunger, rather than arbitrarily terminate them by a miracle wrought for Himself. Ah, then, here is His strength, so near by there must lurk His weakness!" "Then," we read, "the devil taketh Him into the holy city and setteth Him upon that corner of the wing of the temple which overlooks from its dizzy height the priests' court below, where the thousands of Jewish pilgrims have gathered from all over the world. "If Thou be the Son of God, cast Thyself down." That will be an ideal and perfect test of your filial relation and your Father's care for You. Descend, heaven-borne, into the midst of priests and people, win instantly the acclamation and popular welcome which You will else have to conquer by long years of suffering and failure. What worship and honor and homage will be Yours! How quickly You will stand at the head of believing Israel! Surely, there is nothing to fear, for it is written, "He shall give His angels charge concerning Thee; and on their hands they shall bear Thee up, lest haply Thou dash Thy foot against a stone."

The very choice of the location of the temptation attests the subtlety of the tempter. He is taken to the Holy City and to a pinnacle, or wing, of the temple. Think what must have been Jesus' sacred love for Jerusalem and how naturally and deeply His mind would have been influenced by the surroundings. All the passionate religious patriotism of His nature, all His deepest springs of feeling would be touched by the sacred associations of the Holy City. "Beautiful for elevation, the joy of the whole earth, the city of the great king, whither the tribes of the Lord go up year by year for worship." How precious were its sights: "As the mountains lie around about Jerusalem, so encampeth the Lord about them that love Him." "If I forget thee, O, Jerusalem, let my right hand forget its cunning." If for a devout Jew there was a spot on earth which warranted the most unconditioned trust, it was the temple of Jehovah in the first religious capital of the world. Here it was, while His soul was vibrating with a triumphant sense of trust was by overcoming the first temptation that the insidious attack is made in effort was to betray Him into presumption. All the wonderful past declared God with His covenant people would be out in memory, all the wealth of promises over hopes and promises now long deferred, and now on the eve of fulfillment—a tenderness which often came out in words wet with tears. He cried: "Oh, Jerusalem, Jerusalem, often would I have gathered thy children together as a hen gathereth her brood under her wings but ye would not." It was in the heart of His own Jerusalem and from the summit of His Father's city that He was tempted by His enemy. The wily adversary to commit the presumption. Beside the influence of the place and associations, the young tempter appealed to something most sacred to the written word of God, the guarantee of truth and actions. "For devil can quote Scripture to his purpose. If Thou be the Son of God, Thou" (known, for it is written He shall give His angels charge concerning Thee, etc.

First, we must have recourse to the Christian canons of interpretation before we can say what we are tempted to do or are not to do in what God has promised. Secondly, He would have from the wing of the temple, because He knew that we have been to tempt God. We must not make experiments with those we sincerely trust." When a man asks a prayer test, or any like thing, he experiments with God, because he lacks the subtle spiritual faith which is the only means by which he can reach God. To presume, not trifle with or put Him to the test. As long as Jesus remained within the sphere of the revealed will of His Father He could trust Him. If He should transgress or contravene that will then He would no longer feel He had a right to His care. In other words, Jesus knew that His second temptation, flushed with victory which must have given an impetus to faith in the Father's power and sufficiency, declares to us that it is not well to have a care for ourselves as we commit ourselves into the keeping of God. Because we are God's children we must not break the laws of the world to which we belong and expect Him to miraculously interfere to prevent the consequences. Contempt for nature and practical atheism is a wretched policy to begin a religious life with. We live under physical laws as well as under moral law, under spiritual laws. It is fancy that because we have come to know the power of the spiritual and even the supernatural, we are at liberty to ignore the face of known physical laws, or the well and widely received moral laws. It is an error, and for it men are always paying in the end. God is the source of all physical laws and we tempt the Lord our God when we break them. We are not to be saved either, "too exclusively or presumptuously" upon the care of God. As far as practical reason serves us, we must take counsel of that, recognizing that God helps those who help themselves. Prayer, as I consider it a very real medicine, Peruna, as I consider it a very real medicine to take when the system is run down from overwork. About two years ago I felt that I must take a long rest, as I had been unable to work for over a month. I could not regain my strength. I could not sleep at night and was in a very nervous, high strung condition. I decided to try what Peruna would do to build up my strength, and am pleased to say that I began to improve very shortly, and in less than two months I was able to take up my work, and felt better than I have for years. I take it now twice a year, and find that it keeps me in perfect health." Mrs. Bassett was for over ten years the forewoman of a plant furnishing ladies' wear and employing hundreds of women.

Tired, Nervous Women.

There are thousands of them everywhere who a few bottles of Peruna would do the most untold benefit. As a tonic and nerve restorer it has no equal. It builds up the system, it gives strength to the circulation, and at once restores the appetite and digestion. No feeble woman should be without Peruna.

If Jesus, the exceptional and prominent object of divine care, had yielded to this "Cast Thyself down." He would have broken away from us. His brethren who live under moral and physical laws, and second, He would have "subdued" for a life environed by nature, guided, fed by it, participant in its laws, a life dependent because subject to its laws, a life distinguished from nature, hostile to it, refusing to tempt God or to break away from the human lot and world, showed us the faith and strength of a genuine trust in God. It is not nervous, fanatical or presumptuous. "It neither courts nor fears death." It is prudent, wary, will not overstep the limits of a sober faith, but yet, when the will of God clearly demands it in the path of duty, it bravely faces death and dares all hell!

My friends, the modern sin of presumption turns up under many forms. Sometimes it appears in the guise of religious fanaticism, in the purblind assumption of some ecclesiastical charlatan uttering with swelling words of vanity some new opinion which he claims to be of equal authority with the teachings of the Word of God. You have it in the vaticinations of the "mother" of Christian Science, in the system's slavish literalism and monstrous overclaims. The contempt for physical that the system breathes, breeds, the refusal to give medicine of those stores which God has laid up for us in leaf and plant and flower and mineral, and which millions of educated men have given their lives to make sure, the willingness to cast themselves and child over the precipice, claiming the promise of certain Scriptures as their warrant for escaping destruction is, in the case of most men and women to-day, a sin of presumption. The system is against the incorporate common sense of the race, against the proportion of faith; it discredits doctrines like the blessed truths of God's deity and atonement, which have been held by the overwhelming majority of the members of the Christian church in every age from the beginning. "It is wrong," they cry. Yes, Christ teaches us otherwise, and "again it is written: Thou shalt not make the trial of the Lord thy God."

You have it—one hesitates to allude in the Christian pulpit to the vulgar sect of the sacrosanct polygamy of the Mormons, which such an informing exposé has been made by Congressional committees in the past week. Not that the Mormon is the only adulterer; would God it were! but he is the only man now before the Christian public who claims a new revelation of later and higher authority that made through the holy and blessed Jesus, expressly sanctioning his foul creed:

"If as the chosen of God have the dispensation which uproots and supersedes the morality taught by the Lord Jesus Christ, the Mohammed's about the family more than Christ's, therefore I bear, by reference sanctioned by a voice from heaven henceforth my revelation and all that is above the law of the land. Other men may have to comply, but I set it at ignore it." There is not one of the most modern times a more pestiferous example of religious hypocrisy and debauchery when we remember that representatives of recent years emissaries from Utah have proclaimed this accursed system now in the East, chiefly among simple miners, farmers and mountaineers, we realize the wrong in permitting it thus long.

This country can never endure polygamist and part monogamist.

But, my friends, the capital sin of presumption is committed nearer home than this. There is self satisfied sin which makes men fancy that they can break all manner of spiritual laws, commit themselves down all sorts of religious precipices, take all kinds of risks in the affairs of the soul at Satan's devices, and yet that somehow at the end they will come out without loss! It is not the ignorant about God, but those who have had good opportunity to know and disobey Him who fall into this sin.

When any Christian man has fallen easily and airily from a life with God, or does a sin against light, he commits the sin of presumption. When a man of the world deliberately violates the known will of God, our Saviour, your pastor, relying upon some vague hope of forbearance for which we have no definite warrant, he is approaching the sin of presumption.

Brethren, our safety lies in humble and perfect humility and simplicity in Christ.

"Keep back Thy servant also from presumptuous sins; let them not have dominion over me; then shall I be upright and innocent from the great transgression."

PE-RU-NA

Dr. Bertha M. Rush, Mill Manager, Pittsburg, Pa., Superintendent of Society of Methodist Protestant Sunday Schools, and leading soprano of the church, writes: "Words cannot describe my thankfulness to you for Peruna. I was a confirmed sufferer from catarrh for years and was very much run-down and nervous. I was constantly nervous, and had the most distressing headaches. I was then induced to try Peruna. I had been under the care of a physician advised me to leave the city, but as it was not convenient for me to do this at that time, I took the advice of a friend and sent to me a bottle of Peruna. I took it regularly, and when the first bottle was gone I felt so much better that I procured another bottle, and when the first bottle was gone I felt so much better that I procured another and took them faithfully. When I had taken three bottles I looked like a new woman. I had gained in flesh, my appetite returned, all my old symptoms had disappeared, and I have never been more than thankful to Peruna for what it has done for me."

Pius Tenth has recently discovered that he is not, as supposed, the two hundred and sixty-fourth pope, but the two hundred and fifty-eighth. He has eliminated no less than six pontiffs from the list of his predecessors. In the "Gerarchia Catolica," or official annual of the holy seat, which has just appeared, he is set down as the two hundred and fifty-eighth pope. During the closing years of the reign of Leo Thirteenth the extensive researches of Mgr. Duchesne, director of the French school at Rome, brought to light the fact that six popes of the period preceding the crusades were more or less mythical, their existence being based on legend and tradition rather than on actual history. They have been eliminated, and no longer figure on the official roster of supreme pontiffs of the Roman Catholic church. At the same time Pius the Tenth has caused the urn containing the dust of the alleged martyr Fortissima to be removed from the Basilica of St. Mark. Archaeologists have all come to the conclusion that there was no foundation for the story of the alleged martyrdom of Fortissima, and that therefore there was no reason for the veneration of her remains or for regarding her either a martyr or a saint.

The standing of the three leading Japanese journals is as follows: The Jiji-Shimbun, which means literally "timely incident new-hearing," is a semi-official paper and may be regarded as the Times of Japan. The staff is composed of well-to-do men, from among whom appointments are often made to the chief posts in government departments. Rumors are never admitted to the pages of the Jiji-Shimbun, and it has a great reputation for truthfulness and sincerity. The Nichi-Nichi Shimbun—i. e., Day and Day New-hearing, or, as we should say, Daily Chronicle—is the organ of the progressive party in Japan, while the Koku-Miu Shimbun—i. e., Country People's News—which has been calling for "fearful musters and prepared defense," in its character of the nation's journal, is regarded as a less responsible paper, but is perhaps all the more interesting for that.—London Chronicle.

In modes of thought and beliefs the Koreans have no religion, properly so called. In their cities there are absolutely no religious buildings, except the churches of foreign Christian missionaries, no temples, no altars and no idols of any kind. On the outskirts of the cities may be found a few small Buddhist shrines, and in the remote mountain districts a few old Buddhist monasteries, but inside the walled cities not a single religious edifice, not even a priest or a monk. All "holy men" of the Buddhist faith are "taboo" in town. Why? Because in the invasion of 1592 the Japanese generals disguised their soldiers as monks and holy men and thus succeeded in taking many towns by strategy.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Lake Baikal, with a length of 390 miles and an area of 15,000 square miles, is directly in the way of the plateau where the trans-Siberian railway reaches its highest elevation, 1,509 feet above the sea level. Hills from 3,000 to 6,000 feet high surround it, rising so abruptly from the water's edge that building along their sides without tunneling is impossible. The lake itself is too deep to be bridged. Its surface is 1,561 feet above sea level, the deepest part 1,624 feet below, and it is subject to frightful storms. From November to April it is practically ice-bound. The lake begins to freeze early in November, is completely ice-bound by the middle of December and the ice does not break up until May. Its white covering reaches a thickness of nine and a half feet. To get around the end of the lake requires a detour of nearly 100 miles, and tunneling and cutting through rock under the most adverse conditions. The cost of such a railroad section conservative estimate puts at 25,000,000 rubles, or something less than $20,000,000. How long it will take can hardly be estimated—four or five years at any rate.

"The custom of taking wedding tours is a remnant of the ancient times, when men got their wives by capture," said Professor A. H. Wilde, of Northwestern university, to a class in Roman history recently. "As soon as a man captured a woman he wanted to marry," continued the professor, "the young couple ran away to avoid the wrath of the bride's relatives. Men don't get their wives by capture now, but the custom of taking wedding tours still survives, a reminder of the ancient times."

Mrs. Almira A. Jackson, of East Front St., Traverse City, Mich., says: "For twenty years I never knew what it was to have good health. Every physician consulted said I had liver trouble, but their medicines did me no good. Just before I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I was almost paralyzed. I could hardly stand on my feet because of the numbness and lack of circulation. Had a knife been thrust into my kidneys the pain could not have been more intense. My sleep was disturbed by visions of distorted figures. The kidney secretions were annoyingly irregular, and I was tortured with thirst and always bloated. I used seven boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. The bloating subsided until I weighed 100 pounds less, could sleep like a child and was relieved of the pain and the irregularity of the kidney action. My circulation is good and I feel better in every way."

A free trial of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Jackson will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists; price 50 cents per box.

"Commercial Korea in 1904" is the title of a monograph just issued by the department of commerce and labor. It discusses commercial and other conditions in Korea, showing area, population, transportation facilities, railways, telegraphs, postal service and foreign commerce, including imports and the countries from which they are drawn, and exports and the countries to which they are sent. The population of Korea the monograph in question puts at about 15,000,000 in round numbers, the area at about equal to that of the state of Kansas, and the foreign commerce at about $12,000,000, of which imports form about $7,500,000.

To the Democratic Voters of Alabama:

We, the undersigned, being all of the practicing lawyers residing in the First Judicial Circuit of Alabama, hereby present for your favorable consideration the name of Judge John C. Anderson of Marengo county, for one of the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court.

While Judge Anderson is only in the prime of life, he has had nearly ten years experience as Judge of this Circuit, and stood in the front rank of the profession before going on the bench.

Judge Anderson has made an enviable record as a Circuit Judge, and we think his legal learning, industry and high character will make him a capable and useful member of the Supreme Court.

Judge Anderson is the only candidate for any State office south of Tuscaloosa and West of Selma, and the First District has had no member of the Supreme Court since the death of Judge Manning of Mobile, twenty five years ago.

We appeal to the fair minded voters of Alabama, to not only help us nominate a worthy man, but to do equity toward Southwest Alabama. There are seven judges to nominate, including the Chief Justice, and we ask for but one. Respectfully,

Geo. W. Taylor, Congressman 1st District.

Do You Want Strength?

If you want to increase your strength you must add to and not take from the physical. In other words, the food that you eat must be digested, assimilated and appropriated by the nerves, blood and tissues before being expelled from the intestines. VOL. XII | CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, APRIL 7, 1904 | NO. 25

CIRCUIT COURT.

Spring term of Circuit Court convened Monday morning, Judge Jerry Richardson presiding. As soon as court was organized the following resolutions on the death of Judge Winter were adopted:

"Whereas, it has pleased the Almighty Giver of life and death to remove from earth our loved, our honored and respected judge, the Hon. John G. Winter:

"Therefore, be it resolved by the bar of Chilton county that we deplore the death of our late brother, and rejoice that he has left us the splendid record of his devotion to duty, and the beautiful love of truth of which he was so fine an example.

Resolved further, that we request that the court will order these resolutions to be spread upon its minutes, and the clerk of this court be directed to send a certified copy to the family of Judge Winter."

Col. W. A. Collier, who introduced the resolutions, spoke very feelingly of Judge Winter, and was cordially seconded by Col. R. H. Dixon, a boyhood companion and lifetime friend of the lamented Judge Winter.

The Grand Jury was empanelled, with John A. Strock as Foreman, and Judge Richardson made a forcible address, explaining in a very clear and comprehensive manner the duties of the jury. He told them to examine into all violations of the law, but to use discretion, impressing upon them the difference between righteous punishment of offenders and malicious prosecutions. "God deliver us from mean and malicious prosecutions," he said. See if there are any violations of the law by insurance companies; see if your convicts and jails have been properly taken care of; see if your judges or other officials have been riding on passes; see if your Tax Assessor has failed to do his duty by administering the oath to taxpayers, indict him.

If there are Trusts in your county unamable to the law, indict them, and you will receive the congratulations of the people. The adulteration of food, even of the candies eaten by your children, should be examined into, and if there are violators of the law in this respect, indict them. The man who carries concealed weapons is a coward taking advantage of his adversary. Human life is becoming too cheap in Alabama, and upon the grand jury largely rests the responsibility. The great and important duty is to bring to justice violators of the law. Uphold the law that you yourselves have made, not only for your own protection, but for the safety of your wives and children, and secure to your people a quiet and perceful life, together with civil, political and religious liberty. Determine all matters solely from the facts, bearing in mind that some day you will have to answer to the Great Judge of us all.

You elect officers to carry out the executive functions of government; you elect men to look after your financial affairs; you elect men to carry out the law; but it is the grand jury, drawn by lot from only the good men of the county, depends the safeguarding of your rights and liberties. Let the God that protects your loved ones in your absence, be with you and guide you in the administration of justice in your splendid duty.

T. L. Jones was sworn in as bailiff, and the Jury, with Solicitor Richardson, retired to their room.

Some cases on the civil docket were continued, and the petit juries were discharged the same day. Judge Richardson allowing them two days rest.

This (Thursday) morning the grand Jury is still in session, but it is expected they will report some time to-day. There will be no court next Monday and the criminal docket will be taken up on Tuesday next.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[We are willing to publish our subscribers views at any time, but it must be distinctly understood we do not hold ourselves responsible for these opinions.—Ramon.]

Union, April 4, 1904

Editor Banner—Please give me space to say a few words. The health of this community is tolerably good at present.

I want to say something about agriculture. Now, brother farmers, stop and think about how much corn you are going to plant. Think what a time we had in 1893 getting corn, it would be sad for us to have it repeated in 1905. My idea of farming is to make the farm self-sustaining. To do this we must leave off so much cotton and make more hog and hominy. The farmer makes all, feeds all, and pays his pro rata share of taxes. I would say to the farmers to curtail your cotton fields to patches, increase your corn patches to fields. The farmer who has got his corn and meat at home is independent. I saw a call for a Farmers' Institute to be held at Clanton the 9th of April. Now, brethren, let every farmer who can leave home come out on that day and hear what these men have to say on the subject of agriculture. I do hope there will be a large crowd out to hear them. Success to the Banner.

J. W. SORRELL.

Concord.

Well, I come again to let friends and loved ones hear what an enjoyable day was spent Easter by many of us. First, we went to the house for worship and there sang hymns of praise to Him who died and was resurrected for the sins of the world. Then reading, followed by prayer by our faithful superintendent, J. P. Parrish; then roll was called by our secretary, J. M. Parrish, followed by recitation of lesson which was interesting to all.

Late in the afternoon we gathered again at Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Parrish's home where preparation was made the evening before for an egg hunt. Opening exercise by G. C. Armstrong, reading a small portion in St. Mark 16, followed by Miss Martha Jane Mims, "Mary weeping at the tomb Easter morn." Then recitation by seven boys and girls on the egg hunt, among whom were Messrs. J. D. and Jimmie Armstrong, Lonnie Parrish, C. D. Duke; Misses Maliala Wyatt, Lettie Dupree, Ellen Mims. Next, instruction was given as to manner of egg hunt by Miss Julia Parrish, then to the grove went old and young, laughing and talking and hunting trying to find the most eggs. As they were found they were returned to Miss Martha Dupree to take down, and G. C. A. and E. H. Mims found equal numbers, except G. C. found a hull more. Then after all was found, now for salt, and to see who could get the best joke, and late all seperated and homeward went hoping all to meet again next Easter.

Shoults.

The primary training school closed on Friday with an address to the pupils and presentation of books to each one by the teacher. The honor roll for entire term was posted as follows: First standing, A. C. Maness and Fay Hicks. Second standing, Fanny Hicks, Grover Merchant, Wilder Shoults, Eddy Ellis, John Hicks, George Woolley, Rosa Ellis, Gertrude Woolley, I. M. Hicks, Armour Woolley, Lena Walker, Willie Walker, Bud Clenner and Kate Latham. Third standing, Cleve Latham, Inez Hicks, W. Latham, Lettie Walker, Bush Shoults, Clarence Latham and Howard Woolley.

A. C. Maness was the only one that had lost no time at all in the school.

Fay Hicks made 100 in deportment and 100 in punctuality during the entire six months. She was graded as an ideal scholar, never whispering, always ready, always attentive. There are a number of others who made fine marks in deportment.

The following made 100 in the examination in advanced grammar and geography: John Hicks, Fanny Hicks and George Woolley. The primary class passed their review and examination in intermediate physiology with great credit to themselves. The following were passed to advanced physiology: Rosa Ellis, Lena Walker, A. C. Maness, Wilder Shoults, Kate Latham, Gertrude and Armour Woolley. There were other reviews, but can't mention them all. All classes were passed a grade higher. Our work, so the teacher says, has been finely done. So closes the best session our school has ever had. Our reports of the school must close with this article. Perhaps some one of our pupils will keep up the correspondence during vacation. Lena Walker would make a good one. Why not try it, Lena?

Rev. P. G. Maness will attend the conference of education for the South at Birmingham, April 26, 27 and 28. He has been taking a special ten month's correspondence course at the Southern Normal College, Henderson, Tenn. This is the largest normal school in the South, having 700 pupils enrolled. The special course includes ethics, psychology, pedagogy, history of education and universal history. Our teacher is working for the degree of Doctor of Pedagogy. Of course he will succeed.

Well, I must bid you all a long adieu. You have been good to publish our reports and we thank you most heartily, Mr. Editor, and wish for you unbounded success.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, is narated by John Oliver of Philadelphia, as follows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents, guaranteed, at Clanton Drug co., Hopkins Drug co.

Sad is it to record the death of Miss Delonia Chandler, who departed this life Sunday morning March 20. Miss Chandler had been afflicted for several years with bronchial asthma; she bore her suffering fortitude and was never heard to murmur a word. She leaves a widowed husband and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her demise.

Ellis Guilledge of Verbena was in town last week telling the people what a good soldier he made, how he lost one leg in the service of his country, and what a good county clerk he would make.

S. S. Chandler, Jr., was in Clanton Saturday.

Mr. Jno. Hall of centreville was here on a visit Sunday.

This is a pretty cool climate. The North carolina Yellow Jacket. The Union seems to be very fond of Mr. Killgore and the Democrat man. The farmers are moving along rapidly with their work, about through planting corn.

Mr. John Pool and wife visited among visitors to Stanton Saturday.

R. F. Sims would double make a valuable Tax collector. "Bob" is well qualified to fill office with honor to himself and county. We think the people will make no mistake in casting their votes for him.

Proper Treatment of Pneumonia.

Pneumonia is too dangerous a disease for anyone to attempt doctor himself, although he may have the proper remedies at hand. A physician should always be called. It should be borne in mind, however, that pneumonia always results from a cold or from an attack of grip, and that in giving Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the threatening attack of pneumonia may be warded off. This remedy is also used by physicians in the treatment of pneumonia with the best results. W. J. Smith, of Sanders, Ala., is also a druggist, says of it: "We have been selling Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and prescribing it in my practice for the past six years and in cases of pneumonia and bronchitis always gotten the best results." If European men will marry tall American girls, it is their own fault if they have to complain occasionally of husband beating, says the New York Sun editorially. Domestic tyranny of the masculine sort is only possible when the man takes a wife shorter than himself.

"The nation which controls the Pacific controls the world." Russia's leading newspaper, the Novoe Vremya, recalls this prophecy of Palmerston in an editorial in which it mildly criticises the United States on account of some recent doings in Central America. According to that journal, the United States has started out on a career of imperialism, and is not going to stop until it gains a power which may be beyond the expectations of anybody now alive.

It seems to have run in the blood—at least, in the name. Herbert Spencer, in disdaining all titles, happened to follow a lead set for him by others of his name. Charles Spencer, second Lord Sunderland, would not, when he sat in parliament for Tiverton, allow himself to be called My Lord, and expressed the hope that he would live to see the day when not a peer would be left in England. Another, and a later Spencer, George Spencer, 60 years ago, astonished his father, the Earl Spencer of the day, by dropping his title, and even his name, when he became a Roman Catholic and entered the passionist order as Father Ignatius.

A new and alarming disease has broken out among the students of the University of Chicago. Dr. Harper, a very wise man and a close student of scholastic ills, admits it as "mind-wandering," and in a lecture to the freshmen class declares that it is a "disease marked by inability to concentrate attention." Four men and four women, we are told, have been compelled to leave the university because they were afflicted by this failing. Plainly it is the immediate result of drastic segregation declares the writer in the Chicago Post. The young men and young women cannot fix their minds on their studies because they are longing for a debarred presence. While they find it impossible to concentrate their mental faculties on their textbooks, we dare say they are thinking of the absent ones, whose comradeship was a source of inspiration and an incentive to mental action.

The strange discovery has been made that air is more effective in stopping a bullet than is a steel plate, announces a writer in the New York American. An Italian named Benedetti is the inventor of the new bullet-proof armor plates. He has kept the nature of this invention a secret, but the experiments of other inventors now show that small air cells are better than steel or any solid substance, for the purpose of defence in war. Anyone who has a revolver may make the experiment by firing at a paper-bound book or an office calendar. A bullet that would pierce a heavy wooden door will rebound from the book or the calendar. The lighter the paper is, the less it will be the effect of the bullet, showing that it is not the paper itself that makes the obstacle, but the layers of air that are imprisoned between the sheets. If a pad of paper is pressed into a hard block, the bullet then goes through it as if it were made of wood.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

MARCH 31ST.

The attention of the senate was divided today between the bill for the repeal of the desert land, the timber and stone and the homestead commutation laws and the postoffice appropriation bill.

Consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill was concluded in the house and the bill was about to be passed when Mr. Sulzer forced a roll call and a motion to commit the bill with instructions to strike out the paragraph appropriating $135,000 for rents of the New York custom house. The vote showed a quorum was not present and adjournment was taken until tomorrow.

The right of boards of directors of state homes for disabled volunteer soldiers to retain certain portions of pension money received by the inmates was discussed at length. Mr. Bell, of California, assailed his own state for permitting a canteen to be established in the California state home and charged that the old soldiers were allowed to draw their pension money from the home in most instances only through canteen checks.

APRIL 1ST.

Good Friday was devoted by the senate to almost continuous discussion of political questions. The time until 2 o'clock was devoted mainly to the Carmack resolution proposing an inquiry into the legality of the recent executive old age pension order. Mr. Carmack was the principal speaker, but he was frequently interrupted by republican senators. He contended that Secretary Hitchcock had transcended the limits of executive authority in issuing the order.

The latter half of the day was devoted to the postoffice appropriation bill, but no appreciable progress was made with that measure, the speeches on it being in the main political and of general character.

Mr. Patterson introduced a bill for the amendment of the Chinese exclusion act of 1892, giving notice that on Wednesday next he would address the senate on the bill. In giving this notice he said he had received what he considered definite information that the Chinese government had denounced the treaty between that government and the United States, and that the treaty would expire December 7th next. Unless the law should be amended Chinese can come into the United States after that time without obstruction.

A bill was passed authorizing the free transmission through the mails of books for the blind.

Also a bill authorizing the detail of retired officers of the army and the detail of retired officers of the army and navy to schools as instructors.

The house passed the sundry civil appropriation bill after voting down a proposition by Mr. Sulzer to recommit it with instructions to strike out the appropriation of $136,600 for the New York custom house. The remainder of the day was devoted to discussion of the conference report on the army appropriation bill. With the exception of the amendment providing certain increases in the signal corps, the house disagreed to all other important senate amendments, and the bill was sent back to the conference.

The general proposal to consolidate the office of adjutant general with that of the record and pension division, and make Brigadier General Ainsworth chief of the latter division, military secretary with the rank of major general, and put him in charge, and the amendment to allow officers who served in the civil war who retire or may have retired, to retire at the next higher grade, were debated at length and met strong opposition.

The house got into a spirited debate over the senate amendment appropriating $250,000 for continuing the construction of a military wagon road from Valdez to Fort Egbert or Eagle, Alaska. The house disagreed to the amendment.

APRIL 2ND.

Mr. Warren occupied the greater part of the senate's time with a speech attacking the Gibson bill to repeal most of the existing land laws. He contended that the land laws were beneficent, and in the main honestly administered, and urged that there was no demand for repeal. Mr. Mallory concluded his speech on the old age disability pension order of the secretary of the interior. The postoffice bill was completely sidetracked for the day.

Three hundred and nineteen pension bills were passed by the house in two hours. An hour was devoted to rapid fire legislation by unanimous consent, while a large number of bridge bills and other matters of minor importance were disposed of. At the expiration of this time Mr. Maddox, of Georgia, who had threatened to stop the proceedings by a point of "no quorum," when the pension legislation was finished, insisted on the point, and as there were few members present, the house adjourned.

APRIL 4TH.

Though the postoffice appropriation bill was before the senate almost the entire day, the early debate on the measure was in relation to general land laws. Considerable progress was made with the postoffice appropriation bill. Both provisions of the bill relating to sites for postoffices purposes in New York city, as amended by the senate committee were agreed to.

Other important amendments agreed to provide for the retransfer of the free delivery service from the office of the fourth assistant postmaster general to the office of the first assistant postmaster general, struck out the age limit for cars on the railway mail service and eliminated the restrictions placed on first and second class postmasters in the matter of telephone service.

In the house an attempt to secure consideration under suspension of the rules of the bill appropriating $475,000 for the Lewis and Clark exposition to be held in Portland, Ore., 1905, failed, as the house had divided several times, and the roll had been called twice.

The military academy appropriation bill was taken up, and after Mr. Parker, in charge of the bill, had explained its features briefly, Mr. Goldfoggle, of New York, spoke in behalf of the Jews of the United States, for whom he asked equal treatment and protection while traveling in Russia. Mr. Livernash, of California, made an attack on President Roosevelt and Mr. Merrill, of Pennsylvania discussed the negro question. Consideration of the bill was not concluded when the house adjourned.

United States Rich in Minerals.

The geological survey soon will issue its report on mineral resources for 1902, showing that that year, for the third time, the total value of the commercial mineral products of the United States exceeded $1,000,000,000. The exact figures for 1902 were $1,260,639,415, which, as compared with $1,086,594,851 in 1901, shows a gain of 16.02 per cent. The fuels increased $26,667,743, or 6 per cent. Every variety of fuel increased in value except anthracite coal.

The metallic products increased $123,912,325, and the non-metallic products $50,072,089. To these should be added estimated unfinished products, including building, moulding and other sands reported to this office, the rare mineral molybdenum and other mineral products valued at $1,000,000.

The Japanese minister has received a cablegram from Tokio stating that just before the adjournment of the diet the house of representatives passed a resolution containing this: "The war has only just begun, and the time is yet far distant when a complete victory can be won and the peace of the Orient restored. But this house will always be ready to cordially cooperate in the measures necessary to bring about that desirable result, and will be prepared to grant all funds necessary for the prosecution of the war. In passing these resolutions, which are unmistakably in conformity with the national will, the house desires to urge the ministers of state to uphold the imperial policy, and to bring about a speedy restoration of peace by taking all timely measures and devising plans to meet every eventuality."

It has recently been announced that the exports of American clocks now amount to over $1,000,000 a year, and the record of their destination shows that they go to practically every civilized country on the face of the globe. Clocks and watches are in steady demand, in Asiatic Turkey, especially when the faces are provided with Turkish figures. As the New York Sun puts it: "The exasperating shriek of the American alarm clock breaks the stillness of the morning from the equator to the frozen pole, and men of all races, colors and tongues hurl their anathemas at it in their respective languages, even though nothing more weighty.

SOLDIERS' HOME

To be Enlarged and Beautified—New Commandant.

The board of control of the Jeff Falkner soldiers' home at Mountain Creek reports conditions at the home satisfactory and the work of completing the building and beautifying the grounds will be immediately begun. The plans, as originated by Captain Jeff Falkner, are to be carried out in so far as the state appropriation of $35,000 will carry them. It is definitely determined among other things to build a hospital and construct a system of water works and sewerage.

At present there are thirty inmates in the home, and within the next ten days there will be room for as many more. Buildings to accommodate one hundred are to be erected. The board decided that each of the congressional districts in the state should be allowed an equal number of inmates of the home. A. J. Brooks, of Montgomery, a deserving confederate soldier, was elected commandant of the home.

Death in a Wreck.

Two men were killed, one probably fatally injured and seven more or less injured in a collision between a westbound freight train and an east-bound work train near Weems on the Southern Friday afternoon.

The dead are:

Section Foreman J. T. Kilpatrick, of Leeds, and Frank Watts, a negro section hand. J. T. Chambers, supervisor, Heflin, Ala., had his skull fractured and bruises; may die.

The wreck was caused by a misunderstanding between the conductor and flagman of the work train, which was laying cross ties along the main line.

LATER—John T. Chambers, supervisor of the Southern railway between Austell and Birmingham, died Saturday of his injuries.

Ohio Has Him Now.

L. C. Harding, accused of using the United States mails to defraud, and for whom the governor of Alabama two months ago issued a requisition, which the governor of Florida refused to honor, when brought before Commissioner Crane, of Tampa, was discharged, but was immediately rearrested on a requisition from the governor of Ohio. Detective Calahan left with the prisoner at once for Ohio, but state officials are in pursuit with a writ of habeas corpus.

L. C. Harding, charged with various frauds in Ohio and Tennessee, rode out of Florida in a United States mail car much against his will and also against the will of the state court officials. There was a scene, a fight and contending legal forms and threats, but the detective was not to be bluffed.

Alabama Iron.

Pennsylvania makes a great deal of basic pig iron, and so does Ohio, but Alabama follows Ohio closely, our production last year being 172,280 tons. But when the list of producers of foundry iron is taken up, Alabama stands at the top, her product of last year having been 1,194,556 tons, and Pennsylvania's was 948,857 tons, and no other state half as much. In the manufacture of forge pig iron Alabama is outranked by Pennsylvania only. Alabama also made in 1903 more white and mottled than any other state except Pennsylvania.

Mrs. E. B. Hunter, wife of a prominent business man of Memphis, Tenn., committed suicide in her apartments at the Grand hotel, Cincinnati, in a peculiar manner. She was returning from an eastern sanitarium in charge of a nurse. She sent the nurse to the theater, secured a large collection of roses, and then shot herself in the head.

A New Railroad.

The survey of the Central of Alabama, to run from Decatur to Tuscaloosa via Jasper, has been made. It is reported that the Illinois Central railroad is buying fine timber, iron and coal lands along the proposed road at from 75 cents to $2 an acre, and that the same company is now building a road from Amory, Miss., to Jasper, Ala., and is also building a road from a point in Tennessee to Sheffield.

PANAMA'S $10,000,000

Is Not Yet Paid But Title is Now Considered Perfect

A report from Colon says:

"Great surprise is manifested in all circles here over the alleged non-fulfillment by the United States of the agreement on the exchange of ratifications of the canal treaty, the United States to pay the new republic the sum of $10,000,000. It is said the delay of the United States to make the payment has forced the government of Panama to float a loan in New York."

And this comes from Washington:

"The reason for the non payment to Panama up to the present time of the $10,000,000 on account of acquisition of the canal territory doubtless is to be found in the fact that title can not be taken to the canal and the rights therein until after certain necessary formalities in Paris, whither two law officers of the department of justice have gone to see that the Panama Canal company regularly conveys its rights and title to the canal property, has been carried out."

Colombia Must Pay the Costs.

The first civil tribunal of the Seine has decided the case of the republic of Colombia against the Panama Canal company in favor of the defendants. The decision holds that the complaint of Colombia is not reviewable, and condemns the plaintiffs to pay the cost of the action. This decision has the effect of removing the legal obstacles in the way of the transfer of the canal concessions of the company to the United States.

March Crops.

The weather bureau's summary of crop conditions for March contains this:

From the upper Mississippi valley to the middle Atlantic coast the season is generally reported backward, although the average temperature for the month in those districts was generally in excess of the normal. In the southern states the month has been mild and favorable for farming operations. The northern portion of the central gulf states, however, the central valleys and the greater part of the lake region, suffered from excessive rains, and western Texas and the southern plateau region from drought.

Over the western portion of the principal winter wheat area the reports indicate an improvement in the condition of winter wheat area.

Good progress has been made with oat seeding in the southern states with the exception of western Texas, where it has been too dry.

In the gulf states March corn has been making favorable headway. In southern Texas about half the crop has been planted, and the early planted corn is coming up nicely.

The mean or normal temperature for the Aprils of the past eight years has been 64 degrees. The warmest was that of 1896, with an average of 70 degrees; the coldest was that of 1901, with an average of 59 degrees; the highest temperature was 90 degrees on the 17th and 23, 1896, and the 30th, 1901; the lowest was 28 on the 6th, 1898; average date on which last "killing" frost occurred in spring, March 19th; the latest date on which last "killing" frost occurred in spring, April 8th; average precipitation for the month, 5.52 inches; the greatest monthly precipitation was 13.06 inches in 1900; the least was 2.27 inches in 1903; prevailing winds have been from the northwest.

The World's Cotton.

The cotton crop grown last year is put by the department of agriculture at 17,179,765 bales, but this aggregate is reached by estimating the Chinese and Korean crops, about which no definite information is available.

The Chinese crop is estimated at 1,200,000 bales, and the Korean crop at 400,000 bales. The consular reports are the basis of these estimates; no doubt they are approximately correct. The United States grows two-thirds of all the cotton grown in the world.

The value of the entire crop last year was $702,082,451, of which the United States supplied $501,897,185.

A general thaw is now progressing in Korea and Manchuria, rendering the country roads impassable and making it impossible to conduct extensive military operations until the middle of May.

Field Marshal Yamagata, who, next to the emperor, is first in command of the Japanese forces, and was the original organizer of the Japanese army, says that the Japanese may have to fight odds of two to one and that the clash may come at Yalu river.

Supplies are plentiful in Manchuria and the Russians are doing everything to encourage the natives to furnish provisions in the future, says a dispatch from Yin Kow. It is said they are even paying farmers the price in advance for this year's product.

A letter from Kobe, Japan, says the Japanese government has 200,000 troops in motion and fully 60,000 more under arms in garrisons and supply depots. Cross numbers are enrolled of the third reserves, numbering 200,000, which have not been called to the colors.

Rumors are again in circulation according to a dispatch from St. Petersburg, to the effect that four ships of the cruiser type built in Germany for the Turkish government, and the two cruisers built by France, have been purchased by Russia, all to be delivered within a short period.

The Japanese are confident that the Russians will be unable to transport supplies sufficient to maintain their army in Manchuria a force larger than 300,000. The heavy detachments necessary to guard the railroad and supply trains, it is claimed, reduce the Russian fighting force to about 200,000 men.

Regarding purchases of Army supplies for Russia and Japan, which from Chicago say that the only purchase of beef so far as generally known is one for 25,000 barrels, ordered for shipment to Port Arthur for the Russians. This consignment, it is understood, is being held up at Yokohama.

A locomotive plant at Philadelphia has established a new record in the construction of seven locomotives in a day, in consequence of a rush of orders from Japan. The engines ordered are for the military railroad that will connect Fusan, on the southern coast of Korea, with Seoul, the capital. The line will be about 225 miles long. Fourteen of the locomotives are of standard gauge, while six are of the three foot gauge. These latter will be used on a small military road running from Fusan to a junction.

These make the package lighter and stronger than if the ends were of one solid thick piece, the panels acting as braces and making handles. The best way to get these boxes is in the form of shooks. They are easily put together by any one who can handle hammer and nails.

Making boxes is entirely different from putting barrels together. We never recommend any one to attempt this unless he has had some experience at cooperage business, as barrel staves are as contrary things as one can imagine. Box shooks may be stored in some clean place and take but little room. Now that Eastern manufacturers are getting into the apple box business we expect to see the odd size mongrel boxes displaced by something nearer uniform, though it may take several seasons to learn just what size and form are best adapted to our needs. The form must be governed by convenience in storage, handling and shipment and the size by the demand of the trade, which we believe is best satisfied by a bushel or a little over. The chances at present are that it will pay to hold the best of the apples and box them for winter shipment. It will never do to put inferior apples in boxes. This is a new package in most markets, and more than one season may be required to make buyers familiar with it. The "bulk" shipment of fruit is rarely satisfactory in the long run. If a man has a good lot of choice apples we should advise him to try the box shipment. There may not be much in it the first season, but this package is sure to come into use, concludes Rural New Yorker in giving the foregoing advice.

Poultry Notes.

Prevention is better than physics, especially in the poultry yard.

Keep plenty of grit where the fowls can eat what they want at any time.

The small poultry yards and houses need more attention than the larger ones.

Many of the poultry diseases are the result of crowding and unclean surroundings.

Lazy men make bad poultry men. Only hustling, busy, wide-awake men ever succeed.

All fowls that you do not intend to winter should be sold before cold weather sets in.

Theory works very poorly in the poultry yard. You need good, sound sense, coupled with experience.

Do not imagine that you know all about the poultry business. It takes years of experience to insure success.

Be kind to the poultry and teach every hen to love and know you. Results will tell of every little favor shown.

Dark skin fowls are just as sweet and juicy as the yellow. 'Tis not the color that makes the favorite fowl for the table.

Charcoal is very beneficial to the fowls, and you never see a case of indigestion where the fowls are given access to it.

A Culinary Problem.

In a co-educational college, near Chicago, the senior class recently decided to give an old-fashioned "sociable" for which the girls of the class should provide the supper. To two of them was assigned the task of bringing doughnuts of their own manufacture.

For several days they went about with puckered foreheads, evidently wrestling with some mighty problem. Their study, which had been a haven of peace, resounded through long evenings with arguments and expostulation.

At last, when their relations were somewhat strained, they applied to a court of arbitration to settle their differences. Mrs. Smith, wife of one of the professors, was taken into their confidence.

"Mrs. Smith," begged one of them, "won't you settle a dispute for us? It's about doughnuts, and I can't convince Anna that I'm right. She thinks they ought to be fried in milk!"

"And what would you do with them?"

"Why, I know just what to do. I've been in the kitchen and seen Imogene cook them. You fry them in water, of course, in a whole kettleful."

Peru contributes more young men to American universities than any other South American Republic. About 500 are now attending our institutions of learning.

John A. Creighton, of Omaha, Neb., has given, in addition to his previous large gifts, an additional $250,000 to Creighton University, a Catholic institution at Omaha.

The smallest university in the world has just commenced its twenty-third year of active work. This is the American classical university of Athens, with a total of six students.

Governor Dockery's appointment of Moses N. Sale to the circuit bench in St. Louis marks a new departure. Judge Sale is the first of the Jewish citizens in the history of Missouri to occupy the bench of a court of record and his appointment is a distinction and personal tribute of which he and his friends may well be proud.

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

AN INTERESTING DISCOURSE BY THE REV. J. A. TRACY.

Subject: Perseverance—The True Joys of Religion—Impressive is the Cheerfulness Born of the Testimony of a Good Conscience—No Compromise With Sin.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—The Rev. J. A. Tracy, C. M., of Germantown, Pa., preached, Sunday, in the Church of the Visitation, on "Perseverance." Father Tracy took as his text, "Be faithful until death, and I will give thee the crown of life." (Apocalypse ii: 10), and said:

I can imagine no sight more inspiring or more consoling than that which I behold before me to-day. Hundreds of souls have listened obediently to the voice of God speaking through us and hundreds of hearts have been opened to the infusion of grace from on high. Cheerfully and bravely you have looked into the condition of your consciences and on detecting the marks of sin there you hastened to the tribunal of penance, you exposed the guilt contracted by sin, you resolved that with the help of God's grace you would never compromise yourselves in the sight of God again. The absolution of God's representative was pronounced over you and you went forth with light hearts and pure consciences and grace filling your souls. By the reception of Holy Communion the seal was set upon your resolutions and the act recorded in the book of life. Your bodies are now the temples of the Holy Ghost, your souls are burning with His grace and in your present condition you are worthy to be called saints, the name given by St. Paul to the early Christians.

Hence I have no hesitation in saying that the congregation assembled here today, pure, holy, unspotted, cleansed from the defilement of sin, is an object of complacency to the blessed and adorable Trinity, to God the Father, because He sees His people, the work of His hands, faithful, loyal and obedient; to God the Son, because His tremendous sacrifice has not been in vain; to God the Holy Ghost, because your souls are the receptacles of His grace and you show the work of His mighty hand. And the guardian angels of this church participate in the common joy, for they see the glory given to God by His faithful people. Yes, from the heights of heaven above the cherubim and seraphim look down upon you to-day and bless God their Master for His mercy to you and for the wonders of grace wrought in your souls.

And we, too, bless God and fall down in humility before Him at the thought of having been His unworthy instruments in this mighty work. For it is not we that have done it. Irresistibly the conviction is borne home upon us that "this change is the work of the right hand of the Most High." But we have in His name received your confessions; we have listened to your sighs of repentance; we have heard your resolutions of amendment, and have satisfied ourselves of your determination to persevere in grace and holiness. By your own free act you declared an eternal divorce from sin. That resolution was registered in heaven, and when you stand before the throne of God in judgment it shall be brought forth as testimony—for your everlasting joy if you have kept it; for your eternal confusion if you have failed.

Now, there is no doubt about your present dispositions. We know that as you now stand your hearts are for God and against sin. But we cannot close our eyes to the melancholy fact that the flesh is weak. When the present religious fervor has passed your old enemy, the devil, will return to the attack and you must be prepared to meet him. You must not deceive yourselves, but look the situation straight in the face and take measures accordingly. In a matter so serious it will be of immense service to us to consider what it means to fail.

Think, first, of the base ingratitude to Christ implied in a return to sin. With eyes of faith you have been able to discern as never before the significance of the life and death of your Redeemer. You have made a personal application of the lessons you have seen. You realize that it was all done for you. Yes, our Saviour had you in mind when He was subjected to outrage and ignomy in the court of Pilate; when the fierce scourges descended upon His face and back; when the thorny crown was cruelly pressed upon His sacred brow; when He hung bleeding and torn upon the cross. The thought that you would appreciate His sacrifice and profit by it, and through it be enabled to obtain mercy and forgiveness from His heavenly Father reconciled Him to the cruelty of which He was a victim. If our Lord addressed you personally to-day He would assure you of this and tell you that the thought of your conversion made His sufferings sweet. Moreover, He took the most effectual way of making you comprehend the infinite love of His sacred heart. God's love for man might have been written in characters of blazing gold across the heavens; it might have been proclaimed throughout the universe by an archangel, and man would have still remained skeptical. He would ask for further proof. But when the Son of God Himself takes flesh and suffers and dies for man, what heart can be so hard and stony, so insensible to gratitude as to refuse to be drawn to God and return love for love.

What baseness, then, and what treachery it is to receive the gifts of God and to turn over to His enemy that which should serve His honor and glory. How ungrateful the heart made for God and virtue which uses the power that God gave it in self-indulgence and sin. How wicked the soul redeemed by Christ which renews again His terrible passion. For we do renew Christ's sufferings when we sin. We wave aside the marks of His love for us and as far as we are able we say, "these things mean nothing to me. I have passions which must be satisfied, ambitions which must be attained, avarice which must be satiated. The teachings, the passion of Christ stand in the way of these and must give way before them." And is it possible after all the manifestations of Christ's goodness that you will again join forces with His enemy, the devil? Shall you again take up the scourge and shed the blood of your Saviour? Shall you again press down upon His head the crown of thorns? Shall you make Him cry out in bitter complaint, "Of what use was My blood?" Oh, God forbid; God preserve you from such cruelty and treachery.

Again, remember that a return to sin will replunge you into the pitiful state from which you have just emerged. Bear in mind the significant words of Christ, "No man putting his hand to the plow and looking back is fit for the kingdom of heaven." We have begun the good work, why should we look back? Can you again face the misery and remorse you experienced while under the guilt of sin? Was it not difficult enough for you to summon up courage to break away from sinful habits, to confess the sins that oppressed your soul, to triumph over the concupiscence that held you captive? Would you again place your souls in the slavery of the evil one who seeks your destruction? You are now healed; take to heart, then, the words of Christ, "Go now and sin no more lest some worse thing befall thee." Strengthen your resolution, remain faithful and do not fall into the happy condition of him of whom our Saviour spoke when He said: "All who shall see him shall begin to mock, saying this man began to build and was not able to finish."

And then comes the very serious thought of the limitations of God's mercy. It is possible, indeed, that if you despise and reject His grace now, you may never have the opportunity of returning to Him again. "Now is the acceptable time, now is the day of salvation." The promises of God are annexed to the performance of present duties. To-day is the day of mercy; the future holds the day of justice and of judgment. "It is a horrible thing to fall into the hands of the living God." If, notwithstanding your present conversion to God, your freedom from sin, your enjoyment of the possession of grace, you should forfeit that grace, bate your pretensions of amendment and return to wallow in the mire of iniquity and then close your eyes in death an enemy of God—a frightful fate awaits you. For death in mortal sin means an eternal separation from God, an utter and irreparable failure to attain the destiny for which God created you, the forced companionship of demons who labored hard for your destruction and who will gloat over your ruin and finally never-ending pains inflicted by the omnipotent hand of an angry God.

But this is a melancholy thought. God has other motives than fear to deter us from sin and to inspire us with the resolution to persevere in His grace. And it is a pleasure to turn from the thought of punishment to that of reward.

The first effect of a good life that cannot fail to impress you strongly is the cheerfulness and joy born of the testimony of a good conscience. Instead of the depressing and overpowering sense of guilt produced by sin, you now experience a light heartedness and a buoyancy which tells you plainly that a terrible weight has been lifted from your soul. The dominant note of your life now is peace, that "peace which surpasseth all understanding," the peace that enables you to look the world in the face unconscious of public offense or secret defilement. You were strangers to this peace while you were aware that you were not in the friendship of God. Now that it is yours you will guard it against all attacks and never again forfeit it by sin. You will not allow yourselves to be blinded by the seductive and fleeting pleasures of the moment. You will be brave and loyal and steadfast in temptation and remain true to your God and grateful for His mercies. Evermore you will keep before your minds the promise of our Lord: "Be faithful until death and I will give thee the crown of life."

And when, at last, the struggle is about to close and this dreary world is fading from your sight, with the smile of God sweetly beckoning you on, you will be able to lay down your weary heads in peace and resignation. You will take courage from the declaration of Christ: "He that perseveres unto the end, he shall be saved." Death will have no terrors for you because you will be able to regard it as the gate through which all must pass to enter upon the rewards of eternal life. The inspired words of Holy Scripture: "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord," will find their fulfillment in your case, for you will go cheerfully with the seal of faith to the sweet repose of everlasting peace.

Whither? To God and His heaven. Let us consider our reward. Let us try to pierce the skies and catch a glimpse of the joys awaiting us. Our mental vision ranges over the myriads of angels and archangels, patriarchs and prophets, apostles and martyrs, confessors and virgins, who bask in the sunshine of the presence of God. Our souls are transported beyond the bounds of the material body when we think that we, too, are called to join in the praise of God, with the nine choirs of angels. Our hearts expand with joy when we behold those now rejoicing who, like us, have battled with the enemies of their salvation. They have fought the good fight, they have finished their course, they have kept the faith. Now they are enjoying the crown of justice which God, the just judge, has awarded them for their fidelity. They are placed beyond the reach of tribulation, for in heaven God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and "death shall be no more, nor mourning, nor crying, nor sorrow shall be any more, for these things have passed away." How clearly does their happy state exemplify the apostle's words: "The sufferings of the present time are unworthy of being compared to the glory to come which shall be revealed to us."

And to think that the blessedness of the saints is the destiny which God has marked out for you. This is the final vocation to which God has called you. Listen to St. Paul: "You are come," says he, "to the Mount of Zion, and to the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and the many thousands of angels, and the church of the first born who are written in heaven, and God the Judge of All, and Jesus the Mediator of the New Testament." Has earth any joys compared to these? Is there anything under God which can justify us in forfeiting this immortal happiness? Where shall we find a more loving father than God, a sweeter friend than Christ, a kinder mother than Mary, nobler brothers and sisters than the apostles, martyrs and virgins already rejoicing before the throne of God? Oh, what humiliation it must cause us to feel ourselves so sin stained and unworthy, and yet to know that we are called to associate with such purity and splendor! Who are we that we should aspire to the companionship of the blessed? What have we done that with them we should gaze forever on the blissful vision of God, that we should intone the canticles of adoration with the quiring seraphim, that we should kneel as children at the feet of the Immaculate Mary, that we should consort with such saints as Peter and Paul, that we should proclaim the glory of the Lamb of God with John the Baptist, that we should sing His praises with Holy David, that we should repose in peace and rest with the victorious martyrs, that we should attend in the train of Christ with spotless virgins, that we should behold the bright radiance of eternal truth and beauty with St. Augustine and St. Thomas? All this and unspeakably more is the lot of those who are numbered among the saints. And yet it is to this that God invites us, calls us and entreats us.

Let us listen to His voice and let our thoughts and affections dwell in heaven, and let us serve God as the saints served Him. Strive heroically, consistently and steadfastly with your passions. Follow faithfully the means of perseverance pointed out to you in the holy tribunal of penance. Keep in sight the crown of glory laid up for you. And although your names may not be registered among the canonized, nevertheless a recurrence of this happy day will find you reigning in bliss. The storm will be past, the haven reached, the inheritance secured. Happiness unspeakable for "eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, what things God hath prepared for those who love Him." May you and I and all who love God one day be numbered among those who stand before the throne when "God shall wipe away all tears from our eyes, and death shall be no more, nor mourning, nor crying, nor sorrow shall be any more, for those things shall have passed away."

The Important Thing.

Whether a man can go from place to place is a less important question than whether he is able to move from subject to subject of thought, or from one object of affection to another. In other words, a man's legs are less important to him than his head or his heart. As the "Attic Philosopher" expresses it concerning the workman: body while the inner man is vigorous and active, "The fortress is a little damaged, but the garrison is quite hearty." We have reason to be grateful to God when the spirit truly is willing the flesh is weak.—Sunday-School Times.

Keep the soil of life soft, its sympathy tender, its imagination free, or else you may lose the elementary quality of receptiveness, and all the influences of God may be in vain.—F. G. Peabody.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR APRIL 10.

Subject: Peter Confesses the Christ. Mark viii., 27-30—Golden Text, Matt. xvi., 16 Memory Verses, 24, 25—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. Different opinions concerning Christ (vs. 27, 28). "Caesarea Philippi." It seems that Jesus did not enter the city, but taught in its vicinity. It was a populous and prosperous region, and the people were not so much under the influence of the scribes and Pharisees as they were further South. "Whom do men say?" Christ did not ask the question (1) for information, or (2) because He desired the applause of men, or (3) because He intended to form His course according to the reply, but (4) because "He desired to ground His disciples in the deepest faith." 29. "Some say," etc. The people had different opinions concerning Christ. Some said John the Baptist returned to life. Some Elias, who was to be the forerunner of the Messiah; others, Jeremias (Matt. 16: 14) in accordance with the tradition that Jeremiah was to come and reveal the place where the sacred vessels were concealed; and others, one of the prophets.

29. "Whom say ye?" This was the decisive moment in which the separation of the New Testament from the Old Testament theocracy was to be made. The hour had come for the utterance of a distinct Christian confession. "Peter answereth." He spoke for all of the apostles. "Thou are the Christ." The Messiah. The Anointed One. Messiah is the Hebrew and Christ is the Greek for anointed. Jesus was the One who was anointed by the Father as Prophet, Priest and King. The apostles thus confess their Master to be the Son of the living God, the divine One for whom the world was looking and waiting. 30. "Tell no man." The time had not come to proclaim Him publicly. Christian enthusiasm might now endeavor to make Him king if this announcement were made openly.

The account given by Matthew is much fuller than this one given by Mark. In Matt. 16: 18, 19, we have the verses which have aroused as profound and as disturbing a discussion as any passage in the Word of God. Jesus is reported as saying, "Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build My church." The Greek word here for Peter is "petros," meaning a stone or a piece of rock. This name had been given Peter by Jesus at the first (John 1: 42). The Greek word for rock is "petra," meaning rock in mass. Regarding this there are four leading views, all of which are supported by good authorities: 1. That Peter was the rock on which Christ was to build His church. 2. That Peter and all true believers are the rock. 3. That the confession Peter had just made was the rock. 4. That Christ had reference to Himself when He said "upon this rock." The true view is, without doubt, the last one stated. Christ is the foundation of His church.

II. Christ foretells His death (vs. 31-33). 31. "Began to teach." Heretofore He had spoken obscurely, but now for the first time He speaks plainly of His coming sufferings and death. "Son of Man." This was a title He frequently applied to Himself, but it was never applied to Him by the apostles. It expressed His humanity. "Of the elders, etc." The Sanhedrin. The detailed enumeration of these parties proves that there was a general conspiracy on the part of all the Jewish authorities. 32. "Openly." That is, not publicly, but plainly and without disguise. "Peter took Him." Aside; apart from the rest. "To rebuke Him." The idea of a suffering Messiah was abhorrent to Peter and to all the apostles. He would set our Lord right and banish this dismal conception of death instead of a throne. This shows Peter's boldness.

33. "Rebuked Peter." Christ perceived that He was not boldly uttering what the others felt, and this rebuke was before them all. "Get thee behind Me, Satan." Satan means adversary. Jesus did not call His apostle a devil, but He saw in this suggestion a repetition of the old temptation by which He was offered the glory of the kingdoms of the world without His coming to the cross. The words of the tempter are in Peter's mouth, and Christ uses the very words which He had used to the devil in the wilderness. "Thou mindest not" (R. V.). Thou dost not understand or discern the things of God; thou art wholly taken up with the thought that My kingdom is of this world. Men would like ease, distinction and wealth, but God looks at peace of conscience and the joy of the soul. "To His eye the cross is the way to the crown."

III. Conditions of discipleship (vs. 34, 35). 34. "Had called." Even in these lonely regions considerable numbers would seem to have followed Him, apparently at some little distance. These He now called to Him and made them sharers in this part of His instruction. "Whosoever will." That is, whosoever is resolved at all costs to be My disciple. "Deny Himself." Christ shows the apostles the nature of His kingdom. They must abstain from all indulgences which stand in the way of duty. "Take up His cross." Whosoever would follow Christ must be ready to endure affliction and even death for His sake. This was the first intimation of His own sufferings upon "the cross."

35. "Whosoever will save, etc." Whosoever succeeds in obtaining the life of worldly comfort and pleasure, by avoiding the life of self-denial and at the expense of righteousness, shall lose even the earthly rewards he seeks and also the eternal life of spiritual joy and blessedness. But whosoever renounces those things in this life which charm the worldling, such as the love of gain, pleasure, fashion or honor, and from the worldling's standpoint loses his life for the sake of Christ, that brings the promised blessing. Multitudes lose their lives on the altar of worldly ambition, pleasure and fashion, but such have no ray of hope.

IV. The value of the soul (vs. 36-38). 36. "What; profit." The question implies that there is no profit. "The whole world." Even though it were possible for a man to gain all the wealth, honor and happiness the world had to give, and to enjoy it a thousand years, and then lose his soul, his loss would be infinitely greater than any earthly pleasure he may have had. "Lose." "Be cast away." "His own soul." The Greek word for soul has the double meaning "life" and "soul." The soul is the man himself. The only thing we really and absolutely possess is our "soul." The man who loses his soul loses all he has that is really valuable. 37. "In exchange." The price the worldling pays for carnal delights is his soul. 38. "Adulterous." The people were called adulterous because their hearts were estranged from God. (Compare Isa. 54: 5; Jer. 31: 32 and James 4: 4.

The average age of death of working men in East London is about 29, whereas in the well-to-do districts of West London it is about 55.

Mr. Edison knows a great deal about telephones, and when he expresses skepticism as to the practicability of telephoning directly to London across the Atlantic ocean many of us will agree with him. The world accepts almost anything in the line of invention and scientific discovery as possible nowadays; yet there are some obstacles at which popular credulity balks.

A FARMERS Institute will be held at the court house, clanton, on Saturday next, and an instructive and entertaining session is expected. Lecturers from Auburn Agricultural college will be present. Let everybody come.

Do all the voters of Chilton county recognize and appreciate the importance of next Monday's primary? Practically all the most important State officers will be elected at that time. There will be no aftermatch in November, the men who are nominated on Monday will be our officials for the ensuing terms. The Judges of the Supreme Court, the Circuit Judge, the Chancellor, the Congressman, the President of the Railroad Commission, the Circuit Solicitor, each and every one have an all important bearing on the lives of us all. These are the men who will have our destinies in their hands for the next few years. Is there a man in Chilton who is not interested in their election? No, not one! Then we have the nomination of nearly every county officer depending upon this election, and while there may possibly be some opposition to some of them in the general election in November, it is extremely doubtful if that opposition will be able to overcome the nominees of next Monday. This is not an election in which the voters of the county have to decide only between two sets of candidates for county offices, but it is an election upon which depends the prosperity of our county. The State officers will be nominated on Monday and elected in November—that is beyond dispute. The county officers will be nominated on Monday, and in all probability elected in November, and they should be nominated with the full strength of the Democracy of Chilton county, so that their election assured they will be in position to demand the just recognition of our county as an important factor in the affairs of the State and the nation. Not one man who has the welfare of himself, his family, and his county at heart should stay away from the polls next Monday. Come, and vote for whomever you please, but come and take your rightful place in the government of our country. Thecause of Democracy—the greatest good to the greatest number—the welfare of yourself and family, call upon you to come and vote in the most free and open election you have ever known.

IN another place in this issue will be found the full State and County tickets to be voted for at the primary next Monday. Unde the plan of the State and County Executive Committees there are two tickets, on different colored papers, the white ticket is for the county offices, and the colored ticket embraces all the State, Congressional and District offices. So far as the county ticket is concerned we are satisfied that each and every voter is thoroughly acquainted with the candidates and will vote for such men as he deems best fitted for the respective offices. We do not presume to offer any advice in this direction, they are all good and competent men, and there can be no mistake in nominating any of them.

With regard to the State ticket, it is generally acknowledged to be the part of wisdom to re-elect the old Supreme Bench. For Chief Justice of the Supreme Court Thos. N. McClellan has no opposition and that is right and proper. The three old members of the Supreme Court, J. R. Dowdell, Jonathan Haralson and John R. Tyson it is greatly to be hoped will be reinstated, and it may be worth while to note that Tyson's name is the last on the list. Of the three new members to be elected, Judge N. D. Denson is so well known and loved in Chilton county to assure him of the vote of our citizens, and R. B. Kelly has made himself so popular in the discharge of his duties as Chancellor that he is certain of the support of our people. John C. Anderson served as our Circuit Judge one term and made many friends here during that period. W. W. Callahan, A. D. Sayre, H. C. Selheimer, R. T. Simpson and W. S. Thorington, the remaining candidates for Associate Justices of the Supreme Court, are not so well known to Chilton voters, but all are good and capable men.

For Supernumerary Judge, A. H. Alston is without an opponent, and is a thoroughly reliable man to be called upon in emergencies.

Of the four candidates for President of the Railroad Commission so much has been said that it is rather confusing. B. B. Comer has stirred up such a hornet's nest that it can hardly be expected he will be able to withstand the sting of the aroused voters. H. C. Compton is a quiet candidate of whom not much has been heard. R. F. Kolb is the only one of the four who has thought it worth while to visit Chilton. He has calmly and without exaggeration told the people what he is prepared to do for them if elected; he is a man of experience in public affairs, does not allow his prejudices to run away with his judgment, and would make a thoroughly competent President of the Railroad Commission. John V. Smith was appointed by Gov. Samford and asks for a second term, and it is to his credit that a reduction of freight rates has been made since he went into office.

For Congress, Sydney J. Bowie is without opposition. He is making us a splendid representative and it would be unwise to substitute another for him.

For Judge of the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit there are two candidates, and here the voters of Chilton have to decide between their own home candidate, W. A. Collier, and a gentleman from Montgomery, T. Scott Sayre. There is a feeling of gratification in the thought that our own county may have amongst the State officers at least one representative. A State officer hailing from Chilton is something new and would advance Chilton in the eyes of the State, and of the world. Montgomery has a plenitude of State officials, why should not Chilton have one? Col. Collier has spent more than thirty years in our county, expects to finish the remainder of his life amongst us, and would like to be remembered in after years as Judge Collier of Chilton.

Two gentlemen, both from Elmore, seek the office of Solicitor for this Circuit; both are pleasant gentlemen, good lawyers, equally capable. J. M. Holley would like to serve you as Solicitor, F. Loyd Tate is serving you now and would like to continue to do so for at least another term.

For Chancellor of the Northeastern Division there are five candidates, B. B. Bridges, of Coosa, R. A. D. Dunlap, of Etowah, Harry J. Gillam, of Elmore, who is in our judicial circuit, E. M. Oliver, of Chambers, and W. W. Whiteside, of Calhoun. The last named gentleman is the only one in the Fourth Congressional District and may therefore as well as Mr. Gillam be considered one of us.

ADDRESS OF DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE.

At a meeting of the Democratic Executive Committee held in Clanton on the 2nd day of February, 1904, it was unanimously decided to issue an address to the people.

We believe that most men, in their cooler and better moments, are moved by what they believe to be right, and that, if this were not so, the world would grow worse instead of better. There must be differences of opinion, but such differences should be based upon principle, and those adhering to the one side or the other should have some great aim in view; some aim which rises higher than individual interest and looks to the well being of humanity in general.

In a free government, such as we enjoy, the well being of the State is a matter which engages the pride and patriotism of all good citizens. There is hardly an Alabamian, regardless of his political views, whose patriotism would not be insulted, if, while sojourning beyond his beloved State, he should hear her reproached, and there is hardly a man in Chilton county who would not enjoy seeing his county take that rank among the other counties of the State to which she is entitled by reason of her natural advantages, her women, her men and her patriotism. As matters now stand Chilton does not enjoy her merited place as one of the counties of Alabama, She does not rank as Republican, Populist, or Democratic. There are few such cases in the history of republican governments. She is not recognized by Republicans because they know she is not Republican. She is not recognized as Populist, because there are no other Populists to recognize her. She is not recognized as Democratic, because she has not been Democratic. She stands aloof, passing down the highway of Time and no one knows, and few seem to care, where. Is there any good reason why this course should be further pursued? If so, what is it? We know of none. The sore toes of a few men furnish no reason to a man who loves his country for continuing this nothingness If you believe in the principles of the Republican party, go to work and do something for our county in that party, if you can. If you are a Populist yon came from good Democratic stock and won't you now come home where you can do some good. If you don't believe that Chilton county should remain in this condition or, that our pride and patriotism should have no other shape than that given it in the Smart Alex catch words and cheap phrases of hatred and abuse, which so easily slip from the tongue of the small politician. We shall not indulge in abuse. Let the dead past bury its dead. If others have anything to offer you, weigh it in the light of reason and patriotism,

We offer to the white men of Chilton county the hand of fellowship. Let us all take communion at the same table, as authorized by the State anthority of our party. We invite you to join us for the good you may do us and we may do you. Let's forge our swords into plowshares, and turn our discordant quarrels in to the voice of peace. General Lee did not look backward at Appomattox to find an excuse for Guerrilla warfare but brave patriot that he was, accepted the results of war and at once began to make the best of the present and future.

Come with us. Your heart is already there, for we are brothers, and your interest is also there. Help us nominate a Supreme Court, a President of the Railroad Commission, the Circuit Judge, the Solicitor, the Chancellor, county officers, and to select delegates to the National convention, and electors for President and Vice President of the United States. Our party brings this opportunity to your door, and with the least possible inconvenience to you, your vote may be cast directly for the man of your choice for these important offices. Some of these officers will be called upon to pass upon the life, liberty and property of some of our citizens, and we want your voice in their selection.

It is far from us to ask that you support any particular candidate. We invite you to fairly consider the ends to be accomplished, and when you have done this, we believe that you can not agree that political parties should be guided by prejudice, but that good American citizens should always be moved by reason and patriotism.

Let us stand together for the good of all.

DEMOCRATIC EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF CHILTON COUNTY,
by Tipton Mullins, Chairman.

Frank Crichton, Secretary.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, April 4, 1904

"It creates a widening circle of weariness in my neighborhood to hear all this talk of a conservative candidate for the Presidency of the Democratic ticket, when the average man does not know what he means when he uses the word 'conservative' in this connection," said the Hon. Frank E. Shober, of New York, a member of congress from the Harlem district. "If he means by 'conservative' that the man must have brains sufficient to understand what would injure the real business interests of the country and steer clear of it, then he does know what he word means and I quite agree with him. If, on the other hand, he means that the candidate must be a namby pamby, milk and water, wishy washy, negative and altogether colorless man who stands for nothing and who has never uttered a word that can be construed into his position on any public question now agitating the people of the country, then I am unalterably opposed to him and his kind of a candidate. I cannot understand how men, who pretend to know anything about the game of politics, can advocate that sort of a candidate in the present circumstances. That manner of candidate on the Democratic ticket in competition with the present occupant of the White House and who undoubtedly will be the Republican candidate, a man who is the very apotheosis of strenuosity, positiveness, aggressiveness, bullheadedness, a man full of color who fills the public eye, would have about as much show of winning as would a one-legged man at kicking match, and the man who advocates that kind of a candidate on the Democratic ticket knows about navigating a ship. To attempt to defeat Roosevelt with that kind of a candidate would, in my opinion, be like trying to stop a cyclone with a quiet closet prayer. What we want and need is not conservatism of the mushy kind, but radicalism of the right sort. We want a man who is radical for the right, radical for equal justice to all and special privileges to none, radical for the enforcement of all laws on the statutes regardless of individuals, radical for the uprooting of the criminal trusts of the country and for legislation that will insure the just and proper distribution of the wealth of the country, radical for honesty, radical for a proper revision and reduction of the tariff schedules of the present iniquitous law that gives shelter to the trusts, radical for proper reciprocal treaties with foreign countries, radical for economy in public expenditures and the proper conservation of internal improvements, radical for Jeffersonian simplicity and pure democracy, radical for all that stands for good government and that will best conserve the best interests of the business men of the country who are within the pale of the law.

With a man who is radical in those things, a man who does things and who is not afraid to come out every day in the year and proclaim that these are his ideas and he stands for them and is radical for them and will press them on the congress of the nation if he should be elected, we can win. With such a man we can hold every Democratic vote in the country and draw to us the votes of millions of men who have hitherto voted the Republican ticket to wit: the working men of the nation. The last congressional election taught us that the Democracy must go to the great labor centers of the country if it wants to make gains in the election this year. C. A. EDWARDS.

Young Plants

Every farmer knows that some plants grow better than others. Soil may be the same and seed may seem the same but some plants are weak and others strong.

And that's the way with children. They are like young plants. Same food, same home, same care but some grow big and strong while others stay small and weak.

Scott's Emulsion offers an easy way out of the difficulty. Child weakness often means starvation, not because of lack of food, but because the food does not feed.

Scott's Emulsion really feeds and gives the child growing strength.

Whatever the cause of weakness and failure to grow—Scott's Emulsion seems to find it and set the matter right.

COURTING AND THE COURTS

How Easy It is to Be Made Liable in a Breach of Promise Case.

EVER since Margaret Gardyner and her daughter Alice brought what is reputed to have been the first breach of promise suit against John Keche, of Yppewych, showing that he, the said John Keche, had received a sum of money on condition of his marrying the aforesaid Alice, and that he had married Joan Bloys, "ageyse all good reason and conscience," breach of promise suits have been recognized among all English speaking peoples. Lord Holt enforced it at common law, holding that "the wounded spirit, the unmerited disgrace and the solitude which would be the probable consequence of desertion after a long courtship, were considered as legitimate claims for pecuniary damages as the loss of reputation by slander or the wounded pride in slight assaults and batteries."

These matrimonial contracts are sui generis. No grim visaged lawyer draws up a formal contract to be executed; no notary pries into the intents and purposes of the parties and certifies the same under his official seal; no go between Pandarus is present to hold the hands of Troilus and Cressida and solemnly pronounce

"A bargain made, seal it, seal it; I'll be the witness."

No—in the vine-clad arbor or behind the protecting screens of parlor walls, in some shady nook, or in the dim moonlight deep down some lonely dell, "far sunken from the healthy breath of morn and eve's one star," these engagements are softly whispered and the contract sealed with a kiss.

For these reasons, while the making of the contract is a question of proof, if need not be proved in totidem verbis, and is often inferred from the actions, language and conduct of the parties, and it is difficult to tell under what circumstances the court would be justified in finding that a promise had been made. Many a young man, not fatally bent on matrimony, would sometimes be surprised to find that his language, intended only as a compliment to some charming damsel, or his conduct, meant solely as an act of gallantry, is sufficient in the eyes of the law to support proof of a promise to marry.

A gentleman once concluded that it would be a very elegant and a very funny thing to send to his dulcinea a newspaper article entitled, "Love, the Conqueror," marking it: "Read this." The lady did read it, and when the funny gentleman declined to marry her, she brought suit against him and read the article to the jury, who gave her $4000 damages. The Supreme Court of Illinois, sustaining the verdict, said: "The article may be regarded as the defendant's own letter. It doubtless contained sentiment which he sanctioned, couched in language more choice than he could compose. It was his appeal for marriage—it foretold in clear and emphatic language his object and intent in his courtship with her. She doubtless placed this construction upon it, as she well might do, and laid it aside as a rare treasure."

In a New York case it was shown on the trial that a widower, a pious elder of fifty-three years of age, soon after the death of his wife, visited the plaintiff, a maiden lady of thirty, and taking out a memorandum book, from which he read, or pretended to read, stated in a confidential way, that he had noted down some requests made by his wife four days before her death; that it was something he "could not tell her now," but that she (the maiden lady) "would know some day," darkly hinting, so the lady took it that the deceased wife had requested the forlorn widower to lighten his grief by marrying the plaintiff. It was proved that after this confidential talk there were rides and drives together, frequent visits extending till late in the evening, and, to cap the climax, the widower told the plaintiff that after the lapse of a year from the death of his wife (the widower's quarantine, it seems), he intended to marry, and he then entered into a minute description of the lady he wanted to marry, which description was an exact photograph of the plaintiff. While we cannot but admire the shrewd diplomacy of this wily widower, courting by dark insinuations and covert suggestions, and not committing himself by an open avowal, yet, as the sequel shows, he ran amuck of the doctrine of estoppel.

The sanctimonious Proteus forgot his Julia and found him another sweetheart, and, knowing that he had become somewhat involved in his affair with the plaintiff, he diplomatically undertook to checkmate the lady. He told her that he did not want her people to think that he was paying her the attentions of a lover so soon after the death of his wife, and, in order to allay that suspicion, he drew up a note, in which the plaintiff was made to say that she regarded his visits as "simply evidences of friendship and nothing more," and got her to sign it. The jury found in her favor and the Court of Appeals of New York upheld the verdict.

In a Connecticut case the defendant had been heard to remark on his happiness when in plaintiff's company and his utter misery unless in her society. The parties had exchanged daguerreotypes, the defendant had taught the plaintiff's nephew to call him uncle, and had told the plaintiff's brother-in-law that "all the courting was done," little suspecting that the plaintiff would take a hand at "courting" in the presence of judge and jury.

The defendant afterward went on a voyage, and while on the sea he indited effusive love letters to the plaintiff, telling her how constantly he thought of her while awake, and how he dreamed of her while asleep, touchingly adding: "While I am tossed to and fro on this wide ocean, I love thee still!"

Yet, notwithstanding all this, the mad lover broke off the engagement.

The plaintiff's "courting" was fully as successful as had been that of the defendant, for she recovered a judgment for $1500.

In a Vermont case the plaintiff and defendant were neighbors, and the defendant paid neighborly visits to the plaintiff's family. It was shown that these visits were at first to the entire family, and that they were gradually narrowed until they were confined to the plaintiff alone. This fact, together with the proof that during the periods of the defendant's visits lights were frequently seen burning in the parlor on Saturday and Sunday evenings, and some other circumstances, led the jury to find for the plaintiff.

A very cruel case occurred in Michigan. A man, who, strange to relate, bore the name of Constant, while engaged in courting had his financial eye open and borrowed money from the lady. On his last visit to her he renewed his notes for one and two years, and then went off and married the other girl. The court held that it was proper to allow proof of this money transaction, holding that "an engagement broken off suddenly and without warning would very naturally create more pain and mortification than if ended under any other circumstances, and if a jury were to regard this conduct concerning money matters as calculated, under the circumstances, to have caused additional grounds of pain or grievance to the defendant in error, we think they would not be violating ordinary probabilities."

Where the defendant asked the hand of the lady in the presence of the latter's mother, who consented, and the lady said nothing, and the defendant then upon gently took the hand of the mother and touchingly said: "Henceforth consider me as your son," it was held sufficient proof of the lady's consent; and in a New York case the lady was permitted to show that she had procured a wedding dress and had gone so far as to get a wedding cake, as showing her acceptance, while in Iowa the plaintiff was allowed to prove in support of her acceptance that she was making preparation for her marriage "piecing quilts and doing fancy work," and that when she heard of defendant's marriage, "she hated it awful bad."

While the law makes it easy to prove a proposal by the gentlemen and equally easy to show that the lady accepted, when it comes to evidence showing a release on the part of the lady, then the proof must be strong to sustain the defense.

In one case a bachelor of fifty-three had been paying his respects to a maiden of forty-three summers for the unlucky period of thirteen years. During all this time she declared to others that she would never marry him and spoke of him in terms of derision and contempt. After thirteen years of courtship the bachelor summoned sufficient courage to propose and was promptly accepted. After the engagement he heard of the double dealings of the maid and refused to marry her. The court held that it was no defense to the action, although it might go to mitigate the damages.

In a Pennsylvania case the lady wrote the defendant a letter in which she said: "I don't want you, for I know that I would have a devil's life of it. If you were any kind of a gentleman you would not act as you have. I pray night and day that you may never prosper in this world. I just pray for every hair in your head to come out." And yet she recovered a judgment for $2000.

In looking beneath the surface for the reason for this verdict it is quite evident that the jury believed that the lady was goaded to desperation by the attentions of her fiance to her rival, and that she did not, in fact, mean to say that she did not want to marry him, and did not really desire that he lose all his hair, for in her letter she says cruelly of her rival: "Well, if I am poor, I do not wear the one hat for five or six years like she does, and turn it hind part before, like she does."

Under the weight of authority, then, if a party does not want to find himself, in the eyes of the law, an engaged man, he must look well to his daily walk and conversation; for, if he has so conducted himself as to be estopped from denying the engagement, he will have a difficult problem to convince a judge and jury that the lady has duly released him.—From the Green Bag.

Success Easier Than Failure.

The principles that win success are very simple and few in number. They are easily remembered. Here they are: First, industry, but not overwork; second, willingness to profit by the experience of others; third, ability, coupled with modesty; fourth, simple and correct habits; fifth, honesty, politeness and fairness. Any one of ordinary ability who practices these rules cannot avoid success. Success is easier than failure.—Atchison Globe.

Menu Names.

Our grandmothers would probably not be any more at sea with the phrases of our modern cook book than we are with the unpronounceable names that are given to the sauces and relishes we read about in magazines. Here is a list which will help you to enjoy these dishes when you know what you are eating:

Au Bleu, a French term applied to fish boiled in flavored white wine.

Au Gras, dressed with meat gravy.

Au Jus, in the natural juice or gravy.

Bain-marie is either a bath of wine, spices and vinegar (English term), or a French double-boiler for keeping sauces hot.

Bechamel, a sauce to serve hot with meats, made of butter for dripping, cur, white stock and herbs.

Blazier, a dish under which is a receptacle for coals to keep it hot.

Bordelaise, a sauce similar to Bechamel, with the addition of a half glass of claret.

Braised meat is meat stewed in a closely covered pan, with bacon, herbs or spices.

Canapes are strips of stale bread fried and spread with seasoned fish or meat paste.

Casserole is a baking dish, though sometimes a form of potatoes or rice surrounding a meat or oyster stew is termed a casserole.

Croutons, stale bread in one-half inch cubes, browned in a slow oven for use in soup.

Living No Longer Cheap in Asia.

During a recent tour in Asia of nearly sixteen months, from February, 1901, to June, 1902, in which I visited Japan, Korea, China, the Philippines, Cochin China, Siam and Laos, the Straits Settlements, Burmah, India, Syria and Palestine, I found everywhere a deep interest in the changing economic conditions. The common people in Asia care little for politics, but the price of food and raiment touches every man, woman and child at a sensitive point.

Almost everywhere the old days of cheap living are passing away. Steamers, railways, telegraphs, newspapers, labor saving machinery, and the introduction of Western ideas are slowly but surely revolutionizing the Orient. Shantung wheat, which formerly had no market beyond a radius of a few dozen miles from the wheat field, can now be shipped by railway and steamship to any part of the world, and in consequence every Chinese buyer has to pay more for it. In like manner new facilities for export have doubled, trebled, and in some places quadrupled the price of rice in China, Siam and Japan.—Century Magazine.

Birds From Barnacles.

Old-time naturalists thought that a kind of geese were hatched from barnacles. Giraldus Cambrensis, in his "Topographia Hibernise" (1164-1188), tells of birds called "Bernacae," which are produced in a marvelous way from "fir timber tossed along the sea." Surrounded by shells, they hang beak downward; then, becoming coated with feathers, they fall into the water as birds, or fly away into the air. In Munster's "Cosmography" (1550), and in Gerard's "Herball" (1597), appears an illustration of the "barnacle tree." Geese are seen protruding from some of the fruits of this marvellous plant, while others, set free, are disporting themselves in the water below. Sir Robert Moray, before the Royal Society of Edinburgh (1677-78), actually described his having seen little shells growing on a fir tree cast up by the waves on the island of Uist, the shells "having within them little [illegible] perfectly shaped, supposed to be [illegible] cles."

Not only is the British shoe made chiefly of American leather and by American machinery, but even the metal hooks and eyelets are practically all imported from the United States.

CHILDREN'S CORNER

Trolley Car's Advantage.

If only boys were trolley cars
How splendid it would be!
No one expects them to "keep still,"
For trolleys, don't you see,
Must clang and rush and clang all day
To do their full duty.

A Paper Doll House.

Lots of children are getting fun making a doll house out of a scrap album. A large album is bought for 25 cents, and then the fun begins of fixing up the home. The book is spread open and on the two pages a piece of colored paper four inches deep is pasted for a carpet. Arranged on the rest of the pages are different articles of furniture cut from the house furnishing books or advertisements. Every room, from garret to cellar, is suitably furnished in this way. Not only chairs, tables and necessary things are included, but the rooms are made beautiful with all kinds of ornaments and pictures.

Moderation in Exercise.

The Japanese use practically no gymnasium apparatus, yet they show greater excellence of strength and endurance than do any other people in the world. While some of their exercises may seem violent, they take them with great moderation. At the outset of a course in jiujitsu the student is rarely upon the floor more than half an hour and three quarters of this time is devoted to walking and breathing between exercises. As the student becomes more proficient, he spends three quarters of an hour on the floor, then an hour, and so on, by degrees, until he is able to give two hours a day to the work. Yet three quarters of his time, or nearly that amount, is spent walking back and forth and in breathing.—H. Irving Hancock, in St. Nicholas Magazine.

A Mimic Senate.

The young pages in the senate, it is said, like nothing better than to set up a miniature senate just after an adjournment or when the senators are late in assembling. One of the older boys seats himself in the chair of the presiding officer, while the others take the seats of the members, and a surprisingly clever burlesque on the senatorial doings follows. One morning, during an especially noisy session of this mock congress, a bright-eyed page, who was then posing as "The gentleman from Kansas," pulled a five-dollar bill from his pocket, mounted a chair, and, waving it, yelled, "The gentleman from Arkansas wishes to introduce this bill." No sooner had he made this speech than the boys made a wild break for him, vaulting over desks in their mad pursuit after "The gentleman from Arkansas," who had made his escape out of the senate chamber and was speeding down the corridor.

Cold and Insect Tissues.

A naturalist once, after experiments in freezing insects and finding that those that had not laid their eggs nor completed their natural term of life always revived, finally cut off the head of a fly and quickly subjected the body to a low temperature. To all appearances it died, as any decapitated fly would have done sooner or later; but upon bringing it to the warmth, the body, much to his surprise, revived and resumed its struggles, until it finally died from the effects of the knife. This shows to what extent the cold acts on insect tissues. They are simply coagulated, and life does not cease, but is only suspended; for when this coagulation or congestion ends, the vital energies resume their normal conditions. If, however, an insect has nearly completed its natural term of life, it will be killed by freezing; it would continue to live for only a short time under favorable conditions in any temperature. The life of most adult insects is at best exceedingly short.—St. Nicholas Magazine.

The Largest Pet in the World.

Probably the only man in the world who has a pet whale lives on a small island in the South Pacific. He is a planter and is the only white inhabitant of his island. He has many brown-skinned assistants who cut and dry the cocoanut rinds that he sells to trading vessels. The planter makes plenty of money in his peculiar trade, but he used to be worried to provide entertainment for the visitors who bought his product. One stormy day, however, a small whale floated through the narrow entrance to the harbor, which is walled in by a coral reef. The whale appeared satisfied with its new home, and remained. As the years passed by, the baby whale proceeded to grow and to wax fat and become tame, for the planter fed it occasionally with a bushel or so of chopped meat. Now the whale is seventy feet long, and is the curiosity of the island. When a trader's boat slips into the harbor the planter gives the officers and crew a banquet under the palms, and then takes them to see the pet whale. At such times a barrel of chopped meat is rolled down to the water side and the planter stands on the shore and blows a horn. Almost instantly the water will begin to churn in the direction of the planter, and the huge whale will run its nose into the sand in its effort to get the barrel of meat in haste. After having eaten the meat, the creature leaps and rolls about gleefully, often tossing its body nearly out of the water.

Some ten or a dozen years ago a whale floundered into Oyster Bay, just north of the Columbia River mouth, and in the state of Washington. The bay is shallow and there is a sand bar at the entrance to it; but the whale must have ridden in on a big wave. At any rate the next morning perhaps the maddest whale in the world was charging up and down the bay, running its nose into the sand furiously, spouting water and mud like a geyser, and evidently determined to get back to the Pacific at any cost. For weeks the gigantic creature raged up and down the bay like a big fish in a small tub of water. The railroads ran excursions to the scene, and the captive animal drew a larger crowd than a whole circus. At last a great storm came, and when it departed the whale went with it. So the railroad declared an extra dividend, and the people about the bay went back to work or play, as suited their tastes or necessities.

The Giant of Cloudland.

Did you ever hear of the Giant of Cloudland? He owns all the clouds, and has a magnificent palace made of moss agate and turquoise. He also has a temper, and at times, spells of the blues.

In one of these blue spells, he became angry at his brother, the Sun, because he thought the Sun came too near his abode for comfort. In fact, he thought the Sun was trying to spoil his beautiful palace by scorching it with his hot rays until it turned purple and red. Cloud Giant decided he would go to the Sun and expostulate with him, so he immediately began making preparations and was soon on his way. The nearer he came to the Sun's home the warmer he became, and when his face began to blister, he thought it would be a wise idea to sit down and try to cool off and send a wireless telegram by a fast-speeding wind. He told the Sun in his message that he must stop scorching his palace and that he preferred not to have the Sun come near him at all.

The jolly, fat Sun only smiled when he received this message, and bidding the wind depart, sent a return message by a sunbeam.

"Dear Brother Cloud Giant—You are cross and crabbed and take life too seriously. You should smile upon the world. What's the use of getting angry with me? I am only doing my duty as our Mother Nature taught me to do, and were I to change my course, or do anything out of the ordinary, I should create great disturbance both in our country and the world below. Your palace is not hurt by my close contact. My turning in into purple and gold in the evening, only intensified its beauty, and varies its monotony of color. If I stay away you will have a dull, dark, dreary-looking home.

"Now, my brother, look up, smile and drive the vapor away. Yours merrily,

"SUN."

When the Cloud Giant read this message he was angrier than ever and went into a rage, storming around fearfully and bursting into tears, so great was his wrath.

The Sun, who was coming to meet the Cloud Giant, was surprised at this great display of temper and chided him for deluging the earth below so as to cause much havoc. He implored his weeping brother to stop his tears and laugh and be happy for a little while at least. "You see, dear Cloud Giant, when you weep so copiously you cause others to be unhappy, and when you laugh and are bright and gay, all the world laughs and is gay with you. Come, let us make up and be friends, smile upon each other and upon the world, and all will be the better for it."

The Cloud Giant became quieter though not entirely consoled, and replied querulously: "You should not always be so happy, Mr. Sun; I am not the only one who causes disturbances and sorrows. Only yesterday, besides scorching my palace, you killed 50 people and 300 horses in the world below, by your red hot breath. You burn houses and wheat fields often and only laugh at the desolation you cause."

"Oh, now really, Cloud Giant, I do not laugh because I have done harm to the people. You see none can avoid doing harm at times, and when I do harmful things, I am always very sorry, but knowing it can not be avoided, I laugh to keep myself from getting morose and melancholy. It is my nature, too, you know, to laugh. The people forgive my faults because they know I do not hurt them intentionally. When I smile upon them too warmly, they know I mean to be kind. I only wish to ripen their grain and help them gain a livelihood, so they pardon me when I am overzealous."

"Well, you know, Sun, that I have a melancholy, tearful nature and I can not always be smiling."

"Yes, that is true, brother, but I tell you what let us do. We will strive from this moment to do our duty as Mother Nature has taught us, and we will try to be happy each in his own way, and that way is in doing good to others. Let us try to be kind to all, and try not to hurt anybody, so that if we do, accidentally, as all are liable to, we will be forgiven, and then we will strive harder in the right way."

The Cloud Giant was now completely pacified and began to smile.

"All right, brother Sun, here is my hand on it. We will try to do our duty, and attend to our own affairs in future."

The two brothers embraced and went their separate ways, each bent upon living in future as their beautiful mother had taught them.

"With malice toward none."—Maude Langstaff in Indianapolis News.

"That's a pretty noisy passenger you've got in there," remarked the man who was smoking on the front platform. "Is he crazy, or only drunk?"

"Neither one," said the motorman. "He's just got a flat wheel in his head."—Chicago Tribune.

Twenty Tons of Letters.

One thousand one hundred twenty-eight mail bags, equaling ty tons weight of correspondence tween America and the United dom, were landed on Sunday at Plymouth from steamship Phila phia, which stopped for the first at that port on her way to Southa ton. There is nothing unusual in magnitude of this correspondence, Plymouth alone there have been deliveries every week not to speak Liverpool and the other ports of What is new is the present extension of the plan introduced by the prise of the Great Western railway which London gets her mails th hours earlier than if they went Southampton as formerly. The rangement has been in force for time past, and two steamers ha been calling regularly every landing both mails and passengers With a third the advantage to chants is greatly increased. The way company, in view of the fact the farther journey to Southamp in foggy weather—which at this son of the year is not a novelty—quently involves a delay of six hou attaches great value to the devel ment of this public service. A Wonderful Motor.

Details are published of a wonder new motor invented by Peter Thom an English engineer. The invent is considered of such importance its development may result in expe railway engines running twice present speed at only half the cost in Atlantic liners crossing from Liv pool to New York in three days.

It is almost small enough to be ried in a typewriter case. The motor is capable of developing revolutions a minute, giving 15-h power under a boiler pressure of pounds to the square inch.

In even the best railway locomo the steam is admitted after the has moved from five to eight inc along the cylinder. Mr. Thornly devised a valve which will admit given quantity of steam at every mencement of the stroke and so adjusted that the expansive force the steam admitted is just sufficient drive the piston at the end of its ney.

By the most modest estimate saving in coal is 25 per cent, the simplicity of the motor is that the initial cost is much than existing types.—New York mercial.

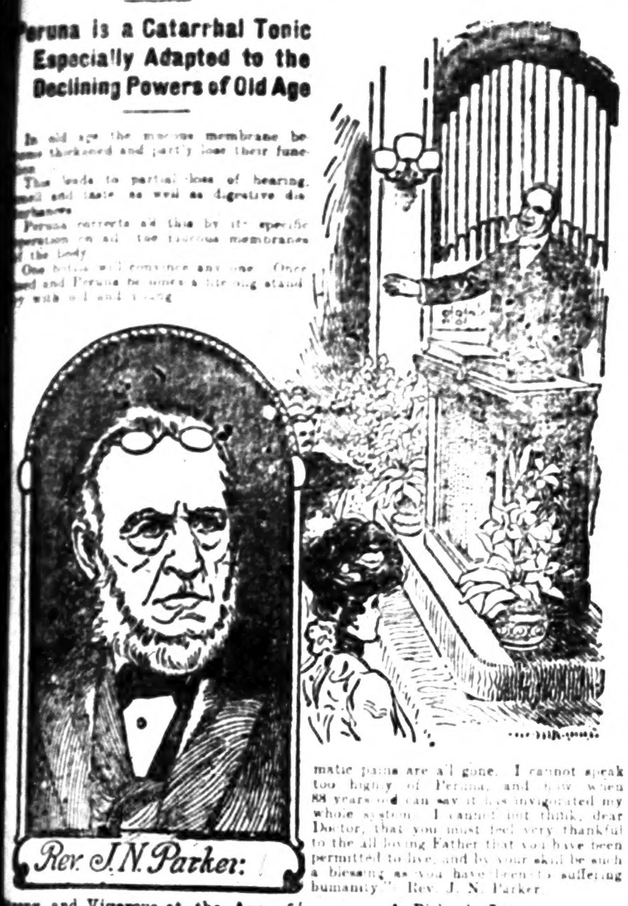
Peruna Is a Catarrhal Tonic Especially Adapted to the Declining Powers of Old Age



Rev. J. N. Parker.

In old age the mucous membrane becomes thickened and partly loses their functions.

This leads to partial loss of hearing, smell and taste as well as digestive disturbances.

Peruna corrects at this by its specific operation on all the mucous membranes of the body.

SYMPATHY.

I chanced to see the other day
A rosy little chap,
A boy from school, released to play.
He wore a nice warm cap,
An overcoat, new rubber shoes—
A better garb no man might choose.

I also saw—and he saw, too—
A fine deep, muddy pool.
The sight attracted others who
Were newly come from school.
A puddle is a thing of joy
To any well-constructed boy.

The lad I marked did straightway dash,
All with a joyous whoop,
Into that pool; he went ker-splash,
Ker-chug, ker slop, ker-schoop.
He paddled in that lovely slime;
You bet he had a royal time.

And soon his nice, warm overcoat
Was soaked with muddy slop.
His cap did on the water float
Where it had chanced to drop.
His hose were drenched, his knickers wet
And muddy as they well could get.

I watched that youngster with a smile
Of kindly sympathy,
And as I watched I thought the while,
"I would that boy were I."
But had he been my boy I tell
You I'd have caught and spanked him well.

London in Moscow.

The continued activity with which the searching of refuse heaps in quest of treasure is being prosecuted makes it interesting to remember that the sifters and sorts of London were once wealthy and organized. A case is on record of one woman who in eight years was able to build house property out of the profits of her grubbing and gleaning. It seems scarcely credible that Moscow is built upon London rubbish. Such, however, is the case. An enormous heap of refuse at the Battle bridge end of what is now Caledonian road, which was "the grand center of dustmen, scavengers, horse and dog dealers, knackermen, brick makers, and other low but necessary professionalists," had lain in that position since the great fire. After the destruction of Moscow upon the visit of Napoleon, the Russians, by some means, came to hear of this dust heap. They bought it, bricks, bones, rubbish and all, shipped it off to Moscow, and upon it founded the resurrected city which travelers know today.—St. James' Gazette.

Jefferson Davis' Secretary Dead.

Burton Norville Harrison, a lawyer of New York, and husband of Mrs. Burton Harrison, the authoress, and father of Congressman Harrison, of New York city, is dead, aged 68 years.

Death resulted from a general breakdown due partially to old age. During the war Mr. Harrison was private secretary to Jefferson Davis, the president of the southern confederacy, remaining with him in the relation of almost a son, as well as secretary to the end of the war. He shared in the capture of Mr. Davis, rather than forsake his fortunes at their fall.

When Mr. Davis was carried to Fort Monroe for imprisonment Mr. Harrison was sent to prison in Washington, and finally sent to Fort Delaware, where he remained in solitary confinement until 1866, when he was released.

There are no rich men in Japan, as judged by the standards of the United States. There are only two men in the empire who pay an income tax on over $125,000 a year. More astonishing still to American eyes are the statements that there are only thirteen men in the empire who pay on $20,000 a year; thirty-seven on $12,000; ninety-three on $8,500 and 140 on $5,500. Out of every 1,000 in the empire there are only seven who have incomes which equal $1,[illegible] a year. Yet the 44,000,000 people of this comparatively poor little country buy from the outside world goods to the yearly average of $7 each. The total wealth of the empire of Japan has been estimated as follows:

Lands	$3,500,000,000
Mines	250,000,000
Live stock	40,000,000
Buildings	950,000,000
Furniture	200,000,000
Railroads	175,000,000
War and merchant ships	125,000,000
Specie	100,000,000
Miscellaneous	150,000,000
Goods and products	400,000,000
Total	$5,540,000,000

"It might be well for the Japanese sympathizers in this country to consider what effect a complete triumph for Japan in the present war may have on the far east," writes a prominent diplomat. "With the Philippines offering thousands of miles of unprotected coast line, and with the Hawaiian islands in a similar condition, it is well for the United States to consider what will happen if a great power should make up its mind to become master of the east. American army officers have repeatedly called attention to the impossibility of defending the Philippines and the Hawaiian islands under present conditions."

Dr. Reaume, member for Windsor, in the provincial legislature of Canada, has introduced a bill to amend the marriage act by inserting a clause that when parties desiring to wed reside outside the Dominion of Canada, their application for marriage license shall be accompanied by an affidavit stating that the notice of their proposed marriage has been published for seven days in two newspapers of the town where the license was issued. If the bill is passed it will cause Windsor to lose its reputation for Gretna Green affairs.

The Korean wedding ceremony has no equal for simplicity. At a word from the priest the contracting persons bow to each other slowly and solemnly—all is over! REACH THE SPOT.

To cure an aching back,
The pains of rheumatism,
The tired-out feelings,
You must reach the spot—get at the cause.
In most cases 'tis the kidneys.
Doan's Kidney Pills are for the kidneys.

Charles Bierbach, stone contractor, living at 2625 Chestnut St., Erie, Pa., says: "For two years I had kidney trouble, and there was such a severe pain through my loins and limbs that I could not stoop or straighten up without great pain, had difficulty in getting about and was unable to rest at night, arising in the morning tired and worn out. The kidney secretions were irregular and deposited a heavy sediment. Doctors treated me for rheumatism, but failed to help me. I lost all confidence in medicine, and began to feel as if life were not worth living. Doan's Kidney Pills, however, relieved me so quickly and so thoroughly that I gladly made a statement to that effect for publication. This was in 1898, and during the six years which have elapsed I have never known Doan's Kidney Pills to fail. They cured my wife of a severe case of backache in the same thorough manner."

A free trial of this great kidney medicine which cured Mr. Bierbach will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists; price 50 cents per box.

A prominent club woman, Mrs. Danforth, of St. Joseph, Mich., tells how she was cured of falling of the womb and its accompanying pains and misery by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Life looks dark indeed when a woman feels that her strength is fading away and she has no hopes of ever being restored. Such was my feeling a few months ago when I was advised that my poor health was caused by prolapsus or falling of the womb. The words sounded like a knell to me, I felt that my sun had set; but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound came to me as an elixir of life; it restored the lost forces and built me up until my good health returned to me. For four months I took the medicine daily and each dose added health and strength. I am so thankful for the help I obtained through its use."—MRS. FLORENCE DANFORTH, 1007 Miles Ave., St. Joseph, Mich.

A medicine that has restored so many women to health and can produce proof of the fact must be regarded with respect. This is the record of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which cannot be equalled by any other medicine the world has ever produced. Here is another case:—

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For years I was troubled with falling of the womb, irregular and painful menstruation, leucorrhœa, bearing-down pains, backache, headache, dizzy and fainting spells, and stomach trouble.

"I doctored for about five years but did not seem to improve. I began the use of your medicine, and have taken seven bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, three of Blood Purifier, and also used the Sanative Wash and Liver Pills, and am now enjoying good health, and have gained in flesh. I thank you very much for what you have done for me, and heartily recommend your medicine to all suffering women."—MISS EMMA SNYDER, 218 East Center St., Marion, Ohio.

"FREE MEDICAL ADVICE TO WOMEN."

Women would save time and much sickness if they would write to Mrs. Pinkham for advice as soon as any distressing symptoms appear. It is free, and has put thousands of women on the right road to recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham never violates the confidence thus entrusted to her, and although she publishes thousands of testimonials from women who have been benefited by her advice and medicine, never in all her experience has she published such a letter without the full consent, and often by special request of the writer.

The "Auld Brig o' Ayr," immortalized by Burns, is falling into decay, after a useful existence of over 600 years. An architect reports that it will soon collapse unless it be shored up and renewed. He is trying to induce the town council of Ayr to appropriate $3,500 for its preservation. The council is willing to act, it is said, but is delaying over a question of whether the money should come from taxation or be taken from a bequest long ago made for the purpose, the validity of which is undecided.

To the Democratic Voters of Alabama:

We, the undersigned, being all of the practicing lawyers residing in the First Judicial Circuit of Alabama, hereby present for your favorable consideration the name of Judge John C. Anderson of Marengo county, for one of the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court.

While Judge Anderson is only in the prime of life, he has had nearly ten years experience as judge of this Circuit, and stood in the front rank of the profession before going to the bench.

Judge Anderson has made an enviable record as a Circuit Judge, and we think his legal learning, industry and high character will make him a capable and useful member of the Supreme Court.

Judge Anderson is the only candidate for any State office south of Tuscaloosa and West of Selma, and the First District has had no member of the Supreme Court since the time of Judge Manning of Mobile, twenty five years ago.

We appeal to the fair minded voters of Alabama, to not only help us nominate a worthy man, but to do equity toward Southwest Alabama. There are seven judges to nominate including the Chief Justice, and we ask for but one. Respectfully,

Best Cough Medicine for Children.

When you buy a cough medicine for small children you want one which you can place implicit confidence. You want one that not only relieves but cures. You want one that is pleasant to take. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy meets all these conditions. There is nothing so good for the coughs and colds incident to childhood. It is a certain preventive and cure for croup, and there is no danger of ever from whooping cough when it is given. It has been used in epidemics of that disease with perfect success. AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

THE NECESSARY MAGAZINE IN THE PRESIDENTIAL YEAR

The Review of Reviews is often called a necessity, in recognition of its usefulness in keeping readers "up with the times."

In Presidential election years the REVIEW OF REVIEWS is more than ever "the necessary magazine." Everybody wants to be truly and quickly informed about this or that public question that has forged to the front; to know about the new candidates and personal factors in politics, to have a complete picture at hand of the current movement of history.

In Dr. Shaw's editorials, in its authentic and timely contributed articles, in its brilliant character sketches, in its condensations and reviews of all the important articles of other magazines, and in its hundred a month of valuable portraits, witty cartoons, and interesting views, the REVIEW OF REVIEWS gives the much desired news of the world's and our own progress. "The World under a Field-glass" is the way one subscriber describes it.

Men in public life, like President Theodore Roosevelt, the members of Congress, and the great captains of industry, who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided it is "indispensable."

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not

The primary is over and the nominees are feeling good, while the unsuccessful candidates are consoling themselves with the reflection that having done their best to secure the nomination there is nothing more to be said, and all like sensible men, are going on with their usual avocations as if there was no politics in the world. It speaks well indeed of the standing of the three candidates for probate judge in their own community when all three receive nearly an equal vote, and in fact the voters of the entire county seem to be nearly equally divided on the merits of the three.

Two or three weeks ago, talking to some Populist friends, they were highly amused when I express d the opinion that from six to seven hundred votes would be polled at the primary on April 11. Four hundred or five hundred they would allow, would be a "mighty fine vote" for a primary now. It was a grand turn out and presages a good vote in November.

So far as the returns have come in up to the present, it appears that Chilton will not have the honor of furnishing the judge of the fifteenth circuit. Col. Collier carried his home county, receiving a flattering vote at his home beat, and he has propably carried Autauga, while nothing definite can be learned from Elmore. The Colonel got a right good vote in Montgomery, carrying his old beat, Pine Level, by two to one.

Another brick store is being erected for Dr. Matthews at the upper end of town, across from the court house. Gradually all the vacant lots are being filled up with substantial structures, adding much to the beauty and wealth of the town. Dr. D. A. Campbelle has bought the lot, known as the Julia Campbell lot, and will build an elegant residence thereon.

FARMERS' INSTITUTE

The Farmers' Institute, held at the court house last Saturday, was attended by about 75 farmers in the morning and 50 in the evening. In the morning Dr. C. A. Cary gave a talk on the necessity of stock raising as a means of improving the soil and of profitable farming. Every farmer in Alabama should grow all the live stock on his farm that he can feed and thus diversify his crops, make his home foods supplies and raise cotton only on land that will produce a bale of cotton per acre. Always aim to raise the best kinds of animals and crops and they will bring the best prices.

Prof. C. L. Hare told how to buy commercial fertilizers according to the quantity of plant food they contain and not by the brand or by the ton. He also explained how to buy the ingredients and mix the fertilizers at home so as to make any grade of fertilizers desired. He furthermore said it was safest, cheapest and best to buy high grade goods rather than the cheap, low grade fertilizers.

After dinner Prof. Mackintosh spoke on fruits and vegetables, giving some valuable pointers about means of getting rid of insect pests, etc. Following this Dr. C. A. Cary described the ways of inoculatng soil for hairy vetch, alfalfa and bur clover and told how and when to plant those seed in order to be somewhat certain of a crop. He also discussed the value of cow peas, hairy vetch, alfalfa, burmuda, sorghum, shredded fodder, wheat and oats as hay or forage crops and as feed for stock.

Next Prof. Hare gave a detailed three year system of rotation of crops, having cotton the first year, followed by corn and peas the second year and then vetch and peas or sorghum the third year.

Maplesville.

Mrs. Sneed of Centreville has ate very ted relatives here.

Miss Vergey Grace of Montgomery, who made many friends here by her charming ways, has deughted them by a visit to Mrs. Ricketts. We believe a certain young man has enjoyed her visit more than any one, since it was reported that Cupid was seen with his quiver filled.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones have lately been to Selma.

Mrs. W. Garner of Selma has visited relatives here.

The Misses Powell, who attended school in Montevallo, have visited their sister here, Mrs. Annie Gilbert.

Mrs. Adair of Uniontown, mother of our teacher here, gave her friends, Mrs. Glover, a great pleasure in a visit.

We regret that Mrs. Denson is in the infirmary for treatment. Miss Denson has charge of her family.

Dr. Goodwyn DuBose and wife have visited his grandmother here, Mrs. N. C. Goodwyn.

The former patrons of our school are pleased to have Miss Adair to teach longer, she has given general satisfaction in every respect as a most successful teacher. Her training of the little ones in the beautiful Easter services was wonderfully successful, some only four years old recited without fault. The church decoration, by Miss Adair's taste, was very beautiful with evergreen, garlands and flowers.

Our gifted citizen, of whom we are proud, T. U. Crumpton, introduced Hon. E. Bishop, of Blocton, who made a most eloquent address on the beauties of Easter. Mr. Crumpton gave us a most learned address on its origin and history.

Rev. Mr. Winslow gave a most touching prayer at the closing of our beautiful Easter services. Everyone enjoyed the excellent and beautiful rendition of our Easter services which were planned by our gifted teacher, Miss Adair.

Mrs. Claughton gave music in her peculiar, scientific way. We were grateful to Dr. Walker of Plantersville; Mr. Allen, Miss Edna Ricketts and Mrs. Saportas, who sang for us.

Mrs. Ricketts has had a most enjoyable entertainment in which Kelley's string band furnished his wonderful music for the graceful dancers. Dr. Walker of Atlanta and his brother of Plantersville and Mr. Yates of Riderville and Dr. Walker of Centreville were there.

Our mill has been repaired by a first class machinist from New York and is now in most excellent order.

FIRE.

The home of J. A. Culp Jr. was totally destroyed by fire last Wednesday afternoon (April 6). Mr. Culp had come to Clanton to have a mule's tooth taken out, belonging to his father, and Mrs. Culp who had shortly before left the house, saw the smoke arising, and at once returned, but unfortunately was unable to save anything at all. The house and furniture Mr. Culp estimates was worth $700, and the entire loss has left him bare of this world's goods. He carried no insurance, and the neighbors are assisting him, and any help the people can give will be thankfully appreciated.

A Thoughtful Man.

M. M. Austin of Winchester, Ind. knew what to do in the hour of need. His wife had such an unusual case of stomach and liver trouble, physicians could not help her. He thought of and tried Dr. King's New Life Pills and she got relief at once and was finally cured. Only 25c, at Clanton Drug co., Hopkins Drug co.

HON. TERRY RICHARDSON,

PRESIDING JUDGE OF THE FIFTEENTH JUDICIAL CIRCUIT.

A brief sketch of Judge Richardson, whose portrait is presented above, will be of interest to the people of Chilton county. On the death of the late Judge Winter, Gov. Jelks appointed Terry Richardson, a young and popular lawyer of Montgomery, to fill the vacant position. He is only 28 years of age, was born in Greenville, Butler county, his father being Judge J. C. Richardson, who now presides over the Second Judicial Circuit, and who is well remembered here as presiding judge of one of our terms of court. Terry Richardson was educated in the common schools of Greenville and entered the State University in 1892. In 1898 he was admitted to the bar, and practiced law with much success at Greenville and Troy, removing to Montgomery in 1901, where he soon acquired a lucrative practice, and was appointed special solicitor of Montgomery county during the Constitutional Convention, on account of the sickness of the late Tennant Lomax. In 1902 he was married to Miss Margaret Crommelin, of Montgomery.

His appointment as temporary Judge of the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit was well received by his compeers, who recognize in him the judicial temperament of his honored father, and the impartial manner in which he has presided over the courts of the circuit justifies the good opinion that was formed of him. Judge Richardson has the distinction of being one of the youngest circuit judges in the United States, and, with the fine commencement he has made, the future holds out for him the greatest possibilities. His term expires May 1, 1904, when Gov. Jelks will appoint the nominee of the primary of April 11 to fill out the unexpired term of the late Judge Winter. Judge Richardson is a pleasant, affable gentleman, a fine lawyer, an impartial judge—qualities which commend him to the good opinion of all.

Shoults.

School is out and it makes me glad and sorry too. It makes me sorry to part from my good teacher and playmates, it makes me glad to think we can meet in a Sunday school that was organized last Sunday. J. R. McAfee was elected superintendent; J. P. Merchant, assistant supt; C. T. Walker, secretary. Teachers will be elected next Sunday. We had a good number to join us last Sunday and are glad to learn that a great number of boys and girs will join us next Sunday. I just want to say to those boys that have been spending Sundays lizard hunting and robbing birds' nests, please come out to Sunday school next Sunday and you will not regret it when your heads are gray. Success to our Sunday school.

Mrs. E. W. Willis, who was also on the sick list, is much better, after two weeks illness.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, is narated by John Oliver of Philadelphia, as follows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters; to my great joy, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents, guaranteed, at Clanton Drug co., Hopkins Drug co.

Published Weekly

CLANTON, ALA.

A London society belle has endeavored to make life interesting by seeing how many times she can get engaged. Such conduct is inexcusable except in the summer time.

According to one of the magazines, there is a doctor for every 350 persons in this country. Won't somebody give us the statistics of the undertaking business?

A happy combination. The crown-princess of Denmark enjoys the double distinction of being the wealthiest and tallest woman of her rank in Europe. Her royal highness inherited nearly $15,000,000 from her maternal grandmother, as well as the bulk of her father's fortune. She is six feet tall.

Possibly there may be a disposition in some quarters at present to lay a little too much stress upon the beneficial effects of big fires in big cities in clearing the way for a new mapping out of previously congested districts. Suggestions of that kind are exceedingly far reaching. Stockholders of fire insurance companies, however, are not frantically enthusiastic.

The increasing frequency of bank failures caused by cashiers or other other officers speculating in stocks seems to call for more stringent legislation on the subject. An officer of a bank stands in the relation of a trustee to depositors, and the moment he begins to speculate with the funds of the bank he commits a breach of trust and an embezzlemnt. If justice were done there should be no escape from the penitentiary for that kind of speculating officers.

The mystery as to why the North Pole attracts so many more explorers than the South Pole has been recently explained by Lieutenant Peary. He says that "the North Pole is the last great geographical prize which the earth has to offer." The North Pole is much harder to reach than the South Pole, says Peary. The North Pole is a great frozen sea, while the South Pole is solid land. It is only a matter of time and patience, therefore, to get to the South Pole, but the trip to the North Pole will remain for some time the most risky and daring journey that is possible to man.

A very moving wail of anguish appears in the Spectator of London over what it calls "a noticeable decadence in the spirit in which the great English games and open-air sports are carried on." Fifty years ago, the writer says, cricket was a pastime; matches were got up and played much in the same casual, happy spirit as that in which a game of billiards is played in a country house after dinner; it did not matter much which side won; the thing was to get a game and to play the game hard. Today cricket is pure business, a competition between purses. So, too, with football. From being a game between public school teams for sport rather than for cups, it has come to be confined to professional elevens, the members of which are bought to play for this or that club with respect solely for their physical capabilities. Nobody cares from what section of the country they come—the great thing is to provide a spectacle which men will pay money to see.

The British idea of reform is to abolish an office and appoint the occupant of the old place to the new one. So Earl Roberts is to be the inspector-general under the army reorganization scheme. The greatest of the king's generals is admittedly a failure as a reformer. He is in sympathy with the feminine wire pullers of London society. In South Africa his staff was composed of titled fledglings. It was Kitchener who made a change and put a stop to what Sir Frederick Treves called "the plague of women" at the front. If Kitchener were selected to attend to the new scheme people would put some trust in it. Lord Wolseley repeated the other day his old statement that our army is a model in its way. It has been improved on by the inauguration of a staff system. There are those who know about King Edward's army who say that in certain ways the British army is in as bad a way as the German one and that abuses similar to those told of by Lieut. Bilse in "Aus Einer Kleinen Garnison" will come to light some time or other.

THE WORLD'S WONDERS ON DISPLAY

St. Louis Working Night and Day to Be in Readiness For the Opening of the World's Fair on Saturday, April 30th Next.

NOW THE first few thousand carloads of the twenty thousand cars of exhibits that will arrive at the World's Fair in St. Louis within the next few weeks have been received and unloaded. Large forces of men are employed night and day in receiving and placing the valuable products from many nations of the world as they come in. Any one who has not been over the World's Fair grounds cannot, with the widest stretch of his imagination, realize the magnificence of this latest and greatest of Universal Expositions. With its thousand buildings spread out over an area of two square miles, enclosed by six miles of fence, the great World's Fair glistens in the sun, and is the centre of interest to all this part of the country.

The management has very considerately arranged many of the principal exhibit palaces in a compact group. While there are more than twenty-five buildings of considerable size given up to exhibit purposes, the very large buildings are some fifteen in number; eight of these, the Palace of Transportation, Machinery, Electricity, Varied Industries, Education, Manufactures, Mines and Metallurgy, Liberal Arts, are situated in the north eastern part of the grounds. The main entrance to the Exposition will let the visitor into the centre of this group. As each building covers from eight to fifteen acres and contains several miles of aisles, lined on either side by most interesting exhibits, the visitor will see his time slipping away with a world of things yet remaining to be seen.

The Government has spent more on this Exposition than it has ever expended before. First, it gave $5,000,000 to the general fund of the Exposition, upon consideration that the city of St. Louis would raise $10,000,000. This of course was promptly done. Then, the Government appropriated nearly a million and a half more for buildings and exhibits, and a few weeks ago decided to make a loan of $4,000,000 to the Exposition in order to have the elaborate plans carried out to their completeness. The Government cannot lose much on this investment at St. Louis, for the reason that St. Louis returns in internal revenue taxes for the Eastern half of Missouri alone, over $15,000,000 a year.

I wish I might describe the great beauty of the Government building. It is 800 feet long and stands on a broad terrace upon the hillside, overlooking the grand group of exhibit palaces. Near by are the Government Fisheries building and sea coast defense guns.

The Palace of Agriculture is the largest of the Exposition buildings and stands in the central western part of the grounds, upon a high elevation. This building covers twenty acres of ground, the equivalent of a small farm, and contains many thousands of exhibits, not only from the States of the United States but from countries of the world. The Palace of Horticulture stands directly south of the Palace of Agriculture and is open by 830 feet.

The Palace of Art, composed of four large pavilions is one of the most interesting parts of the Fair. The several buildings contain a total of 135 galleries, filled with the priceless treasures of Europe and America, gathered with great care by discriminating committees. As an example of the care with which these selections were made, Italy may be taken as an example. Some four thousand paintings were offered, yet only four hundred could be selected. One of the four buildings of the Palace of Art is devoted entirely to statuary.

The Palace of Forestry, Fish and Game is in the western part of the grounds, covering four acres. The new science of forestry has here a most interesting exemplification.

In the central western part of the grounds are many of the Foreign Government Pavilions. Some fifty foreign nations are taking active part in the World's Fair, several of them spending more than a half-million dollars each. These are England, France, Germany, Brazil, Japan and China. Japan alone has brought seventy-eight thousand exhibits.

The displays from the Philippine Islands form a very attractive feature of the Exposition. There are some eighty thousand of these exhibits arranged in buildings upon a reservation of forty acres, lying west of the Palace of Agriculture.

About thirty acres are given up to an exhibit of the North American Indians, their industries and home life. A large space is devoted to the aerial concourse. Here will be held the series of airship trials and contests, upon which the Exposition has planned to expend $200,000. Of this sum, $100,000 is to be given as a grand prize to the aeronaut who will sail an airship in the quickest time over a fourteen mile course.

The quadrennial Olympic games are to be held at the World's Fair this year. A large building devoted to physical culture exhibits is situated in the western part of the grounds, and adjacent to it is the fine large athletic field, with amphitheatre seating twenty-seven thousand people. Upon this field the games will take place during the summer.

In this hurried glance at the Exposition of 1904, we must not forget that very interesting quarter known as the Pike. This is the amusement street of the Exposition. The visitor will certainly open his eyes in amazement when he sees the array of side shows spread out for his delectation. It is a long story in itself to tell what has been prepared for his entertainment. The Pike is considerably more than a mile long, and upon either side are arranged about fifty elaborate and extremely novel shows. Some of them cover as many as ten or eleven acres each.

The World's Fair will open on Saturday, April 30 with stirring ceremonies. Upon that occasion an anthem written by Edmund Clarence Stedman will be sung by a chorus of six hundred voices. The music by the eminent composer, Professor John K. Paine, of Harvard University, as well as the poem, was written especially for this occasion upon the invitation of the Exposition. Frank Vanderstucken, director of the Cincinnati Orchestra, has written a march, and Henry K. Hadley, of New York, has written a waltz, also upon invitation of the Exposition, for its musical programs.

The central feature of the Exposition, or what is intended to be the most beautiful scene in the whole grand picture, is made up of Cascade Gardens, the Colonade of States and the Hall of Festivals. The gardens with their cascades and statuary, and the elaborate architectural features, are nearly a half a mile from east to west and represent an expenditure of one million dollars. It is the most ambitious scheme of formal gardening ever undertaken at an Exposition, or elsewhere. The Festival Hall, 200 feet in diameter and 200 feet high, contains the largest organ in the world, and has a seating capacity for thirty-five hundred people.

Practically all St. Louis is preparing to accommodate World's Fair visitors. The private homes will be open for the reception of guests throughout the Exposition. The prices will be from 50c. to $1.50 per day for each person for rooms. Restaurants are so plentiful that meals may be had in almost any locality where the visitors may happen to stop.

RUSSIA'S VICEROY.

Admiral Alexeieff a Master Mind, a Master Will and a Masterful Hand.

Admiral E. I. Alexeieff, described by Senator Beveridge in his book, "The Russian Advance," as "a master mind, a master will, altogether a masterful man," is the subject of an informing article by Charles Johnston, in Harper's Weekly. Admiral Alexeieff has toiled for years at the building of a new region of Russian influence, a region nearly as large as the combined area of France and Germany, and with a fringe of possible future acquisitions many times greater, only to see the whole of his life work threatened with dissolution. "In this lifework," says Mr. Johnston, "he has accomplished miracles almost, facing conditions of great and unexpected difficulty, amid surroundings alternately picturesque with the glamor of the East and squalid with intrigue and physical wretchedness. Through all these difficulties Admiral Alexeieff has acted with constant resolution, force, rapidity, and constructive power.

Youngest Cavalryman of Civil War.

The death of Oscar Arion Frost, at Ottawa, brings out the claim for him that he was the youngest cavalryman enlisted in the Civil War. He went into the Third Missouri Cavalry at fourteen years of age, and served through the war. It cannot be claimed for Mr. Frost, though, that he was boyish in appearance. At the time of his enlistment he was six feet tall and weighed 190 pounds.—Kansas City Journal.

MUSIC AND ANIMALS.

The Puma Is the Most Sensitive to the Influence of Melody.

Some very curious experiments have recently been carried out in the German Zoological Gardens in order to ascertain the actual influence of music upon animals. The instrument was the violin and Herr Baker was the performer.

Of all the animals the puma was the most sensitive to the musical influence. His moods changed rapidly, according to the nature of the melody, the animal frequently becoming very excited and nervous, "just like a Frenchman," as the report says.

Leopards were entirely unconcerned, but the lions appeared to be afraid, although their cubs wanted to dance when the music became livelier. The hyenas were very much terrified, but the monkeys were merely curious and the monkeys were merely curious.

The experiments are to be continued, and with a variety of instruments, in order to distinguish between the mental states which are actually produced by the music and those which are merely the result of an unusual experience.—Scientific American.

Interesting.

To hear the music of sweet bells, and also to test solid silver, take a solid-silver tablespoon, and tie two cords of equal length to the handle. Hold the ends of the cords to each ear, at the same time closing the ears with the fingers. Then by a motion of the body swing the spoon, letting it strike the back of the chair or like wooden object. You have no idea what sweet music you will hear. Try it, and see. —Woman's Home Companion.

N-RAYS AND DIGESTION.

This Process Causes Their Emission, as Does Muscular Activity.

That the processes of digestion, as well as mental and muscular activity, seem to cause the emission of N-rays, is the conclusion reached by M. Lambert, in France, after a series of interesting experiments. He believes that these curious rays are produced by ferments, especially by those concerned in the digestion of albuminoid matter. In his experiments on digestion, says a writer in Harper's Weekly, M. Lambert placed a small quantity of fibrin in tubes containing in one case activated pancreatic juice, and in another artificial gastric juice made by mixing five per cent. solution of pepsin with a four per cent. solution of hydrochloric acid. From these tubes the N-rays were emitted, and were detected not only by producing increased luminescence of a phosphorescent screen, but also photographically, thus removing the subjective element from the experiment. As a result of these experiments, M. Lambert believes that in the course of digestion the fibrin undergoes strains which act to produce N-rays.

To Chase Earthquakes.

In April of this year there will begin a curious [illegible] which is to last twelve years.

It is the work of watching the earthquakes of the world, and most of the nations will contribute earthquake detectives.

The object is to learn something about earthquakes that may lead to a discovery of their causes, the hope is that something may develop which will enable scientists to warn persons in threatened districts in time so that they may escape, just as is done now in the case of storms.

This international hunt for the earthquake was organized in Strasburg, Germany, during the last session of the International Seismic Congress. All the nations that joined in the work then have agreed to use all available government departments to gather statistics about earthquakes, and to forward them to the Central Bureau, which is the German Imperial Central station for Earthquake Study in Strasburg.

Rules and regulations have been laid down for observation, and the members know just what facts should be gathered. Whatever money can be raised will be used for the establishment of observatories and experiment stations in lands that are sufferers from these disturbances.

The reports that are sent in to the central station will be edited and published periodically.

The delegates who voted for organized earthquake chase represented the United States, Mexico, Chili, Argentina, the Congo Free State, Japan, and most of the governments of Europe.

Pears Enough.

An eccentric old man named Dodge, once taught a young man a lesson in the art of letting things alone. The old man was once having his barn shingled, and a pear tree stood so near the roof that the carpenters' heads were among its branches. One young man could not resist the temptation to pick and eat some of the pears, although they were not yet ripe.

Mr. Dodge saw him from the house, but left him undisturbed until several pears had been eaten. Then taking a plateful of ripe fruit, he climbed to where the youth was at work. As he came in sight, he noticed that a half-consumed pear was hastily concealed in the pocket of the carpenter's apron.

"Have a pear," said Mr. Dodge, offering the plate.

"No, thank you," replied the young man, "I don't care for any."

"Oh, take one," urged Mr. Dodge. "The pears out here aren't ripe yet. Take one of these, do."

His manner, more than his words, at last prevailed upon the young carpenter to try one.

Then Mr. Dodge talked about the weather, about shingling and various topics until the workman finished eating, when he urged him to take another. "Take one, do! These out here aren't very good."

The man ate a second. Then the persistent owner coaxed him to take a third, and a fourth, until the shingler was forced to confess he had had enough.

"Oh," replied his tormentor. "I didn't know that there was enough here for you."

Then going to the house and seating himself by the window he waited for results. Pretty soon he noticed that the young man appeared uneasy, and walked back and forth, as if in pain. Then he sat down on a pile of shingles, all doubled up, with his hands clasped tightly over his stomach. The old man ran for his plate of pears.

"What's the matter? Want another pear?" he exclaimed, hailing the carpenter.

"No——too many already," groaned the sufferer.

"Too many? Land! four aren't many for a man of your get!"

"But I ate four before you came out," was the reply.

"Oh, ho! Helped yourself, did you? Then 'twas the four pairs of 'em that hurt you. Serves you right. You'd better learn to ask permission the next time."

The great pear tree remained undisturbed by that carpenter while his job lasted.

Boy's Curiosity.

If an old story be true the curiosity of a little boy led to the invention of the telescope, that remarkable glass which reveals the wonders of the heavens to our eyes. I suppose we all know that Galileo first constructed and used a telescope for scientific purposes, but some one else first conceived the idea of one. Now, here is a story which I think interesting enough to tell you.

Many years ago there lived in far away Holland an optician. He had three children, all of whom loved to play about and watch him as he sat at his bench working. His little boy especially thought it great fun to look through the glasses his father used in his work. Many of them had such odd shapes, and often as he held them up to the sun he could make lovely rainbows on the floor and walls. It so chanced one memorable day that he had taken two glasses, and, standing in the street, just outside the shop, he held both to his eyes at the same time. All at once it seemed that the face of the great clock, which he knew to be several blocks away, was right before him. For a moment he was frightened. How had the clock come so near to wonder of wonders! He winked his eyes very hard and looked at it without the glasses. There it was in its usual place, far away. He could see [illegible]

But it was true. So said to himself, "[illegible] the glasses made it have that appearance and set why. So [illegible] he sat down on the [illegible] to think it out. He [illegible] was far away. Then he turned the glasses in all directions with no better success, but quite soon decided, as he was looking both in one hand, he saw the clock right before him again.

Oh! I know I know," he cried joyfully. "Father [illegible] come."

Of course his father soon [illegible] a great hero, not knowing what the trouble might be. When he did find out he too thought it was very wonderful and so he set to work to make an instrument which would make distant objects [illegible]. To do it he had to [illegible] one concave and the other convex. When the great Galileo heard of it [illegible]

How happy he was to do it! If I might have an instrument strong enough to make the stars seem near, and after much labor he succeeded. So you see was a great and important discovery the action of this small boy led to, for without the telescope we would have learned very little about the stars or the sun or the moon.—New York Press.

Leslie's Report Card.

Leslie came in from school with a whirl behind her. It was a chilly winter's evening, and Aunt Grace, in her easy chair by the window, drew her shawl more closely about her.

"Mama, see my report!" said Leslie, tossing the card into her mother's lap. "Isn't it splendid?" and she danced off so wildly that she upset Baby Herbert's blocks, whereupon a wail arose from his babyship.

"Leslie," called mama, "please go at once and close the door, then pick up Herbert's blocks."

Leslie rushed to close the door, and shut it directly upon Jamie, also hurrying home with his report. When he was quieted, mama said: "Leslie, if you must rush about, you may take this letter to the postoffice, then go to the meat market and order steak. On your way home you may match this silk for Aunt Grace."

"All right, mama, but please do look at my report," Leslie answered.

"Mine, too," said Jamie.

"Mine's better than yours," said Leslie, teasingly. "It's the best in my class, and yours isn't."

"Leslie, you will be too late for the mail if you do not go at once," and with a final warning word from her mother, Leslie was off.

Back again at tea time, it was found that she had forgotten to match the silk for Aunt Grace. She teased the cat, scolded Jamie, and neglected Herbert when asked to amuse him. At last mama said, "Leslie, you go to bed. If I were to write a report for you, I fear it would not be much like the one Miss Lane gave you."

What could mama mean? She was one of Miss Lane's best pupils. "If mama only knew how hard I study!" she thought.

Morning duties hurried through, she snatched the report of which she was so proud and hurried out to join Bessie Palmer.

"My report is lovely!" said Leslie. "Did you see it? No? Just look at it!" and she held the page out for Bessie's admiration.

But instead of words of praise a giggle came from Bessie. "Why, Leslie Morton! I'd be ashamed to show such a report!"

Leslie snatched back the card. "You mean thing! I'm sure it is the very best——" She stopped. Instead of Arithmetic, excellent; Reading, very good, she read, in her mother's handwriting: Thoughtfulness, deficient; Sisterly kindness, lacking; times tardy at table, but she could read no more for the tears that filled her eyes. How could mama be so cruel? Surely she was not such a bad girl as that! She sobbed aloud, and awoke! Yes, it was only a dream. Mama was calling her. She felt so happy she sprang up singing and called to her mother that she would be down in "no time."

How quickly she dressed! Then she ran to Herbert and helped him, telling him such a funny story as she combed out his curls that he forgot to cry, and both were laughing when they entered the breakfast room. Nor did she forget to do many little things that mama expected of her before school.

As she gathered up her books she could not help peeping into her report to see if it really was a dream. Kissing her mother good-by, she whispered, "I had a dreadful dream last night, mama. I'll tell you some time. But I means to have my home report as good as my school report." And mama understood.—Achsa B. Canfield, in Youths' Companion.

A NEW ENEMY OF RUSSIANS

Cholera and Typhoid Ravage Czar's Troops at Harbin.

DYING BY THE HUNDRED

Majority of Fatalities are Among Recruits Who Arrive in Frightfully Emaciated Condition.

A St. Peterasburg special says: The Japanese are not the only enemies the Russians have to fight. They have cholera and typhoid fever to contend with, as well as the armies of Japan. Advices received from Harbin state that the two diseases named are epidemic there and that hundreds of troops have been stricken.

The new levies are the greatest sufferers. These men reach Harbin after a five-thousand-mile journey in a terribly emaciated condition and fall easy victims to cholera and typhoid.

Hundreds of the troops who are arriving at Harbin from European Russia are suffering from frost-bitten noses, feet and hands. It is no uncommon thing to meet soldiers on the streets of Harbin whose noses have dropped off as a result of frost bite. Of course the cholera and typhoid, which is raging, finds easy marks in soldiers whose strength has been sapped by the trials they had to undergo on the journey to Harbin.

Cholera's Fearful Ravages.

The mortality, according to advices received in St. Peterasburg, is very great, and is said to be increasing daily. Entire regiments are reported unfit for service.

The military authorities express much concern over the reports from Harbin. They fear that unless the cholera is checked it will render the Russian armies unable to meet the Japanese in the field.

The cause of the epidemic is ascribed to the filthy conditions which exist at Harbin. The streets are full of offal and refuse, and the soldiers have to use the water of the Sungari river, which is as foul as any sewer.

Harbin is the Russian base in Manchuria. From Harbin all troops arriving for the front are distributed. Thus it is apparent that an epidemic of cholera at Harbin threatens the entire Russian army in the east.

No Consuls to Manchuria.

A Washington special says: The state department has decided to find temporary employment for the persons recently appointed to consular offices in Manchuria and will make no effort to place them at their designated posts pending the issue of the war between Russia and Japan. Mr. Cheshire, who was nominally United States consul to Mukden, will be attached to the United States legation at Pekin. Mr. Davidson, who was named as consul to Antung, on the Yalu river, will be sent instead to Niuchwang to serve as assistant to Mr. Miller, the consul at that point.

Edwin Morgan, who was to have been consul to Dalny, will be sent to Shanghai as assistant consul.

BONDING COMPANY PAYS SHORTAGE.

Amount Stolen by Treasurer of Georgia Insane Asylum Made Good.

The American Bonding Company, through its attorney in Atlanta, paid Treasurer Park $22,885 Friday, the amount due the state because of the shortage of Cashier C. H. Troutman, of the bank at Milledgeville, Ga. Troutman recently committed suicide because of the shortage. He was treasurer of the state sanitarium and had been speculating with the state's funds.

The bonding company which was on his bond made an investigation of the books and as soon as the exact amount of the discrepancy was discovered tendered the check to the state. The check was accepted, and the state relieved the company from any further liability.

OPPOSITION TO STATEHOOD BILLS.

Tennessee Representative Presents a Minority Report in the House.

Majority and minority views of the statehood bill, recently reported from the house committee on territories, were filed in the house Friday by Representatives Hamilton, of Michigan, and Moon, of Tennessee, respectively.

Mr. Hamilton reviews the provisions of the bill at length and urges the necessity and justice of admitting the four territories as two states. The minority views are signed by Representatives Moon, Loyd, Robinson, of Indiana and Thayer.

BOLT BY THE HEARST DELEGATES.

Adoption of Unit Rule in a County Convention Caused Dissatisfaction.

The Essex county delegates to the democratic convention caucus met in Newark, N. J., Friday night and seventeen Hearst delegates bolted when a motion to adopt the unit rule prevailed. The remaining delegates decided to support Former Senator Jas. Smith for one of the delegates at large.

IN WOMAN'S REALM

LIVES OF CHINESE GIRLS.

One of Them Tells About Her Studies—Poetry and Painting Important.

The life of the little Chinese girl of to-day, although an improvement in some respects upon that led by her sister of an earlier generation, is still mightily amusing from an American or European standpoint.

She is betrothed at thirteen. Her course of study, which is painstaking and thorough, by the way, includes a knowledge of the poetical names of flowers and the rearing of goldfish.

A clever little Chinese lady, Miss Wong Jin Linu, daughter of a diplomat now residing in St. Louis, talked to an interviewer a short time ago, giving some interesting details on this subject, says the Philadelphia North American.

"I was born thirteen years ago in Shanghai, China," she said, "and have been betrothed since I was twelve to Master Sah Fok Kylun, a son of Admiral Sah, of China. I am yet too young to be married. For five years I shall remain in my father's house, the marriage ceremony taking place when I am eighteen, or two years after I become of age. In China a girl is of age at sixteen.

"Master Sah, who is seventeen, resides also with my father. This is sometimes the custom in China among families of the upper class, in cases where two families are on very intimate terms.

"Master Sah and I see very little of one another, although we are in the same house. Judged by the way American young people act, Chinese boys and girls are very shy.

"Water color painting has consumed many of my leisure hours. We begin to paint on paper and then, when we are well advanced, paint on silk. A scene on a hillside or bamboo growing, or a beautiful lake are familiar subjects.

"Girls in the upper class in China are taught to rear flowers. We learn the culture of the hundreds of beautiful flowers which bloom in China, particularly the chrysanthemum, the peony and the lotus lily.

"Often we go out to the ponds and lakes to gather lilies. That is considered a very nice pastime for young ladies.

"Our education is not regarded as complete unless we know the poetical names of all the flowers, as well as how to take care of them. This is not very difficult, because our recreation is almost always taken in the flower garden.

"To rear goldfish is another accomplishment of the Chinese girl.

"The reason why a Chinese girl is betrothed so long before she is married is, as my parents have explained to me, because the Chinese like to have worldly affairs settled as soon as possible. Parents wish to be sure that whatever may happen to them their daughter will be taken care of; therefore every family, even the poorest, is anxious to secure a daughter's betrothal just as soon as the family can afford it. In families of the upper class there is no anxiety as to the settlement of a daughter, but marriages are often arranged to cement friendship between two families."

Nordica Bed Jacket.

If there is one luxury that a woman will appreciate, even one who is supplied with all the essentials of a modern outfit, it is a comfortable little jacket which she can slip on in the morning as she sips her cup of coffee or chocolate. Nothing among the vast assortment of fancy negligees meets with the enthusiastic approval with which this knitted affair is received. First to send it on the highway to popularity was Madame Nordica, who was presented with one of these a few weeks ago when making a tour of the country. It was exactly the thing she had longed for, but had never been able to find, and you may be sure she exhibits the pretty little jacket to all her intimates, who immediately sit down and begin to copy it.

This jacket's greatest charm lies in the fact that there are no frills and furbelows to get in one's way, and it is as warm as anything possibly could be, for it is knitted of heavy wool, and, while far from tight-fitting, it clings to the figure just enough to suit all requirements. It consists of one piece and is worked in a plain stitch; rather, it is knitted so. The sleeves are in the regulation coat style, and there is a border three inches wide of knitted colored wool, pink, blue or violet, all around the bottom and down the front, while at the neck it rolls over to form a collar. Through the neck of this is run a wide soft satin ribbon with long ends to tie, which is the little garment's only method of closing. Women who are fond of reading for a few minutes before settling themselves for the night's slumber will find this jacket a genuine treasure.

Hints For Beauty Seekers.

"Women have good complexions naturally, but let those who have not take heart," says a woman who knows whereof she speaks, "for almost any skin can be made to become firm and elastic, clear and hardy.

"The woman who desires a good skin must learn to breathe, and next to exercise. Let her stand for five minutes before the open window, heels together, head up, chest out, chin in, hips back and hands hanging loosely at the sides. While in this position she must draw a long, deep breath through the nose and exhale slowly through the mouth.

"Half an hour before breakfast it is well to drink about a pint of hot water containing a pinch of salt. Charcoal tablets after each meal are also excellent, but it is absolutely necessary to wash the body every day in tepid water, with plenty of pure soap, finishing with a brisk rubbing with a coarse towel. After this the face should receive special treatment. Few people wash their faces properly. The principal work should be done at night, and unless the skin is very thin, a rather coarse washcloth should be used, with plenty of warm water. While the pores are open massage the skin with a little lanolin, applying with the finger tips, and knead the cheeks with the knuckles and palms of the hands.

"Any one desirous of avoiding undue lines and wrinkles on throat and face should use this treatment patiently for one month. The improvement in the complexion will by that time speak for itself."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

How to Educate the Boy.

Not a few fathers h[illegible] their sons and damage the career[illegible] those sons by picking out careers [illegible] the boy in the w[illegible] a fine go, and then let him choo[illegible] Alaska, ey work. These interpretations mean that I would not educate my boy under a private tutor. I would educate my boy with boys, although not entirely by boys. Boys do, however, educate boys, but a boy who is trained alone is liable to fail in adjusting himself to his membership in humanity. He is to become a brother of the common lot. He therefore should learn early how to adjust himself to his fellows. Neither would I educate my son abroad; he is an American boy. I should be glad to have him get all that is best from the private school in Lausanne or Geneva, but not for one instant would I have his ideas formed by the French master or his methods by the German. A primary note in his character should be the American, although a note more fundamental is the human. He is, as a human boy, to be trained up for service in this great, interesting new life of our new world.—Harper's Weekly.

Old English embroidery is to have an all summer run.

Hyacinthine blue looks well on both blondes and brunettes.

Stylish toques are made of the glistening black horsehair.

A suit of white serge, flannel or corduroy, is an essential part of the spring outfit, it seems.

The most gorgeous plume of all is all red one side the quill and all creamy yellow the other.

Coats to the linen and pique costumes vary from the three-quarter Norfolk to the very short Eton.

A deep cream lace waist to wear with a brown silk coat and skirt is bloused under a bertha-like arrangement made of three circular folds of brown silk.

Of the materials for rather dressier waists, suitable for house wear, and to go with jacket suits, it is recommended that they match in color, or at least approach in tone, the skirts with which they are worn.

A charming dinner waist for an "at home" dinner is of pale blue silk muslin, accordion pleated. The sleeves are elbow length and are untrimmed. There is a stock collar of the muslin laid in folds and striped around the top and bottom with the narrowest of Irish lace bands.

Returns of the receipts from shipping on the Suez Canal in January show an increase on the year from $1,063,575 to $1,836,000.

AGRICULTURAL

Coop For Hen and Chickens.

A very cheap and simple roosting coop for hen and chickens is shown by this sketch. Take a plank one by twelve, six feet long, saw in three pieces, two feet long, then saw one of them triangular; one of these and one of the others make one end, the front and back can be made out of old goods box—see sketch. Cover with shingles. It is made with a detachable bottom, held in place by four hooks and staples, one at each corner so it can be taken off and scrubbed and cleaned out. I put the dimensions on the sketch. For ventilation bore six augur holes in each side.—A. W. Toberman, Hefner, O. T.

Shade For Strawberries.

V. A. Clark and O. M. Taylor, of the New York Experiment Station, Geneva, report results obtained in shading strawberries. With a thin cheesecloth yields were materially increased and sometimes even doubled, and with some varieties the yield was little affected or was even decreased. Using cheesecloth one commercial grade heavier, there was a heavy loss on every one of sixteen varieties tested. While the thinner cheesecloth, ripening was in some cases hastened by a day or two, but with the thicker one it was retarded about four days. The effect of shading on the berry itself was to increase it in weight about one-sixth.

The good effects of shading the strawberry are produced by conservation of soil moisture as a result of lessened evaporation and transpiration, and by a slight increase in temperature of air and of soil. The greatest benefit is derived from the protection of the plants from wind. The injurious effects result from diminishing the intensity of the light. The practice does not appear to be of value commercially; irrigation is far more effective, and, where practicable, probably would be cheaper.

Feeding Morning Mash.

Sometimes experience upsets one's plans, which were thought about right, wonderfully and completely. For years the writer has advocated the moderate feeding of laying hens during the winter; feeding them enough, of course, but feeding scanty rather than running the risk of overfeeding and thus shutting off the egg supply. A veteran poultryman who called at my farm a year ago, said that I did not feed sufficiently heavy of the morning mash, so this winter we started out to see if he was right, and found, to our astonishment, that he was.

We now give the laying hens enough of the warm mash in the morning so that they eat all they want before it gets cold. The remainder is then gathered up and an hour later heated and put in the troughs again, when the hens eat as ravenously of it as if they had had none an hour earlier. Result, more eggs than in the previous winters from the same number of hens and pullets. In trying to figure out the cause of this change it was concluded that the hens were unable to take much of the sticky mass in their crops at first, but after a drink of water and an hour of rest they were in condition to take care of the balance, really only getting in the two feeds the quantity necessary for one feed, and the equivalent of one good feed of grain. Try it the rest of the winter and see how it works with your poultry.—Indianapolis News.

Care of Cows.

In the feeding of dairy cows, two seasons are recognized by the average dairyman. These are the winter feeding season and the summer season. In the former case the animals are entirely dependent upon what grain and fodder are allotted to them, there being no opportunity for grazing afforded. The very opposite of this is true during the summer season, the animals being expected to hunt their own living, says Farmers' Tribune. The transition from one season to another frequently causes a falling off in the milk supply. This is particularly true in the fall, when the animals are left to shift for themselves after the nights become cold. The fact is lost sight of that a dairy animal is of a rather delicate constitution, and on this account cannot withstand the hardships which the beef animal can bear.

It is a good plan to give cows shelter at night after the first of October. If they are put in the stable or in sheds and fed a small grain ration night and morning, together with a little fodder, they will liberally respond to such treatment at milking time. While the days remain warm they are as well off in the pasture, as there is no food better adapted for milk production than is grass. Grass is also economical, and for this reason one should endeavor to extend the grazing season just as long as possible. If pastures are getting bare, it will generally pay to haul a little fodder to the field. Never turn cows on frosted grass after having kept them in the stable during the night.

Improving the Orchard.

Orchard soils usually require large quantities of potash fertilizers. This applies especially to the peach, plum, grape and small fruit tracts. The most convenient form of potash fertilizer is kainit, which may be used on ordinary soil at the rate of 300 pounds per acre, allowing a space of a couple of years or more between applications. Where the orchards or vineyards are small, wood ashes may be used instead. The cowpea or soy bean is the best nitrogenous fertilizer where such is needed, but unless the trees show a tendency to make very little growth during the summer months, fertilizer of this kind should be used sparingly. The liberal application of nitrogenous manures causes a heavy growth of leaf and branch. This may prove a detriment instead of an advantage, since insect pests get in their most damaging work on the young and tender growth. Various diseases also often attack young trees that have been forced too rapidly, causing injury and sometimes death to the promising specimen. Barnyard manure will prove beneficial to worn out orchards, which, however, should be well pruned and cultivated to encourage them to take a new hold on life. Manure may be applied early in the spring, using about twenty loads to the acre and discing in, or it may be turned under with a stirring plow, and later the soil may be leveled with the harrow and planted to some small crop requiring cultivation. For this, potatoes, beans, peas or even cabbage may be utilized. The main object is to conserve the moisture and to hasten decomposition of organic matter in the soil.—C. B. Barrett, in The Epitomist.

Farm Conveniences.

The first two figures show conveniences originally sketched in the Farm Journal, which says of them:

This crate should be about three feet high and fitted with sidepieces extending below it that will just fit into the side irons of the wagon body. It can thus be set upon the wagon bed in an instant and will be found most useful in moving calves, sheep, pigs or other stock. It will fit on to a sled in the same way for winter use. It is also convenient when hauling loose material. If this is long the rear gate can be hinged to open at the side. The

When there is plowing to be done close to fences or trees have your smith put extension rods on the plow and a clevis to hitch the team to, like the cut. The sketch was sent us by one of our readers in Kansas, and he says it works well for him. If the beam of the plow is adjustable to draft it should, of course, be adjusted before the rods are bolted to the handles.

The lower figure shows two views of portable sheep fencing used at the Colorado experiment station. It is easy to move about and set up and very readily made.—Connecticut Farmer.

Poultry Notes.

Frosted combs will check egg production. Coat them with vaseline.

For heavy breathing or rattling in the throat we have found nothing better than a teaspoonful of glycerine, to which is added four drops of turpentine.

If you mean to purchase eggs for setting, start early. Eggs are not apt to hatch so well, nor are the chicks so strong, if obtained from hens that have been laying for many weeks.

To feed a duckling ten weeks will cost about five cents per pound. Labor, marketing, etc., will add as much more to the cost. The bird should weigh five pounds and sell for more than fifty cents to bring any profit.

It is not a bad idea for a poultryman to have padlocks on the egg crates. It serves to show an exclusiveness to customers who regularly expect first-class articles, and then it's a proof that they have not been tampered with.

The color of the newly hatched chick does not always indicate what the mature plumage will be. Those who have bought eggs of pure bred stock should, therefore, not be hasty in passing judgment on the merits of the stock.

The cheapest way to rid a poultry house of all kinds of lice is to thoroughly scald with boiling water, with sufficient salt added to make a brine. Apply the remedy once a week for three weeks, using a pail and tin cup in applying it.

Rough, scaly shanks spoil the appearance of any fowl. The parasite that burrows under the natural scale and destroys it may be killed by coal oil. The oil should not be permitted to saturate the feathers of the thighs, or it may blister the skin and cause the feathers to come out. It is always best to mix the kerosene with sweet oil or a little lard.

When you see a fowl staggering around with its head thrown back on its shoulders, that means vertigo. Catch it, pour water slowly from a height of three feet on the back of its head for five minutes. Repeat the process in a little while, and put it up without a bite for two days. You have been feeding too high, and it needs starvation for a day or two.

CITY TO OWN RAILWAYS

Chicago Takes First Step to Get All Public Utilities.

Votes by Three to One For Municipal Ownership of Its Transportation Facilities.

Chicago, Ill.—Chicago voters went on record in favor of ultimate municipal ownership of the street railways. The referendum question on this subject was carried at the city election by a large majority, and the vote was three to one in the affirmative.

What is known as the Mueller law, passed by the State Legislature, was submitted to the voters. The enactment authorizes cities in Illinois to construct, own, operate and lease street railways and to provide the means therefor.

The voters also balloted on the questions, "Shall the Council upon the adoption of the Mueller law proceed to acquire ownership of the street railways under the powers conferred by the Mueller law?" and "Shall the Council instead of granting franchises license the street railway companies until municipal ownership can be secured and compel them to give a satisfactory service?"

In addition to choosing the Aldermen and voting on municipal ownership of street railways, the voters balloted to decide whether the members of the City Board of Education, now appointed by the Mayor, are to be elected by the people. This too was carried.

The municipal ownership proposition was generally indorsed by the press on the expectation that its carrying would strengthen the city in its negotiations with the existing companies and would commit the city to the policy of "ultimate ownership."

Everybody in Chicago has been inveighing bitterly against the means of transportation with which the city has had to put up, and when the matter of adopting the Mueller law came up, giving the city the right to proceed to ultimate ownership practically all the city's organizations favored the proposition because they believed it would put Chicago in a position to get favorable concessions out of the companies, which have been hanging out for several years for the so-called Ninety-nine-Year act and other advantages which the city is averse to giving.

As for the vote on the proposition which commits the city to the policy of going after municipal ownership of the street car lines at once, it is generally agreed that Mayor Harrison is right in saying this radical proposition was carried because the majority of the voters did not know what it meant. It was the uneducated vote that put through this proposition, as an analysis of the returns shows. The vote is so heavy in favor of the question, however, that it indicates a serious conviction on the part of the city as a whole that the idea of municipal ownership is a good thing as soon as it can be brought about.

The radical proposition referred to is that the City Council shall proceed at once to acquire ownership of the street railways, now that the Mueller law has been adopted.

The adoption of this proposition means little, because it is absolutely impossible for the city to put it into execution until its debt incurring privileges are enlarged by the Legislature.

POSSE KILLED TWO BROTHERS.

Dead Men Resisted Arrest Engineered to Stop Texas Feud.

Dallas, Texas.—James and Walter Herring, sons of B. H. Herring, and connected with the most prominent families of Henderson County, were killed at their home, near Athens, while resisting arrest. Their father committed suicide in the Athens jail in 1897, and sensational feudist conditions have existed since.

The Kennedys were particularly disliked by the Herrings, and one of the Kennedy women was talked to abusively by the Herring brothers. Neighbors sent notice to the officers at Athens to come to the locality of the trouble before the Kennedy men should start out for vengeance.

City Marshal Wofford and a posse hurried to the Herring homestead. James Herring surrendered his pistol at the doorway and then knocked the Marshal insensible with a blow on the temple. Springing inside the house he seized a rifle and a fight began. Sixteen shots were fired.

Walter Herring was killed instantly and James Herring lived only two hours. He had $900 in his pocket, which he presented to his six-year-old daughter a few minutes before he died.

The enemy had 541 killed. The Dutch loss was three killed and twenty-five wounded.

Milwaukee Re-elects Mayor Rose.

Mayor David S. Rose, of Milwaukee, Wis., (Dem.), seems to be re-elected beyond a doubt. One hundred precincts out of 117 give Rose (Dem.), for Mayor, 20,038; Goff (Rep.), 14,891; Berger (Soc.-Dem.), 12,287. Returns from the State indicate that Louis K. Lase is elected Justice of the Supreme Court.

FROM the figures to hand from the primary it appears that S. M. Adams has received the nomination for Judge of Probate, receiving 231 votes to 206 for A. C. Smith, and 199 for E. B. Deason. W. T. Callen is nominated for Treasurer, J. C. Veazey for Tax Collector, B. W. Garner, Tax Assessor, W. H. Foshee, Clerk of the Circuit Court, R. A. Rasco, Superintendent of Education, W. J. Ruddick, Commissioner from the Third District, and W. C. Dickinson, Commissioner from the Fourth District. The County Executive Committee meets this (Thursday) afternoon and will make the official count.

On the State ticket, McClellan is nominated for Chief Justice of the Supreme Court; Dowdell, Haralson, Tyson, Denson, Anderson and A. D. Sayre, Associate Justices; Alston, Supernumerary Judge; Comer for President of the Railroad Commission; Bowie for Congress from this district; T. Scott Sayre for Judge of this circuit; J. M. Holley, Circuit Solicitor, and Harry J. Gillam, Chancellor of this division.

THE primary of last Monday marks an epoch in the history of Chilton county, and a new era is commenced. For several years past the people of the county have been divided politically, but the causes which divided them having been removed, they are now coming together again, as is evidenced by this primary. This is a source of congratulation to all the good people of Chilton, and is the precursor of better times, socially and politically, in the county.

The best informed and thinking men of Chilton know that a united people is the best safeguard of all liberty, and that fractious opposition to the powers that be not only retards progress, but is also an obstacle in the exercise of the rights and privileges we possess. This is plainly shown by the attitude of the small opposition to the Democratic party that now exists in this county. What does opposition to the Democratic party mean? The late primary nominated all the State officers, and even the most rabid oppositionist in Chilton will not deny but that each and every one of them will be duly elected in November.

What does the opposition offer, or rather what do they plead for? Elect us to county office, and forego all your rights and privileges in connection with your other and greater interests. Will the opposition dare to say they can produce better men to fill the county offices than those who were nominated in last Monday's primary? They will not attempt to oppose the nominees for the State offices—that, they know, is utter folly. Then why should they wish to oppose such good men as were nominated for the county offices in last Monday's primary? Simply because there is a few among them who desire office, and can only see their way to what they desire by appealing to the prejudices of some of our fellow-citizens. The primary of last Monday proves conclusively that the election in November will forever leave them, and that the best citizens of Chilton will rally to the support of the nominees ot last Monday. Now let us all unite and one and all march to a triumphant victory in November.

CIRCUIT COURT.

At 2:30 o'clock last Thursday afternoon the Grand Jury concluded their labors and presented the following report:

REPORT OF GRAND JURY.

Hon. Terry Richardson, Judge of the Fifteenth Judicial Circuit:

We, the Grand Jury empannelled for the Spring Term, 1904, of the Circuit Court of Chilton county, beg leave to submit this our final report.

The public roads have been reported to us as being in fairly good condition, yet we feel that quite an improvement could be made upon all the roads of our county and suggest that more attention be given to the betterment of the roads of our county.

We have examined the bonds of our county officers and find them good and sufficient.

We have examined the books of our different officers and so far as we are able to determine, in the limited time allowed for that purpose, find them neatly and correctly kept.

The committee who visited the county poor house report the inmates well cared for, properly clothed and fed.

We visited the Jail and found it neatly and cleanly kept; as well ventilated as is possible for that building to be; well heated and safe and secure, and commend Sheriff Morgan and his deputy, Ed Smitherman, for the great precaution they exercise to prevent the escape of prisinors.

We have examined all the county buildings and find them in fairly good condition and repair.

We have examined all cases reported to us, being 36 in all, and as the result of our labors have returned into Court 25 True Bills.

The county Treasurer's report is hereto attached and marked "Exhibit A", and made a part of this report.

Thanking your Honor for the plain, impartial and able charge given us in the beginning of our labors, in which you so clearly defined our duties as Grand Jurors; also our faithful Solicitor for his able and attentive assistance given us in our work; our efficient Bailiff, B. L. Jones, for his careful attention to our wants, and all the officers with whom our duties have brought us in contact, we most respectfully ask to be discharged.

Respectfully submitted,
JOHN A. STROCK, Foreman.

The Judge dismissed the jury and court adjourned until Tuesday morning.

Tuesday morning Judge Richardson opened court and the following Petit Juries were empannelled:

PETIT JURY.

Jury No. 1—I. W. Vinson, W. C. Hubbard, W. D. Nix, H. M. Furguson, James Cobb, Joseph Varden, A. D. Robinson, Will Ratchell, T. J. Littlejohn, Elijah Mims, Gaines Silas, James Thomas.

Jury No. 3—E. C. Lawrence, John S. Dennis, S. N. Waldrup, I. Bice, J. F. Klinner, J. D. Collins, J. E. Ellis.

In the unavoidable absense of Solicitor F. L. Tate, County Solicitor I. Osmond Middleton acted in his stead, and performed his duties in a very creditable manner.

The following cases were disposed of:

I. B. Edwards, carrying concealed weapons, nolle prossed and in a second charge, defendant pleaded guilty to a fine of $50.

Sam Avery, disturbing religious worship, fined $20 and 5 days additional imprisonment in county jail.

Prim Davis, col., selling liquor, pleaded guilty and fined $50, and a second charge was nolle prossed.

William Arledge, assault with weapon, nolle prossed.

John R. Roach, violating revenue law, defendant pleaded misnomer, and was bound over to await the action of the next grand jury; bond fixed at $250.

Parthena Watts, abusive language, guilty, fined $12.

Russell Brown, col., carrying concealed weapons, continued by defendant.

Wm. Broanhead, grand larceny continued.

John Penton, public drunkenness, fined $10.

Wednesday afternoon Judge Richardson vacated the bench and called upon Col. W. A. Collier to preside. The case before him was that of the State vs. Wm. Broadhead, charged with grand larceny. It was stubbornly fought and many rulings had to be made by the presiding judge, but the lawyers present declared that Judge Collier's rulings were sound and strictly in accordance with law.

Court will probably adjourn Friday, Judge Richardson has called a special term of court to meet May 30. Civil cases will be taken up first three days, and criminal cases remainder of the week.

The Weekly Crop Bulletin says the week, as a whole, was rather cool, retarding germination and growth, with moderately damaging frosts in north and north central counties on the 5th; moderate to heavy rains during the middle of the week retarded plowing and seeding, but benefited recently planted corn, cotton and gardens, and put ground in good condition for continuing the planting of the staple crops. Planting of upland corn is practically completed, except in northern counties, where it is well under way; much of this grain is up to good stands, with some of the early planted receiving a first plowing, though, owing to cool nights, it is making slow growth, and worms are causing some damage in southern counties. Cotton planting is finished in some southern counties, well advanced in the middle district, and will soon be general over the northern half of the State; early planted cotton continues to make fair stands, but needs warm weather for good growth. Wheat and oats continue promising. Sugar cane is coming up in southern and middle counties; late reports indicate that the damage to fruit and early vegetables by the frost and light freeze of the 4th instant extended southward over the western part of the State to Hale county. Over the remainder of the State, the fruit prospect continues good with all trucking crops making good progress. Irish potatoes are being damaged by bugs in a few localities; shipments of early vegetables and strawberries are increasing steadily, the latter making a good yield, both, as to quantity and quality. Pasturage continues good.

Consumption

People are learning that consumption is a curable disease. It is neglected consumption that is so often incurable.

The use of Scott's Emulsion at once, has, in thousands of cases, turned the balance in favor of health.

Neglected consumption does not exist where Scott's Emulsion is.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, April 11, 1904.

An item of interest to the farmers and poultry raisers of the country, in connection with the World's Fair at St. Louis, is learned from the Eastern Press Bureau, in this city. The regular cash prizes offered for exhibits of poultry, pigeons and pet stock aggregate more than $16,000. This will be greatly increased by appropriations from state commissions for state exhibits. The Missouri Commission has set apart $7,000 for special prizes and expenses connected with that state's poultry exhibits. The special poultry clubs of this and other countries are making a very successful canvass for funds for special prizes for exhibits. One club promises to provide a prize fund of at least $300 for its favorite variety. Mr. Tom H. Orr, secretary and treasurer of the American Poultry Association, has been made the superintendent of the poultry show and the matter of receiving, cooping, feeding, exhibiting and returning the poultry, pigeons and pet stock at the World's Fair has been placed in the hands of a committee recommended by the Association, consisting of Henry Steinmesch, of St. Louis; T. F. McGrew of New York and U. R. Fishel, of Hope, Ind. One is a successful and experienced superintendent of a large poultry show; one a former secretary of the American Poultry Association and popular poultry author; and the third, one of the largest and most successful breeders and exhibitors of poultry.

An opinion from one of the greatest trust lawyers in the city of New York is worth something, inasmuch as some of the trusts pay him a liberal fortune to render them. His name is Untermeyer, and he says that there never will be any effective anti-trust work done in this country until the criminal clause of the Sherman anti-trust law is put in force and some of the criminals are sent to the penitentiary and made to wear stripes. And there is the whole gist of the matter in a nutshell.

What [illegible] the name of common sense do [illegible] trusts of the country care for [illegible] of $5,000 a day so long as t[illegible]an put up prices and compel th[illegible]ple of the country to pay the [illegible] less than two days. It is the [illegible]st idiocy to try to curb or [illegible]ists in any such manner. The Republican party knows it and that is why the criminal clause of the Sherman anti-trust law never has been enforced. Let the voter figure on this when he gets ready to vote this fall.

In connection with this same sort of work on the part of the Republican party, the passage of the Elkins anti-rebate law last year caused the Republicans to crow lustily. They called it an anti-trust law which was to curb railroads by compelling them to treat all shippers alike. It also knocked out the crimminal clause of the anti-trust law which applied to them, thus obviating all fear from the operations of the law on the part of the railroads. Ever since the passage of the law the railroads have been violating it by the payment to shippers all over the country of switching charges amounting, in some cases, to not less than $15 a day. They have in this way favored the shipper they wanted to and have violated the law with no fear of the consequences. Another favorite method of violating this law on the part of the railroads has been that a big shipper located favorably for shipping over two or more railroads, ships over the road that will allow the greatest claim for lost goods. No goods are actually lost in transportation, but the agent is authorized to deduct so much for such losses. In this way rebates amounting to 20, 30, and even 50 per cent of the freight bill are allowed. Thus the small shipper is discriminated against and cannot afford to stay in business in the same town with the man who gets these favors from the railroad that thus brazenly violates the so called Elkins anti rebate bill. Even if they are caught with the "goods on them" they have only to pay a small fine and there you are.

In the name of all that stands for common sense when will the people of this country get their eyes open and place a party in power that will wipe out such iniquities?

FROM WASHINGTON

The Acts and Words of Our Law Makers.

APRIL 8TH.

The contracts for canceling machines used by the postoffice department was debated at length in the senate in connection with the postoffice appropriation bill. Mr. Culberson introduced an amendment reducing the rental of the machines and the democratic senators charged that the rental now paid was the same that was paid under the contracts made by George W. Beavers when he was chief of the salary and allowance division of the postoffice department and that they were excessive. Mr. Lodge denied the charge, saying that there was no proof in its truth.

The postoffice bill was still under consideration when the senate adjourned.

The house passed a large number of bills, including the Philippine shipping bill and the bill appropriating $475,000 in the aid of the Lewis and Clark centennial exposition to be held in Portland, Oregon, in 1905. The only amendment made to the Philippine shipping bill was one extending until July 1, 1906, the time when the law shall become operative.

The bill provides that no merchandise or passengers except supplies for the army or navy shall be transported by sea under penalty of forfeiture between ports of the United States and the Philippine archipelago, directly or via a foreign port, or for any part of the voyage in any except vessels of the United States. It does not prohibit, however, the sailing of any foreign vessel between the United States and the Philippines nor between ports or places in the Philippines.

Mr. Bowers, Mississippi, answered some statements recently made by Mr. Gillette, Massachusetts, regarding violations of the constitution of some of the southern states with respect to negro suffrage. He read from various decisions of Mississippi courts holding that the state did not discriminate against the races and that it had been fair and impartial in the enforcement of the suffrage clause of the constitution.

APRIL 9TH.

In the senate Mr. Spooner replied to the democratic strictures on the conduct of the postoffice department, and also traversed quite an extensive political field. He defended the course of the postmaster general in connection with the irregularities of his department and charged the effort on the part of the democratic senators to secure a congressional inquiry in the interest of party politics.

No progress was made on the postoffice bill. The conference report on the Indian bill was partially read, but further consideration was postponed on the suggestion that the conferees had inserted provisions that had not been passed on by either house.

On motion of Mr. Mitchell the senate concurred in the house amendment to the Portland exposition bill which had the effect of passing the measure. It appropriates $475,000 for the exposition. Other bills were passed as follows:

Authorizing the commissioner of general land office to transmit original papers to be used as evidence.

Providing for free admission to the Lincoln museum in Washington.

The recent executive order of the president relating to age as evidence of pensionable disability furnished the text for an appeal by W. Bourke Cochran to the house to uphold the honor of that body in refusing to submit to what he alleged to be the usurpation of the legislative authority of congress by the executive. In anticipation of Mr. Cochran's speech almost every seat on the floor was occupied and the galleries were filled.

The monthly report of the department of agriculture will show the average condition of winter wheat on April 1st to have been 76.5 against 97.3 on April 1, 1903, and 84.1 the mean of the April averages of the last ten years.

The census bureau in a preliminary report on irrigation in New Mexico in 1902 shows 254,945 acres irrigated from all sources. The number of farms represented was 9,285 and the average cost per irrigated acre $16.87 The entire length of main canals and ditches was 2,846 miles, an average length per system of over two miles. The progress made in the irrigation work of the government is reviewed in a publication issued by the geological survey, which points out the necessity of caution and conservatism in the extension of reclamation work

A Hungarian count has written a book in which he calls Admiral Dewey a "mass murderer."

Last winter Minister and Madame Takahira, of Japan, presented Mrs. Roosevelt with a collection of Japanese dolls, dressed to represent court ladies and various types of high life in the Land of the Rising Sun. Arranged in a cabinet they form an attractive decoration, their gorgeous robes of bright colored brocade and gold embroidery blending with the brilliant furnishings of the red room of the white house.

APRIL 11TH.

The Culberson amendment to the postoffice appropriation bill providing a commission to investigate the postoffice department was before the senate and after being ruled out of order was pending in modified form when the senate adjourned.

Mr. Gorman made an earnest plea for an investigation, saying the postoffice department had cast reflection upon members of congress and that a thorough examination should be made.

The house passed the bill reported by committee on rivers and harbors appropriating $3,000,000 for the restoration or maintenance of channels, or for other river and harbor improvements.

Mr. Burton, chairman of the committee, in explaining the bill urged the adoption of settled principles with regard to river and harbor work. Messrs. Burgess, of Texas, and Randell, of Louisiana, favored increases in the appropriations for river and harbor improvements, the former urging that they should be doubled and the latter regarding $100,000,000 as not too much. Mr. Clark, of Missouri, made a plea for the improvement of the Missouri river. Quite a large number of bills of minor importance were passed.

THEIR VICTIM

Was the First Man Seen After Weapons Were Secured.

At Ludlow, Scott county, Miss., Saturday night Professor Pate, the Ludlow high school principal, was having a public entertainment. Two young men in the audience raised a disturbance so that Professor Pate asked five citizens to conduct them out of the building. The men became enraged, obtained shotguns and returned. Captain C. E. Young, who had nothing to do with putting the men out, was shot by them as he left the building. He was instantly killed. The murderers have not been caught.

No More Books Go Second Class.

Books can not go through the mails as second class matter, as the supreme court of the United States ruled Monday. The decision was in what is called the second class mail matter case, brought by publishers. The court below was sustained and the victory is with the postmaster general, who has contended for the exclusion of these books. For sixteen years these publications have had the second class privilege.

The two new battleships ordered in England by Japan will be exceedingly powerful, their length, 445 feet, exceeding that of the most powerful battleships by 20 feet. Their main batteries, it is said, will be the most powerful yet devised. The armored belt at the water line will be 9 inches thick with 6-inch armor continuing to the level of the deck. A new feature will be a superstructure of 4-inch armor, insuring that no part of the upper works will be unprotected. Formal orders for these battleships were placed on January 30th. They are to have a speed of 19 knots and will be able to discharge eleven tons of projectiles per minute from their main batteries.

The police of Berlin and other European capitals are being warned by Scotland to maintain the strictest vigilance for persons going to points at which Kaiser Wilhelm touches en tour. It is evident that a body of conspirators with a serious plot on foot are meeting in London.

In 1880 the south had but 20,500 miles of railway. In 1900 there were over fifty-four thousand miles, representing a new influx of capital to the amount of $1,500,000,000.

April 19th, Patriots' day, is a legal holiday in Massachusetts, as is April 21st, anniversary of the battle of San Jacinto, in Texas.

Tennessee farmers want the state to appropriate $5,000 to develop the live stock investigations now in progress and to extend experiments in breeding and feeding.

There are 644,000 farmers in Texas, the largest number of all the states of the union. Georgia comes next with 522,000.

Southwestern men claim to have obtained good results from feeding the common desert cactus to cattle. They say the dangerous points become soft when chopped up and boiled or soaked in water. The department of agriculture is investigating the matter.

Waterbury, Conn., will send a beautifully carved marble watch to the world's fair. Both the watch and chain were cut from a solid piece of stone.

Two years ago Monday General Wade Hampton died, followed the next day by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage.

Senator Depew has been decided upon as temporary chairman of the national republican convention.

Samuel Hoar, a distinguished Massachusetts lawyer and nephew of Senator Hoar, died Monday.

At St. Louis saturday the Japanese bazaar building on the fair grounds was blown down.

It is reported that Russia will have fully a half million soldiers in the field.

Hon. John D. Long has been made leader of the State Temperance Society of Massachusetts.

COMER NOMINATED

And All Congressmen Will Succeed Themselves

On account of the length of the ballots the count will be necessarily slow, but enough returns have been received to indicate that B. B. Comer has swept the state for president of the railroad commission and will be nominated by an overwhelming majority.

From the returns at hand John V. Smith has carried only five counties—Colbert, Limestone, Chambers, Baldwin and Lawrence.

Indications point to the nomination of J. R. Dowdell, Jonathan Harralson, John R. Tyson, N. D. Denson, John C. Anderson and A. D. Sayre for associate justices of the supreme court. Chief Justice Thomas N. McClellan had no opposition.

Returns from the congressional districts indicate that all of the present congressmen from Alabama will be returned to the house of representatives.

In the fifth district indications point to the nomination of J. Thomas Heflin, secretary of state.

DISPUTE OVER FIFTY CENTS

Ends in Pistol Duel—One Killed; the Other Seriously Wounded.

In Birmingham, E. P. McDonald was shot and almost instantly killed Monday night by Alexander S. Lawson, an engineer on the Louisville and Nashville railroad, who in turn was shot through the thigh and badly wounded by McDonald.

The tragedy was the result of a quarrel about 50 cents which Lawson claimed was due him by the Stag saloon. He made the statement that he had been "short changed" by the bartender, and McDonald took it up, saying with emphasis that it was not true. McDonald threatened to shoot Lawson. Lawson stated that he was not armed, but that he would be back in a few minutes and kill McDonald.

McDonald said that he would not shoot him if he was not armed, but that he would wait until he came back. Lawson came back half an hour afterwards and the shooting took place.

Talladega Boy Kills His Father.

A special from Talladega says. Will Castleberry shot and instantly killed his father, J. C. Castleberry, Saturday morning. He borrowed a pistol and made the statement that he intended killing his father. Young Castleberry subsequently gave himself up is now in jail. No cause has been assigned for the shooting.

The land area of the south is 585,312,000 acres. In 1900 the total farm acreage was 387,690,426 acres, or about two-thirds of the total land area. The total improved acreage was only 145,185,599 acres, or about 40 per cent of the total farm acreage. This leaves 242,000,000 acres of farm lands to be put into cultivation. The unimproved farm lands of the south give a greater area for settlement and cultivation than the total area of Texas. Over 110,000,000 acres of this unimproved farm land lies east of the Mississippi river. The total value of farm lands and improvements in the south in 1900 was $3,182,573,472, and of all farm property $5,158,161,991.

Tuesday, August 2d, has been fixed as Alabama Day at the St. Louis exposition. It was decided upon after considerable correspondence between the club and State Historian Thomas M. Owen, who suggested that this date would be most appropriate, as it would celebrate Alabama's adoption of a constitution.

In presidential years congress has adjourned as early as June 7 (1900) and as late as October 20 (1888).

Justice of the Peace Ormond, Attorney W. H. Withers and Deputy Sheriff T. J. Jones were indicted by the federal grand jury at Atlanta. The charge against them is that of being in collusion and with conspiracy in order to interfere with and defeat the extradition of Charles Blazer—L. C. Harding.

Arnold L. Kay, an employe of the Southern railway, was the victim of an accident at the railroad tracks near the Sloss furnaces. In coupling two box cars he was caught in the coupler his right leg was crushed and he received internal injuries.

Manuel Guavesi, who has been for five years at the head of the Yaqui Indians in Mexico, and who in that time instigated many uprisings, first in one section and then in another, has been captured and executed.

April 28th has been discussed in committee rooms and among senators and representatives as not an improbable date for the termination of the present session of congress.

Blow-Out Caused the Disaster.

The Pennsylvania State mine inspectors attending the inquest of the Harwich mine disaster came to the conclusion that the explosion which cost 178 lives was caused by a blast being blown out which set fire to the gas in the mine.

Major Seely Re-elected.

Major Seely (Independent) was re-elected without opposition to represent the Isle of Wight Division of Hampshire in the House of Commons.

From the Russo-Japan War

Russia is said to be purchasing war vessels from Argentina.

It is reported that cholera has attacked the Russian army at Harbin.

Russia has purchased some armored automobiles and they will be started to the far east at once.

Three of the Japanese fire ships sunk in attempt to block the harbor of Port Arthur have been raised by the Russians and towed into the harbor, where they are being armed with rapid fire guns.

Reports are said to have come from Berlin to the effect that China is on the verge of throwing in her lot with Japan. The first defeat on land for Russia will, it is asserted, be the signal for a forward movement on the part of the celestial empire.

The czar is in a highly nervous state and it is reported in high society circles that his ministers can not get him to decide on anything. He frequently refuses for days to speak. Those who know him say that the evidence of incompetency and treachery furnished by the lessons of the war, have completely unnerved Nicholas.

The war minister has granted the petition of Mme. Porzepa, who desired to be enrolled in a Cossack regiment. The ministry has ordered her enrolled in the first regiment of riflemen. Mme. Pouzepa is 33 years of age, was reared under the patronage of the late Emperor Alexander III, a fine horsewoman, a good shot, and handles the rifle, revolver and sword equally well. She is also a qualified Red Cross nurse, but she says there are enough women nurses and wants to show that a woman can fight.

Mississippi River.

A special from Rolling Fork, Miss. says:

"A report reaches here to the effect that a portion of the levee at Paleshed, Issaquena county, had caved in, seriously imparing the strength of the embankment and causing grave fears of a crevasse. Large forces of men are engaged in building what is technically known as a "round around" at the cave-in, and this precaution, it is thought, will prevent an inundation should the levee break."

The Mississippi river at Memphis has come to a stand with a stage of thirty-nine feet. This is a rise of 3 of a foot since Saturday night. It is predicted by the United States weather bureau officials that the water will begin to recede. Thus far all levees in the Memphis territory have withstood the overflow, and it is thought that with the beginning of the water to recede all danger will be over.

Killebrew's Opinion.

Former Land Commissioner J. R. Killebrew, of Tennessee, made the principal address before the good roads convention at New Orleans on Thursday. He pointed out the advantages to commerce of improved highways and discussed the question of national aid in the present movement.

"Government aid in the building of our highways will be of more benefit to the country than the building of the Panama canal," he said. "It will be of more benefit than the improvement of our navigable streams and will be more helpful to the great body of our producers than any other thing that can be done."

Winona, Miss., Scorched.

A special from Winona, Miss., says: A large portion of the business section of the city was destroyed by fire Saturday. The fire, the cause of which is unknown, broke out in the Times printing office. It spread rapidly and destroyed the stores of R. C. Gaither, furniture; Young & Maury, dry goods; A. Craemer & Son., grocers, and W. A. Bray, groceries; also a large number of lawyers' offices. The damage is estimated at $100,000.

An official dispatch from Barcelona says that as King Alfonso was leaving the building in which a labor exhibition was being held the explosion of a petard was heard. At first some excitement was caused, as it was believed an attempt had been made on the king's life. An arrest was made.

Former Queen Isabella, of Spain, is dead.

A heavy storm, almost a tornado, struck Natchez, Miss., Thursday. Part of the city hall was unroofed; the cupola of the institute school, a new $35,000 structure, was blown out of plumb and may fall at any moment. St. Mary's cathedral was damaged and hundreds of window panes blown in. Telephone, telegraph and electric light wires are badly disarranged. Horsemen coming from the country districts after the storm had passed report that growing crops have been destroyed.

Sunday was the last open Sunday at the world's fair grounds. The gates are now closed.

Meridian, Miss., Elks will purchase a home.

The East Lake election, which was being held on the issuance of $13,500 of bonds for the erection of an electric light plant, was called off on account of an error in the ballot.

Governor Jelks has named a board of managers for the old soldiers' home at Mountain Creek and has called a meeting of the board for next Friday at noon in his office.

A $100,000, six-story hotel is to be erected opposite the Birmingham postoffice.

Iron Production.

In the last six years the iron ore output of the United States has doubled. The quantity of iron ore produced in 1902 aggregated 35,554,135 long tons, valued at $65,412,950. This is an increase of 23 per cent over the production of 1901 and of 103 per cent over that of 1897. Ore was produced in 1902 from mining operations carried on in 23 states and two territories. Minnesota produced 15,137,... tons, heading the list, while Michigan, with 11,135,215 tons, stood second. Alabama, with a tonnage of 3,574,474, was the only other state to pass the million mark.

Glass Plant for Birmingham.

A large window glass manufacturing concern will be located in Birmingham. The manufacturing plant will be entirely new and employ a large force of men. Nothing but the finest grade of window pane glass will be manufactured.

It was stated that one of the gentlemen interested is president of a natural gas company in Indiana, near Muncie, and that the gas fields there are playing out. The men with their money invested in such enterprises are looking about for new fields, and settled on the Birmingham district for the glass plant.

The Birmingham Steel and Iron company commences soon erecting a ten-ton steel furnace in place of one of the iron furnaces; so that in the near future it may be prepared to make steel castings.

All our reports from the country indicate the continuation of the favorable conditions which we have been able to report for several weeks. The cane crop is looking well, and the stand is good, and no reports of an adverse character have been received from any quarter. The season is fully a month or six weeks ahead of last year.

New Railroad.

The Memphis, Indianola and Gulf railroad is the name of a new railroad that paid its charter fees of $250 into the Mississippi treasury Wednesday. It is understood the line will be built in a short while and that the Southern railway is behind the enterprise. The route of the road is to be from Memphis to Indianola, Sunflower county, and from there to Jackson, a distance of nearly two hundred miles, and most of the way through the richest section of the delta and the state. The road was chartered some time ago.

By an explosion of a stove at the Ensley steel plant Sunday three negroes were badly injured and one killed outright.

Mullikin Commits Suicide

Dothan Postmaster Escaped from Jail and Put Bullet Through His Heart.

Captain W. W. Mullikin, postmaster at Dothan, who was in jail at Abbeville on a charge of assaulting his step-daughter, broke jail at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon. He was closely pursued and fired several shots at the parties who were trying to overtake him. He was fired at in return and finding he could not escape he shot himself through the heart. Death was instantaneous.

Sentenced to Five Years.

W. A. Hunt was found guilty at Dallas, Tex., of swindling a life insurance company out of $14,000 and sentenced to five years in the penitentiary. Seven years ago Hunter obtained a policy and almost immediately disappeared, supposedly drowned.

His sister Mrs. Jennie Mettler sued and eventually recovered judgment in the United States supreme court. Hunter was arrested last fall in Birmingham, Ala., and brought to Dallas for a bitter legal fight. The case has cost the company over $20,000.

Declared Insane.

The taking of testimony in the case of the state vs. George W. Coleman, who is charged with the murder of D. A. Calvin, and which has been on trial in the circuit court at Selma since Monday, was concluded Wednesday. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty by reason of insanity. Coleman was declared sane at present and released.

Acquitted.

The court has acquitted Will Brogdan of the charge of shooting Belle Scott, a white woman, in a Huntsville restaurant. The defendant proved that he was with the woman and pulled a pistol to drive several negroes from the place when the woman grabbed the weapon and discharged it accidentally, the bullet entering her abdomen.

Killed Sweetheart and Her Father.

Ed Gammons, a young white man about 24, was taken to Jackson, Miss., from Water Valley, where he was arrested for killing Jake Kimsey and his daughter. Gammons is well educated and freely admits the killing, saying that Kimsey had forbidden him to marry his daughter, with whom he was in love.

He says he did not intend to kill the girl, but went to the house to tell about having killed her father in the fight. He says he does not know what made him shoot the girl unless it was that she cried. He said he was in a bad fix and expected that he would be hanged for his deed.

The Appalachian park bill, appropriating $10,000,000 for the purchase of land in Tennessee, Alabama, North Carolina and other states for the purpose of forming a government park will be called up in the senate by Senator Overman, of North Carolina, and an attempt will be made to reach a vote. The bill passed the senate in the last congress. There is no chance for its becoming a law at this session.

A historic oak was planted by the president and Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock Thursday in the yard of the white house. The little tree was grown from an acorn. Secretary Hitchcock picked up beneath an oak on the grounds of the Peterhof palace in Russia. The Russian oak was grown from an acorn that fell from the tree that sheltered Washington's tomb at Mount Vernon.

The coal fields in and around Altoona are being opened up rapidly and the additional entries are driving.

Work will soon be started on the new union depot in Decatur, the plans and specifications having already been submitted and accepted. The work will commence just as soon as the right of way can be secured. The building will be a modern brick structure with car sheds.

Opelika is expecting free mail delivery soon.

Captain A. S. Morgan, U. S. A., stationed at Fort Morgan, and Adjutant General W. W. Brandon, of Tuscaloosa, are making a tour of inspection of all the troops of the Alabama national guard, under the provisions of the Dick bill. This is the second annual inspection.

The Louisville and Nashville is pushing the work on its Altoona branch to Gadsden, and it is very nearly completed west of the tunnel. The tunnel has been excavated 600 feet from the eastern side, and is 2,300 feet in solid rock.

Boaz, 1,610 feet above sea level, is the highest railroad point in Alabama.

The famous factional fight in the Christian church of Huntsville broke out again Sunday. And as a result two elders and three members of the church are under arrest for wilfully defacing and injuring the church building.

C. D. Bridgman, a boilermaker, was run over and killed Saturday night by a street car near Birmingham. He was lying on the track, evidently drunk or asleep, and the motorman did not see him until within a few feet of him.

"PE-RU-NA TONES UP THE SYSTEM IF TAKEN IN THE SPRING,"

SAYS THIS BEAUTIFUL YOUNG GIRL.

MISS MARJORY HAMPTON, OF NEW YORK.

Miss Marjory Hampton, 2616 Third Avenue, New York City, writes:

"Peruna is a fine medicine to take any season of the year. Taken in the spring it tones up the system and acts as a tonic, strengthening me more than a vacation. In the fall and winter I have found that it cures colds and catarrh and also find that it is invaluable to keep the bowels regular, acting as a gentle stimulant on the system. In fact, I consider it a whole medicine chest."—Miss Marjory Hampton.

PURE BLOOD.

Blood Impurities of Springtime ---Cause, Prevention and Cure.

One of the most timely and interesting lectures he ever delivered was his recent lecture on the blood impurities of spring.

The doctor said in substance that every spring the blood is loaded with the effete accumulations of winter, deranging the digestion, producing sluggishness of the liver, overtaxing the kidneys, interfering with the action of the bowels and the proper circulation of the blood.

This condition of things produces what is popularly known as spring fever, spring malaria, nervous exhaustion, that tired feeling, blood humors and many other names.

Sometimes the victim is bilious, dyspeptic and constipated; sometimes he is weak, nervous and depressed and again he may have eruptions, swellings and other blood humors. Whichever it is, the cause is the same, effete accumulations in the blood.

Nothing is more certain within the whole range of medical science than that a course of Peruna in early spring time will perfectly and effectually prevent or cure this almost universal affliction.

Everybody feels it in some degree.

A great majority are disturbed considerably, while a large per cent. of the human family are made very miserable by this condition every spring.

Peruna will prevent it if taken in time.

Peruna will cure it if taken as directed.

Peruna is the ideal spring medicine of the medical profession.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

CONSUMPTION

Manufacturing in Japan is still in its infancy. Only twenty years ago the first cotton factory was opened in Osaka. By 1898, only fourteen years later, Japan had seventy-five cotton factories, with 889,377 spindles. The product is being exported to China and Korea chiefly. In silk manufacture Japan holds foremost rank. In this line her 1901 export was of the value of $15,000,000. The match-making industry has gone ahead, from $942,000 exportation in 1891 to $3,700,000 in 1901. Other important industries are porcelain and earthenware, lacquered ware, flowers, matting and paper manufacturing. Hong Kong China; British India Korea, the Philippines, the United States and Australia are Japan's chief foreign markets. As all of these markets except the United States are practically contiguous and of easy access, and as labor in Japan is cheap, her advantage in this rapid increase in manufacturing industries is obvious. In the case of the United States, and after deducting the $21,000,000 for American goods bought, Japan collected $24,000,000 from Uncle Sam to balance last year's trading.

DANGEROUS NEGLECT.

It's the neglect of backache, sideache, pain in the hips or loins that finally prostrates the strongest body.

The kidney warnings are serious — they tell you that they are unable to filter the body's waste and poison from the blood —the sewers are clogged and impurities are running wild to impregnate nerves, heart, brain and every organ of the body with disease elements. Doan's Kidney Pills are quick to soothe and strengthen sick kidneys, and help them free the system from poison. Read how valuable they are, even in cases of long standing.

L. C. Lovell, of 415 North First St., Spokane, Wash., says: "I have had trouble from my kidneys for the past ten years. It was caused by a strain to which I paid little attention. But as I neglected the trouble it became worse and worse until any strain or a slight cold was sure to be followed by severe pain across my back. Then the action of the kidney secretions became deranged and I was caused much annoyance, besides loss of sleep. Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my notice, and after taking them a short time their good effect was apparent. All the pain was removed from my back and the kidney secretions became normal. Doan's Kidney Pills do all that is claimed for them."

A FREE TRIAL of this great remedy which cured Mr. Lovell will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

AN ELOQUENT DISCOURSE BY THE REV. DR. HOWARD DUFFIELD.

Subject: "Footmen and Horses"—Every Man Hears at Times in His Soul a Resounding Cry Which Beckons Him to His Highest Destiny.

NEW YORK CITY.—Dr. Howard Duffield, pastor of the Old First Presbyterian Church, Fifth avenue and Twelfth street, preached Sunday on "Footmen and Horses." He took his text from Jeremiah xii:5. Dr. Duffield said:

It is healthful for us to test our hopes to-day as experience shall test them for us to-morrow. Squarely, individually and immediately let us face the challenge of Jeremy, the prophet: "If thou runnest with the footmen, and they have wearied thee, then how canst thou contend with horses?"

Let us first study the pursuit of happiness. The pursuit of happiness is intense and universal and rightful. The pursuit of happiness has enlisted the unwearied energy of the most of men throughout all time. Pleasure surely cannot be a very hard problem to solve. Certainly it can be no difficult thing to win happiness. Brave and bonny is this pleasure house of an earth in which we live. Dazzling bright is this Vanity Fair of a world in which the lot of mortals is cast. Its booths are most alluring. Its wares are most seductive; skillful are its traders, and eager faced its throngs of buyers. Behold the shimmering flash of its gems and the rich rustle of its soft silks! Hearken to the sweet notes of its music and the golden chink of its coin! Lend your ear to the rhythmic beat of its dance and the gladsome rapture of its revel. Mark the gleam of its flashing eyes! Heed the spell of its silvery laughter! The idea that this world is not a minister of happiness is hermit logic; is the crabbed fruit of cloistered seclusion; is the harsh inference of Puritanic prejudice. The siren voices of the world are ever summoning men to a wealth of pleasures—pleasures of the palate, pleasures of the passions, pleasures of the intellect. The blaring trumpets of the world are ever heralding the triumph of its votaries as crowned with laurels and clasping the brimming cup of its satisfaction, one and another ascends the throne of its dominion.

Very well, point me out the happy ones. Those smile-wreathed lips repress a rising sigh. Those laughter-lighted eyes but mask a wearied heart. The glitter is tinsel. The trappings are fustian. The ornament is stucco. The mirth is hollow hearted. Do you not know that those men who have filled all of fortune's coffers are the most brain wearied and heart burdened of the children of the earth, in their effort to fill one more? Have you never learned that the man who has climbed the throne is smitten with heart sickness because there is some Naboth's vineyard unpossessed? Has it never been told you that a man may wear the jeweled tokens of a king's favor and yet writhe under the pang of disappointment because some beggar Mordecai stands in the palace gate? If not, let me put in evidence the testimony of competent witnesses. Listen to that pampered pet of fortune, bedecked with the insignia of English nobility, and standing upon the pinnacle of earth-given happiness. In the swiftest swing of pleasure's whirlpool, in the very heyday of life, upon his thirty-sixth birthday, Lord Byron wrote:

"My days are in the yellow leaf,
The flowers and fruits of love are gone,
The worm, the canker and the grief
Are mine alone."

Recall the words of Chesterfield, who reduced the pursuit of happiness to a fine art, and had taken every degree in the freemasonry of human pleasure: "I have been behind the scenes, I have seen all the coarse pulleys and the dirty ropes which move the gaudy machinery, and I have smelled the tallow candles which illuminate the hollow decorations to the astonishment of an ignorant audience." Listen to the peevish wail of Heine, that richly gifted poet, critic and master thinker who wrote in his diary: "What lists it to me that at banquets my health is drunk out of golden goblets and in the best of wine, if I, myself, separated from all the joy of the world, can only moisten my lips with the physician's potion? What lists it to me that enthusiastic youths and damsels crown my marble bust with laurels, when on my real head a blister is being clapped by my old sick nurse? What lists it to me that the roses of Shiraz glow and smell never so sweetly? Alas, Shiraz is 600 miles from Rue l'Amsterdam, where I get nothing to smell in the melancholy solitude of my sick room but the aroma of warm poultices." Behold the trophies of the world are wetted with a rain of tears! The reverberating plaudits which greet the world's successes only serve to waken the wailing echo, "Vanity of vanity, it all is vanity."

The works of earth are frail. Its jewels lose their fire. The luster of its gold will tarnish. Its garlands will wither and their bloom and fragrance will vanish away. What shall that man do who cannot taste delight in the midst of his pleasures, when the lights of the revel begin to grow dim, and sorrow as with a harpy's hand, sweeps bare the banquet board, and amid the gathering shadows the fingers of destiny begin to write doom sentences upon the wall? What is that man to do who cannot pack a single hour with unalloyed pleasure, when he crosses the threshold of a long, long eternity? Do not blink the question. Meet its thrust fairly. "If you cannot run with footmen how will you contend with horses?"

Apply another test. There is a deeper longing in many minds than the thirst for pleasure. It is the craving for truth. There is genuine grandeur in the achievements of the intellect. The coronet of culture is brighter far than a king's diadem. The robes of mental royalty are more imperial than the mantle of Caesar.

It would seem as though the mind monarchs of the present age had realized that dream of the Hebrew boy in the olden time, when sun and moon and stars bowed down to do obeisance. It would seem as though the princely thinkers of the present day wore the signet ring of Solomon, in obedience to which all elemental powers yield ready response. They say to the genii of the electric fluid, "go," and they render a ready service. They beckon to the coal and to the iron, to the silver and to the gold, and from the secret caverns of the earth they hasten to do their bidding. They say to the veriest vapors, "do this," and they do it.

But, after all, what is the sum total of human knowledge? "Behold we know not anything?" We have mapped a few square miles of space, and immensities lie around. We have numbered a few odd centuries of time, and eternities lie beyond. We have garnered a stray stalk or two from the mighty harvest fields of fact, and illimitable sheaves are nodding in the breeze unsickled. Within the horizon of observed fact we only know how things appear to be, not what things are. We know not where the light dwelleth, but only how certain light rays affect us. We cannot tell what atmosphere is, we have only discovered some of the offices which atmosphere renders us. Our vaunted knowledge largely consists of shrewd guesses concerning surface appearances. The last result of culture is the coronation of nescience. Its proudest achievement is fixing the limits of thought. The most sinewy brain cannot scale those adamantine barriers that convert reason's highway into a "no thoroughfare." There are nuts of fact which the stoutest blows of the hammer-head of human knowledge fail to crack. There are Gordian knots of thought which turn the edge of the most finely tempered blade of human research.

Nineteenth century intellect, the human mind, in that age when mind touches the meridian is not able to tell the story of the little lichen that clings to the stone in the wall, "root and all and all in all." How, then, shall human wisdom answer for me those awful questionings concerning origin and duty and destiny which I, reasoning and feeling, sinning and suffering, mortal and immortal, must know? What lore of man will unveil to me the face of the great God, my maker, and roll back the cloud that envelops His throne?

What mechanic skill will suffice for unraveling the dread secret of this dark woof of evil which is woven into human experience? What scholar, though he have drunken at every Castalian fount, can tread with me the brink of the grave, and peering down into that abyss of dreadful night give me any assurance that confined dust will rise resplendent in some resurrection morning? What pupil of the most cultured Gamaliel can sit by my bedside in the hour when heart and flesh are failing and set one single star of hope aglow in the dark midnight that gathers around me? Just one star beam to tell me that beyond the cloud and darkness are the many mansions of an eternal home, that yonder waits a father's welcome to love and light and joy ineffable? Most majestic are the achievements of intellect.

Greek tragedy tells us how King Edipus at the close of life heard a cry—a strange, weird, imperious summons far off, yet near, in some distant world, yet close at hand; a voice that drew like gravitation. So does every man, in virtue of that royal nature which allies him with heaven's throne, hear at times just such a cry resounding from some distant sphere, even from that spirit realm which is his true fatherland, yet near, within his very soul, that beckons him to his highest destiny. "Oh, soul of man, awake, awake, shake off the chains of spiritual slumber and sloth. Escape the earth bound life. Heaven-born and heaven-aspiring, live for God!" The Hindoo palace echoed with that cry, and Buddha swept out to brood in the wilderness depths over its mysterious meaning. Those accents floated over the land of Pallas Athene, and in academy and portico there gathered groups of thinkers that sought to follow its leading as the wise men followed the Orient star. Every dweller in Christian lands hears that cry more plainly. It is borne to him in the quiet peacefulness of the Sabbath that whispers to his toil-worn spirit of that rest that remaineth when the toil of this work-aday world is done. It comes to him from the open church door that tells him of a home shelter for his storm-beaten soul. It speaks to him from the Scripture, where it syllables the splendors of the Christ, and declares that such is the glorious image which God has planned to reproduce in him now sullied and sickened with sin. But where, in all the ages, is the man that girding himself at this signal call has won in the race for holiness? Are we not sometimes glad that thoughts are not audible? that motives are not visible? that we are not breastplated with transparent glass, through which the workings of the inner life might lie open to the curious eye? Are we not glad that it is sometimes a function of language to conceal, as well as to convey thought? If our struggles after holiness be as honest hearted as that of the old pagan seekers after God, we will unhesitatingly echo their sad avowal, voiced by one of that high-souled but discouraged company, "I approve the better courses, but I follow the worst." And if our own hearts, sin-darkened and sin-warped, condemn us, how can we meet the scrutiny of Him who is greater than our hearts and knoweth all things?

"If thou contendest with the footmen and they weary thee, how canst thou contend with horses?" There is but one method by which this problem of the Hebrew prophet can be wrought out to an encouraging solution. Let its terms be inverted. Read the formula backward. If the horsemen could be conquered first, who would waste a thought upon footmen? If we could meet the mightiest foes and override them there would be little difficulty in outmatching lesser needs. If we could run with horses and outrun them, we should shake the dust of a sandaled scorn in the face of the footmen. Such a solution is hinted at in scripture. Turn the Bible page. Put the apostle against the prophet. Reply to the challenge of Jeremiah with the triumph shout of Paul.

I can make money in the market place. I can obtain pleasure in the playhouse. I can win culture in the school room. But the remission of my sins I can secure only upon Calvary. Christ is the solitary Saviour.

When the sin want is appeased all want is met. When this is righted all is right. With the regal robes of righteousness go the sceptre of power and the diadem of peace. Bring the matter to a test of a personal experience and see if it is not so, and imagine that every one in this assembly was a Christian; that each one of us began the week's work as a saved soul. You go forth to-morrow morning, your heart aglow with a brighter splendor than the glory-bath with which sunrise floods the earth. "The light of the knowledge of the glory of God as it shines in the face of Christ." You go down-town, not knowing what the hours may be bringing to meet you. Every footstep carries you into a realm untrodden. Every clock-tick swings you into a mysterious future. But you know some things now. You know that Jesus died for you; that God loves you; that, as far as the setting of the sun is from the rising, so far has your sin been carried away from you. Toil begins. Jesus worked. Trial approaches. Jesus suffered. Your truest words are twisted, your noblest acts are misinterpreted, for your manliest endeavors mean motives are suggested. Jesus drank the same bitter cup. He who told Capernaum fisher folk to launch out and cast net calls you to take up the pen or the plane or the yard-stick or the needle or the loom. He who said to Peter "Feed My lambs" has said to you: "Sit by the cradle-side and do nursery work." He who said to Matthew "Take up the cross and follow Me" has said to you: "Come after Me into the lonely pavilion of pain, keep midnight vigil with Me in the shadowed paths of Gethsemane." Evening-tide draws on. Home shelter beckons to rest. Fireside reunions, with their heart deep satisfactions, whisper to you of another home that waits beyond the toil of earth. Empty chairs and vanished faces stir your heart with the glorious certainty that the Saviour is placing a chair for you where the home circle is forming, never to be broken. So a life of work resolves itself into a life of worship. So the days, with ever quickening step, shall hasten by. So the night time shall draw on apace. And the lengthening of the shadows and the waning of the light shall bring to your Christ-enriched nature the message which life's setting sun flashed into the heart of an old nursemaid, who, becoming blind and deaf, said: "You're worrying about me, dear. There is no need of that. I am happy as a little child. I sometimes think I am just a little child whom the Lord is hushing to my long sleep, for when I was a nurse girl my mistress always told me: 'Speak very soft and low and darken the room so the little ones may go to sleep,' and now the noises are hushed and still to me and the bonny earth seems dim and dark, and I know it is my Father lulling me away to my long sleep."

When General Grant reviewed the British troops in India he was asked what feature of the spectacle made the most impression upon him. His reply is significant. He did not refer to the superb discipline of the men or to the glitter of their military equipment. He simply said: "Those fellows march with the swing of victory." Amid the sin and ignorance and the sorrow that throngs thickly along the way of life, that soul marches with the swing of victory which is Christ saved, Christ schooled, Christ satisfied.

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY
REVIEW OF REVIEWS

THE NECESSARY MAGAZINE IN THE PRESIDENTIAL YEAR

The Review of Reviews is often called a necessity, in recognition of its usefulness in keeping readers "up with the times."

In Presidential election years the REVIEW OF REVIEWS is more than ever "the necessary magazine." Everybody wants to be truly and quickly informed about this or that public question that has forged to the front; to know about the new candidates and personal factors in politics, to have a complete picture at hand of the current movement of history.

In Dr. Shaw's editorials, in its authentic and timely contributed articles, in its brilliant character sketches, in its condensations and reviews of all the important articles of other magazines, and in its hundred a month of valuable portraits, witty cartoons, and interesting views, the REVIEW OF REVIEWS gives the much desired news of the world's and our own progress. "The World under a Field-glass" is the way one subscriber describes it.

Men in public life, like President Theodore Roosevelt, the members of Congress, and the great captains of industry, who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided it is "indispensable."

FEMALE WEAKNESS

542 1-2 Congress St.
PORTLAND, MAINE, Oct. 17, 1902.
I consider Wine of Cardui superior to any doctor's medicine I ever used and I know whereof I speak. I suffered for nine months with suppressed menstruation which completely prostrated me. Pains would shoot through my back and sides and I would have blinding headaches. My limbs would swell up and I would feel so weak I could not stand up. I naturally felt discouraged for I seemed to be beyond the help of physicians, but Wine of Cardui came as a God-send to me. I felt a change for the better within a week. After nineteen days treatment I menstruated without suffering the agonies I usually did and soon became regular and without pain. Wine of Cardui is simply wonderful and I wish that all suffering women knew of its good qualities.

Periodical headaches tell of female weakness. Wine of Cardui cures permanently nineteen out of every twenty cases of irregular menses, bearing down pains or any female weakness. If you are discouraged and doctors have failed, that is the best reason in the world you should try Wine of Cardui now. Remember that headaches mean female weakness. FOR BETTER ROADS.

Men of Wealth Interested in Highway Improvement.

Men of wealth are evincing a practical interest in road improvement for the benefit of their fellow men. George Gould has offered to bear one-third of the entire cost of the improvement of the public highways in the vicinity of Lakewood, N. J., and Colonel J. J. Astor has spent large sums on the roads near Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Recently Harley T. Proctor, a summer resident of Williamstown, Mass., offered to give the town $10,000 for the improvement of the roads, providing the latter raises $50,000 for the same purpose. Mr. Proctor makes the gift because he believes that better roads would increase the popularity of Williamstown as a summer resort. He recently had the stone hill road put in excellent condition at a cost of $500. The town furnished the drainage pipes and permitted Mr. Proctor to use the road scraper.

The Secret of a Good Road.

A hard surface, well rounded so that the water will run off quickly, is the secret of a good road. Attention after a road is once permanently built is imperative so that the washed out places and depressions where water stands may be repaired. A little timely work will keep a road in good shape.

Civilization and Good Roads.

There is perhaps no better test of the life of a civilization than that to be found in the extent and character of its public highways. The degree of perfection of country roads corresponds closely to the degree of civilization where the roads are situated.

Build Them to Last.

Great loss has often been occasioned through temporary and unskillful fixing of roads and the erection of flimsy and insufficient culverts and bridges. It is poor economy to erect anything but permanent structures built to last and stand the severest tests.

FARM AND GARDEN

TOMATOES UNDER GLASS.

Easily Grown For Late Autumn, Early Winter and Spring.

"There are many people having suitable accommodation who never think of producing their favorite vegetable at a season of the year when it is most valuable, being under the impression that special means are necessary. This may be true of midwinter, but for late autumn and early winter and again in the spring there are many—even those having only a small glass house and who keep it comfortably warm for its usual occupants—who can have more or less of a supply of fine flavored fruit. This can be grown without taking up any extra room except what is necessary to stand the pots or boxes on, because the plants can be trained on wire under the roof, being set about twelve or fifteen inches from the glass," suggests a writer in an exchange.

To this may be added that the Lorillard is a favorite tomato for growing under glass, and the cut shows a handsome cluster thus produced. The fruit is smooth, firm, of good texture, and a beautiful, bright red color. The usual temperature for forcing tomatoes is about 70 degrees for day and 65 by night, and single stem training is popular. According to some growers each flower must be pollinated by hand to insure fruit in winter.

HAIRY VETCH.

Hairy vetch serves equally well as a cover crop, for pasturage, hay or as a soil renovator. Like almost all the forage plants, it gives the best results when sown on rich, somewhat moist soils. It will, however, make an excellent growth on soils that are dry and somewhat sandy in character. On poor clay soils or those that are largely composed of sand it will not, of course, give very satisfactory results. When it is desired to establish it upon such soils, they should be well fertilized, in order to give the vetch a good start. Through its power of absorbing the atmospheric nitrogen by means of the bacteria in the root tubercles it will greatly enrich the soil on which it grows. A more vigorous growth of the plant and a consequent more rapid renovation of the soil will be obtained by fertilizing poor soils on which the vetch is sown than by leaving the enrichment of the soil entirely to the plant.

The seed should be sown in August or September preferably at the rate of one to one and a half bushels per acre. On account of the weakness of the stems the plants are unable to maintain an upright position unless they are planted with some cereal crop. Winter wheat, rye or oats may either one be used for this purpose, sowing them broadcast with the vetch seed at the rate of one oushel per acre.

Where the seed is sown as early as recommended above the plant will often make growth enough to furnish some grazing before the coldest weather of winter sets in. If, however, the fall rains are late and the germination of the vetch seed delayed thereby or if the vetch be planted in October or the 1st of November, the plants will but barely become established before winter weather checks their growth, and no pasturage will be obtained before February.

The date at which grazing may be had depends, therefore, not only upon the time of sowing, but also upon the time that the autumn rains begin, the nature of the weather during the autumn and early winter months and the latitude in which the crop is grown. Fertility of the soil will also influence the rapidity of growth of the plant very considerably. There is generally very little growth made during the coldest part of the winter, no matter at what time or under what conditions the seed was sown and growth begun.—Carlton R. Ball.

OUR ONE LITTLE TALENT.

What shall we do with it? Why, use it of course. What was it given us for? Not to fold away in a napkin, surely. God does not expect us to do great things with our talent. He only expects us to do each little thing faithfully and well. It takes us so long to learn that God does not look at things as we do, and call some large, others small. We sometimes forget that the next thing—that unimportant task, that arduous duty, that trivial deed of kindness, that message from the heart—is just what God has placed in our pathway, is just what He wants us to do.

Oh, yes I know many times we do not want to step for this next thing, we want to hasten ahead and accomplish something worth while. Then we wonder why it is that our lives are so unsatisfactory and fruitless. It is not so much what we do but how we do it and for whom we do it that counts. We want to work for Christ, then He works in us this priceless thing we call character, and all of our labor will be glorified because we are doing it for Him. If we would use our talent as God designs we should, we will admit that we have it, then commit it into Christ's keeping and submit it to the developing that He sees fit to subject it, after which we will transmit as much as possible of it to others, admit, commit, submit and transmit. Probably the most difficult of these acts, these givings, these sendings, is the third. There is something in our nature that seems to object to it to the point of rebellion, but not because with a large when we lose the other upon us. He can take it and make something out of it. He will show us where to invest it to the best advantage. He will enable us so to use it in our common every day lives. He will point out our pathway for us and will enable us to use but not abuse our little talent. L. V. LOWERY.

Best Cough Medicine for Children.

When you buy a cough medicine for small children you want one in which you can have implicit confidence. You want one that not only relieves but cures. You want one that is pleasant to take. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy meets all of these conditions. There is nothing so good for coughs and colds in children. It is also a certain preventive and cure for croup, and there is no danger whatever from whooping cough when it is given. It has been used in many epidemics of that disease with perfect success. LET THE PEOPLE RULE.

VOL. XII | CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY, APRIL 21, 1904 | NO. 27

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

Politics we have often heard, breeds strange bed fellows," and there is no denying the truth of that statement. Excuse may perhaps be made for the change of habitation of some people, but there can be no excuse for direct falsehood. When a few days ago, I read in a paper printed in Birmingham the following: "It seems like it is an utter impossibility for Democrats (as a rule) to be honest, even among themselves," [It is the Birmingham Union, published at Clanton I refer to] I unhesitatingly say it is a falsehood, and the man who wrote it is perfectly acquainted with the fact. Why not produce one single affirmation? Because it cannot be done! Why not state one instance of a fraudulent vote? Because it cannot be done! If the Birmingham Union, published at Clanton, can produce one positive instance of a fraudulent vote, why not do it? Because it cannot be done? I honestly believe, and know, that so far as Beat 4 is concerned, unless a man was fully qualified, he was not allowed to vote, and I believe the same rule was applied at every box in the county, notwithstanding the malicious statement of the Birmingham paper. If not, why don't the Birmingham paper produce the evidence? Because it cannot be done. The people of Chilton are not fools and are certainly not going to accept a false statement from a Birmingham paper without some evidence. Let us have the evidence.

Here's a terrible problem before the people of Clanton, and I give it even before it is started. "Who is the most popular young lady in Clanton?" Do you know? So far as I know each and every young lady is the most popular one, or at least from private enquiry each and every one have hosts of friends, and perhaps the best and only way to find out is by a popular vote, and when it is aiding a good cause, let the vote decide it. The good people of the Methodist church want to make some improvements, a new carpet, etc., and the idea has been hit upon to establish a voting contest to decide who is the most popular young lady in Clanton. Good—but just think of it. How can we find out? It can only be done by vote, and I am ready to vote for—for—oh! I'll vote for all of them. A popular subscription is to be raised, and for each ten cents subscribed a vote will be registered for your favorite among the charming young ladies of Clanton—that is to say ten cents gives you a vote for the nicest young lady in Clanton, and a dollar gives you a hundred votes for ten of the most deserving young ladies of Clanton. If I have a thousand votes I never know how to distribute them. Miss Ellen Stanley will receive subscriptions and votes, and the voting is limited until Tuesday, May 3rd, 1904. Every week the standing will be published in The Banner, and if you find your favorite should be falling behind (al-

Editor Banner:—I wish, through the columns of your paper, to say a few words to my friends. I thank them from the very depths of my heart for the interest they manifested in my behalf to secure the Democratic nomination for Probate Judge of April the 11th. I feel like we have fought a good fight, and now let us keep the faith and line up, shoulder to shoulder, and put forth unending effort and elect the ticket in November next.

Again thanking my friends for their kindness toward me, I am,

JUDGE OF PROBATE S. M. ADAMS
DEMOCRATIC NOMINEE FOR RE ELE TION.

In the year of 1853, on Dec. 10, was born into the world, in Dallas county, Ala., Samuel M. Adams, (whose portrait we present above) who was destined to take a prominent part in the affairs of this State—a more prominent part than is usually allotted to the average citizen. In his early days, fettered by the unfortunate environments of the time, young Sam Adams took naturally to farming, and educated himself as circumstances allowed. Following the plow during the day and educating himself by the light of a pine knot fire far into the night, he advanced to manhood, and love of a fair maid of Chilton brought him to this county, where, in West Chilton, at the age of 19, he was married to Miss Martha Jane Whatley, a union which has been productive of much of the happiness of this life he has enjoyed. Being of strong religious proclivities he early joined the Baptist church, and was soon called to the ministry of the gospel, and for years has labored in the vineyard of the Lord, much of his ministry being devoted to Chilton county. A man of strong convictions and a born orator, it came to pass he was drawn into the politics of his native State, and in 1888 he was elected by the Democrats of Bibb county to represent that county in the legislature, and his services being entirely satisfactory to his constituency he was re elected to that important position for the second term. The politics of the State for the next few years caused a breach in the ranks of the Democratic party, and Sam Adams, with many other Democrats, thought best to align himself with the Jeffersonian Democrats, which party subsequently became merged in the Populist party. His ability as a public man was soon recognized and in the first nominations of the Jeffersonian Democrats included S. M. Adams as their candidate for Commissioner of Agriculture, and the nomination was repeated at the next convention. He was also elected President of the State Farmers Alliance, and for five years his administration of the affairs of the Alliance is universally conceded as being the halcyon times of that Association; we wish it could be repeated. In the course of time it became evident that the politics of the State were about to change—the negro was to be eliminated and the direction of public affairs was to be in the hands of white men only. But there were still some men who could not see this, and the consequence was that S. M. Adams was nominated by these unseeing people for Governor of the State of Alabama, and Sam Adams, recognizing the change in the politics of the State, and not wishing to oppose the Democratic nominee, the lamented William J. Samford, absolutely declined to accept the nomination, although pressed to do so. His declination proves his democracy. In 1898 he was elected Judge of Probate of Chilton county and it is not denied by anyone but that he has made an excellent Judge of Probate, and his nomination by the Democrats of Chilton county is an acknowledgement of his worth, and his election in November means that the best interests of Chilton county are safe in his hands.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, is narated by John Oliver of Philadelphia, as follows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters; to my great joy, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents, guaranteed, at Clanton Drug co., Hopkins Drug co.

A railroad is being built now in the Holy Land to run through the region which is most familiar to all the students of the Bible. The time table of this far-away road will bear the names of places that are almost household names to a greater part of the peoples of the world.

Panama begins well. In the first place, the Constitutional Convention has adopted a measure providing that of the $10,000,000 to be paid to the Republic of Panama by the United States for the right to use the canal zone, $8,000,000 is to remain untouched for the future benefit of the new republic. There is a suggestion of public schools in the proposition. The same convention has adopted a clause prohibiting gambling in the republic. There is something fine in this action, for heretofore Panama has received an income of $30,000 a year for permitting games of chance in Colon and Panama.

An arbitration treaty between Great Britain and Spain has been added to the still deplorably short but steadily lengthening list of peace compacts. No other nations have yet gone to the same length as the Chileans and Argentines, whose arbitration treaty is practically compulsory in that it permits the court to frame the issues on request of one party to a formal statement of the case. Nevertheless, every addition to the statutes of Governments which have declared their willingness to submit even a part of their differences to the judgment of an international tribunal is a gain to humanity.

Henry S. Pritchett writes as follows in McClure's: "High speed cannot be coupled with frequent stops, and at present railway speed a line must be of considerable length to give any great advantage over steam roads. Thus a hundred-mile-an hour electric tram between New York and Philadelphia has no very great advantage over steam trains. But such a train between New York and Chicago would enable one to leave New York at night and be in Chicago the next morning, thereby saving a whole day. This result will be attained when the capitalists have enough faith in such an enterprise to put their money in it."

According to a Belgian paper the Czar is among the composers. It is stated that at a soiree in the Winter Palace several works from the imperial pen were performed, among them one entitled "The Song of Peace." This stands in three sections, the first of which depicts the turmoil of battle, while the second suggests the stricken field, covered with dead and wounded. The third invokes retribution upon those who are responsible for such horrors. Another work is written in honor of the saints of the Orthodox Church, and of those who devote themselves to a cloistered life, far from human miseries. This is dedicated to the Archduke Constantine, himself a poet and musician.

The public has no appreciation of the extent to which the soil of Manhattan island is passing into the hands of recently-arrived foreigners. The 1900 census shows that only about 14 per cent of Manhattan's population is of native stock—in the sense that the parentage of family heads is native; and it is doubtful if a census of property owners would show a much greater proportion. William Waldorf Astor, in the Pall Mall Magazine, rather exultingly pointed out how few of the descendants of the old landed proprietors of Manhattan—the Bayards, the Rutgers, the Stuyvesants, the Clintons, the DeLanceys, the Lispenards, the Murrays, and the rest—have retained their ancestral acres. They are all now divided among a multitude of owners, to a great extent foreign. It was the butcher's son of Waldorf who began this absorption of American soil by foreign stock; and he has thousands of followers at the present day. The phenomenon is explained to a great extent by the social distinction associated by foreigners with fee tenure of real estate. Americans care no more for real property than other forms of investment—usually less; for, unaccustomed to the agrarian system of Europe, and the social discrimination between landlord and tenant, they have no particular pride in land ownership. This, however, is one of the greatest privileges open to the immigrant. It is especially prized by Russian Jews, who, in their own country are actually prohibited by law from holding land.

BIG FIRE AT WYLAM

Burns Eighteen Residences, a Church and a Hotel.

Friday afternoon fire broke out in the Tate hotel in the central portion of Wylam and in less than an hour the flames, fanned by a stout west wind, had destroyed eighteen residences. The total loss is estimated at between 16,000 and $17,000. The flames were checked by the use of dynamite used to blow up the houses in the path of the fire. Wylam has no water protection. The origin of the fire is supposed to have been a defective flue. The losses incurred are as follows: Mrs. W. W. Wilson, hotel, $2,500; Tate, household goods, $1,000, partly insured; Dr. W. D. Caldwell, house $800, furniture $1,000, horse $200, partly insured; old Methodist church, $1,500; William Montgomery, house and household goods, $2,000, partly insured; J. L. Coley, three houses and household goods, $2,600, partly insured; J. W. Sanford, two houses, $1,000; Mrs. William Jenkins, five houses, $2,500; Mrs. Brown, house destroyed by dynamite, value $500; Mrs. White, household goods, $500; W. J. Stacey, house $800, household goods and buggy, $1,000. This is the first time in the history of this mining town that it has suffered such a loss, but the citizens will rebuild.

Two Boys Drowned.

Frank and Willie Grover, 10 and 12 years old, were drowned in Dry creek near Huntsville. They were playing on the banks of the creek and fell in.

Work on the 200-ton furnace at Woodward is progressing rapidly and it is believed that by the latter part of September the immense plant will be ready to commence to make iron. When completed the three furnaces at Woodward will have a daily capacity of nearly seven hundred tons of pig iron, the capacity of the new furnace being 300 tons, and the two in operation each being 200-ton furnaces.

A large force of linemen is at work on the electric car line between Tuscumbia, Sheffield and Florence preparatory to the operation of the line, which is only a matter of a few days. It is given out that the plant, including waterworks, electric lights and the street railway, will have cost the Sheffield company a round million dollars when completed.

The democratic state executive committee will meet in Montgomery on Wednesday, April 20th, for the purpose of consolidating and publishing the vote cast in the primaries last Monday. In some instances it may require this official count to determine some of the nominees.

At Florence, Ala., the new Methodist church that is being erected was badly damaged by fire Friday. Tinners were at work putting on the roof and it is supposed that fire fell from the furnace used by the workmen. The building was damaged $1,000, which is covered by insurance.

The safe of W. D. Irwin and Windham & Co., at Moulton, were burglarized last Thursday night. Nothing of value was taken from either of the stores, as the thief seemed to have been in quest of money only, and neither of the safes contained a single dollar.

The body of Andrew Phillips, of Corinth, Miss., or Sheffield, Ala., was found on the Southern railway tracks at White station, Tenn. The head had been completely severed from the body. Letters found on his person showed his identity.

Alabama's production of pig iron in March was 128,947 tons. On April 1 twenty-five coke stacks were in operation.

At Baton Rouge, La., the christening of the New Istrouma hotel was made a gala occasion. The central figure in the ceremony was Mrs. W. R. Leavitt, formerly Miss Ruth Bryan, daughter of W. J. Bryan, who in the presence of a large number of society people of the city broke a bottle of champagne and gave the new hotel its name. The hotel is the first modern hostelry erected in the Louisiana capital. Mrs. Leavitt is there with her husband, the artist, who is painting a portrait of Governor Heard.

Korea's Palace Burned.

A report to high officials has it that the imperial palace at Seoul, Korea, was completely destroyed by fire Thursday night. The fire began in the evening and lasted throughout the night. The emperor and his suite succeeded in escaping to a nearby refuge. The report does not mention any loss of life, nor does it give the cause of the fire, but the recent political unrest in the Korean capital leads to fears that the destruction of the palace was the work of the rebellious element.

The imperial palace is a massive structure 400 years old, is built of stone. It is an old federal structure and contains within its walls a constant guard of 500. Inside the confines of the palace grounds 5,000 retainers live. The palace is not the oldest of the emperor's homes. He has another palace in which he lived for many years, but one night a snake fell from the ceiling of his bed room according to a well circulated story and Yie Evi immediately moved to his present imperial abode.

GREENWOOD, MISS.,

Was Visited by a Cyclone Thursday—The Damage.

A cyclone struck Greenwood, Miss., Thursday night.

The fourth story of the big new furniture factory was completely demolished, entailing a heavy loss. One store and several smaller buildings in the same vicinity were swept from their foundations. No loss of life is reported, but all of the wires are down north of the city and no reports can be obtained.

In Its Old Bed.

With a roar that was heard for miles the Mississippi river, Friday night, cut through Killicrankie Neck in Davis Bend, restored Davis island to the Mississippi mainland, and resumed its old channel through what for forty years has been known as Lake Palmyria.

Incidently several valuable cotton plantations were practially ruined. The neck of land through which the river cut to regain possession of its former channal was about five hundred yards wide. Davis Bend is twenty miles south of Vicksburg.

Cotton in India.

The government of India has issued the final general memorandum on the cotton crop of British India for 1903-04, showing that the area under cotton of 17,870,599 acres is over a million acres larger than the corrected area of last year, which was then the highest returned. The official figures of the estimated yield is 2,873,396 bales. The estimated total yield for this season excluding returns from Assam and Mysore, which did not report last year, is approximately the same as for last season.

Will Open the School.

Colored citizens of Jackson, Miss., have inaugurated a movement to raise the funds necessary to reopen the Holly Springs state normal school for colored teachers, and say that they will not ask the north to give a cent. They propose to get the cash from their own people. This is the school that was closed on account of Governor Vardaman's veto of the bill which appropriated $2,000 per annum to its support, and which bill the legislature was unable to pass over the veto.

Soldiers Killed in Riot.

In a riot at Pensacola Saturday between police and blue jackets from the warships and a few artillerymen from Fort Barrancas, one man, Private Banks of the Seventh company of artillery, was instantly killed, and four blue jackets from the Iowa and Alabama wounded, though not seriously. The riot started over the arrest of a blue jacket.

The mikado has ordered a prince of the royal house to attend the world's fair at St. Louis. He has selected his nephew, Prince Arisugawa Takehito. The prince, accompanied by his wife, will leave Japan in June and expects to remain in this country several months. The visit is intended as an expression of the mikado's appreciation of the friendly attitude of the citizens of this nation toward the land of the cherry blossoms.

Mine Inspector Cunningham and Suprintendent Howden have been held responsible for the Harwick, Pa., mine disaster last January in which 178 men perished.

It is predicted that the Georgia fruit crop this year will amount to 5,000 cars, and the railroads are figuring now on how to secure enough refrigerator cars to move the crop. The peach season in Georgia lasts less than four weeks, and during the shipping season a car will not make more than two round trips. Up to April 10 except in limited areas the Georgia fruit crop was safe.

Drop a half-dollar in the slot. That is the scheme to take the place of ticket sellers at the St. Louis fair.

AT THE CAPITOL

Congressional Proceedings and Other Items

APRIL 13TH.

The senate began consideration of the bill providing for the government of the Panama canal zone. The greater part of the day was occupied by Mr. Morgan in supporting amendments offered by himself. None of them was accepted and the reading of the bill was nearly half completed. Mr. Morgan attacked the new Panama Canal company and contended that the United States should carry into effect the provisions of the treaty with Panama regardless of the demands of that company.

Upon the request of Mr. Fairbanks, the senate ordered the printing of the late President McKinley's last speech at Buffalo as a public document. In presenting the request Mr. Fairbanks stated there are many inquiries for the address.

Mr. Hale presented an amendment to the Panama canal government bill requiring that all stores, machinery and men to be used in connection with the construction of the canal be transported in United States built vessels whenever reasonable rates can be secured.

The general deficiency bill was reported in the house. It carries $5,000 for the heirs of the late Representative Thompson, of Alabama, and $1,300 contest expense for Representative Clayton, of Alabama.

APRIL 14TH.

The senate devoted the entire day to consideration of the bill for the government of the Panama canal zone and Mr. Morgan again occupied the floor most of the day. The discussion related principally to details of governing the canal, but some consideration also was given to Mr. Hale's amendment requiring the use of American bottoms in the shipping of canal supplies to the zone.

In the house the Philippine bill passed and the postoffice appropriation bill sent to conference.

APRIL 15TH.

After a day of quiet routine proceedings the senate was addressed by Mr. Bailey on the question of civil service. The subject came up in connection with a paragraph in the sundry civil appropriation bill.

The Panama canal bill occupied the major part of the day and was passed without division.

The civil service appropriation bill was taken up and when the senate adjourned about half of it had been read.

The senate passed a joint resolution ordering the printing of 10,000 copies of the report of the anthracite coal strike commission.

The postoffice appropriation bill was referred to a conference committee.

A bill extending to the outlying possessions of the United States the law prohibiting the transmission by express of obscene literature from one state to the other was passed.

APRIL 16TH.

The entire day in the senate was given up to the consideration of a bill for the modification of the agreement of the Indians of the Devil's lake reservation in North Dakota for the sale of their lands. No decision was reached.

General routine work on the deficiency bill was completed by the house. Preceding this the District of Columbia was legislated for in several minor matters.

Henry H. Smith, former journal clerk of the house and an authority on parliamentary practice, is dead.

Three and one-half million immigrants have come into this country in the last eight years.

The bill extending the limit of filing Spanish war claims to January, 1906, is expected to come up in the house this week. The state of Alabama is interested to the extent of $25,000. Tennessee and Mississippi would receive about $18,000 each.

Eighty-nine per cent is the record of the Texas crews' marksmanship—the best in the navy.

A compromise plan regarding the proposed extension of the capitol building has been agreed upon by the senate committee on appropriations. It provides a special committee consisting of three senators and three members of the house which shall take the question under consideration and decide upon the plans of extension and who shall be in charge of the work. The committee is to report to congress next December. In the meantime the office building for the use of senators to cost about $2,000,000 will be erected similar to that now being constructed for the house of representatives, and situated opposite it and on the northwest of the capitol.

The Southern railway has advised the clerk of the railroad commission that it will comply at once with the order of the commission abolishing the tin cup from their cars and substituting glass drinking utensils. The Pearl and Leaf river road has made the same promise, but the other roads have not indicated their intentions in the premises.

Two of the four oil mills at Jackson, Miss., have closed down for the season, and the other two will close. This will throw about three hundred hands out of employment.

FULLER FILES CONTEST.

Charges Illegal Votes and Bribery and Irregularities in Returns.

Probate Judge S. L. Fuller, who was defeated for re-election by Robert I. Burke in last Monday's primary in Cullman county, has filed a contest after he had announced that he would not do so. He filed his petition with R. L. Hipp, chairman of the county democratic executive committee. This was a surprise even to most of Judge Fuller's closest friends, who had strongly advised him against it.

He alleges that 351 illegal votes were cast by republicans and populists; that money was used to bribe and defraud; that republicans were allowed to manage [illegible] of the election; that [illegible] to vote [illegible] charges [illegible] returning.

Two Grand Men Injured.

Jack Christian, a young white man, was caught in a belt in the dye house of the Eagle and Phenix mills at Columbus, Ga. His arm was mangled so badly that it had to be amputated below the elbow and he was thrown fourteen feet, with the result that he is now suffering from concussion of the brain. The chances for his recovery are small.

George W. Garrett, aged 44 years, a Seaboard Air Line foreman, was thrown under a freight car and saved his leg only by presence of mind. He was caught by the car and the calf of his leg badly cut, but he saved himself.

TAX COLLECTOR

Claims that Forged Poll Tax Receipts Are Out in Wilcox.

According to Tax Collector Lambert it appears that there were some one hundred persons in Wilcox county who voted in the recent primaries to whom he had not issued poll tax receipts, but who at the same time claimed to hold same. In other words, the tax collector intimates that somebody has been forging his name. He wants a state examiner to come at once to Wilcox and make a thorough examination of the matter.

Nominee Dead.

S. H. Herren, democratic nominee for the office of circuit clerk of Cullman county, died suddenly Sunday night while writing a card of thanks to his supporters in the late primary. He was an old confederate soldier. His opponent in the primary was O. S. Roden, whom he defeated by a vote of 1,018 to 537. He is survived by a wife and two sons.

A committee from the Talladega city council is preparing a programme for the dedicatory services on the occasion of the dedication of the Joseph B. At one time Mr. Graham was superintendent of the city schools and superintendent of education for Talladega county. At the time of his death he was field agent of the Southern Education board.

In a comparative statement of the total value of all mineral products in the southern states in 1880, 1901 and 1902, not a single state but shows gains. Alabama, for instance, takes the lead, having increased the value of its products by over $57,000,000, and West Virginia by over $56,000,000. Virginia comes next with an increase of $20,612,000, followed by Tennessee with a net gain of $18,788,000. Missouri, next in rank, has increased the value of its mineral output $17,371,000. Kentucky's gain is nearly $11,000,000, and that of Maryland $9,569,000. The increase in other states, in the order named, is as follows: Texas, $8,000,000; Georgia, $4,054,000; Arkansas, $3,290,000; Florida, $2,777,000; South Carolina, $1,444,000, and North Carolina, $1,019,000. The value of the output of minerals in Louisiana, $960,000, and of Oklahoma, $431,000, in 1902 is all gain, as this industry in each of them was undeveloped in 1880.

The first of five new submarine boats, building at St. Petersburg, will carry forty wagon loads of ammunition. She is dispatched Monday to the theater of war. The submarine boat, which is sent off in sections, is elliptical in shape and fitted with an improved electrical apparatus for firing torpedoes, which, it is claimed, experiments have shown enormously increases offensive power of torpedoes.

There is now under way and contracted for $200,000 worth of building in Talladega. The largest individual improvement is the Planters' Cheese company's $100,000 plant.

First in Oil Production.

Geological survey statistics [illegible] public place the world's production of petroleum in 1902 at 185,151,000 barrels. Of this the United States and Russia produced 91.44 per cent. For years Russia has led in point of production, but an increase of 16.7 per cent in the production of the United States in 1902 and a decrease amounting to 4,628,515 barrels in the product of Russia put the United States at the head of the list. The United States produced nearly 2.6 barrels of oil to every barrel produced by the rest of the world.

Better Breeds.

Purchasing better breeds of poultry should be done now, so the cockrel will be in better condition for the service of early eggs. The early chicks are the ones that bring the highest prices. Get pure birds if you do have to pay a little more for them. March is not too early to begin to save eggs for early hatches, and if the breeding stock has been purchased as indicated, the chances are ever so much better that the eggs are as they should be.

Our Wood Lots.

Remember that trees get ripe the same as wheat or other crops. When the trees are ready to cut they should be made into fire wood or lumber. But this does not mean the destruction of the forest. If the trees which have attained full growth and are fully matured are cut down, younger trees may remain. Then numerous young trees will spring up on every side, and the wood lot will be renewed for cutting in the years to come. I believe in retaining at least a small wood lot on every farm.

Pullets Are the Egg Producers.

Pullets that were hatched in 1903 should now be laying an egg every other day. While eggs are selling at sixty to twenty-five cents per dozen the time to give particular attention to them. They must have warm quarters so they can rest at night and be ready for forming the egg and taking exercise in the day. Where the farmer has well cured clover, if it be cut in lengths of an inch and soaked and mixed with meal, the pullets fed on this will have red combs, and eggs will come in rapidly.

A Handy Contrivance For the Farm.

Crop Rotation and Fertility.

It has come to be well understood by all successful farmers that one of the things essential in farm management is crop rotation, if soil fertility is to be preserved. The nitrogen from the air deposited by the legume crops, and the humus resulting from growing them in rotation are two things put in the plans of good farmers, but location should be adjusted to the character of the different soils, but it is essential for all of them. The following systems of rotation has been highly recommended by one who has given much attention to the matter. Four years' rotation would be best suited to rich river bottom soils that are naturally adapted for the production of corn and easy to cultivate. The rotation might be as follows: Corn, cowpeas or soy beans; corn, corn, cowpeas or soy beans; corn, winter oats or barley, cowpeas or soy beans. Four years' rotation is suited to the same class of soil as the three years' rotation, but it has the advantage of being better suited to the medium class of soils, as the land can be kept in clover for two years. On soils of medium fertility the rotation might be put as follows: Wheat, clover, clover; corn, corn, clover, clover. Five years' rotation would be better suited to a still poorer class of soils than the four years' rotation. On this class of land cultivation is not desired more than once within three or four years. The rotation might be as follows: Corn, wheat, grass, three years corn.

Bees and Fruit Growing.

An entomologist in his work meets with two immense groups of insects, one of which are injurious and those which are beneficial, says Professor W. G. There is no need of discussing the former class; the various insects which destroy our fruit trees, vines and field crops, and infest the products of various kinds are well known. As a matter of course this class has received the most attention. It is but natural that the attention of the farmer or fruit grower should be forcibly attracted to the death which these trees or crops than to the constant quiet and unassuming work of those insects which successfully hold in check many injurious species. Nevertheless it is as much the duty of the entomologist to assist in the increase and distribution of beneficial insects as to devise means for controlling the injurious ones.

As a matter of convenience we may divide the beneficial insects in two classes, those which are indirectly of benefit to mankind by their parasitic habits upon injurious species and those which are directly beneficial in that they create useful commercial products. The former groups may be illustrated by the various "lady-bird" beetles which destroy myriads of scale insects and plant lice, and by the parasitic hymenoptera—for the most part exceedingly minute insects resembling bees or wasps—which live as parasites upon the eggs, larvae or even eggs of destructive insects.

Of insects directly beneficial we may mention the silk worm, the cochineal insect and the honey bee. It is with the latter we now have to deal. The recent attention given to fruit growing has not received much attention from the average orchardist. I am convinced, however, that it is a subject of much more importance and a discussion of this relationship will, I trust, be of some little interest. It seems to me very essential that we should arrive at a clear understanding of the relationship of these two industries, horticulture and apiculture, as they are of mutual benefit to each other.

Soil Preparation.

It has been demonstrated that when the harrow is used over growing wheat early in the spring the result is beneficial, and it is when the wheat is harrowed that the grass seed should be sown, if grass or clover are to follow a grain crop. It is important that the seeds be covered, and if the field be harrowed there will be less loss of seed and greater chances for a good stand. As an application of nitrate of soda on wheat in the spring pushes it forward very rapidly, it soon reaches sufficient height to shield the young grass from the extreme heat of the sun. The harrow may also be usually employed to mix fertilizer with the soil at the same time. The ground upon which grass seed is to be sown deserves more attention than the grain crop, for if the grass crop be intended as a permanent pasturage it must not be overlooked that weeds will spring up to compete with the grass, and for that reason the ground must be very clean. It is best, therefore, that grass should be seeded on land that was previously in corn, as the extra cultivation required for corn better prepares and cleans for the grass which is to follow.

Wire Gate.

The following is a description of a cheap and serviceable wire gate which will be found satisfactory, especially in places where a gate is not often used. It, of course, will not do for sheep or hogs, but will serve the purpose in cattle pastures where a three-wire fence is sufficient to confine stock. Cut three wires each about a foot longer than the distance between posts, and three short wires each six inches long. Form the short wires into loops and fasten to post (A,) (B, B, B,) with staples, the desired distance apart. Hook the long wires (C, C, C,) into the loops (B, B, B,) so as to form hinges. Shape three boards each four feet long, as illustrated in (D). Place a wire ratchet on each of these boards about six inches from the end (figure E, E, E,), attach the other ends of long wires to ratchets. Nail an inch board (figure G) four inches wide the height of post to post (F). Nail another board (H) on top of this overlapping the first an inch or two. Drive a stake (I) inside of wire fence three and one-half feet from post (F). Nail three pieces of board (J) each three feet long, on inside of post (F) and also inside of stake parallel to wires. Tighten up wires on ratchets (E, E, E,) sufficient so that when each of the boards (D, D, D,) are inserted into slot (H), and pushed back into position against (J) the wires will be taut. Three rings, one for each pair of boards, slipped over the ends, hold wires in proper position. If one would prefer four wires instead of three, another one can be added.—Jas. Cotter, in The Epitomist.

Horse Talk.

Heavy-coated horses should be clipped now, just as the hair begins to shed.

Blanket warmly and make the skin active by a vigorous, thorough brushing from head to heels every day.

The health and thrift of the horses will be improved in this way.

Keep a stubby broom in the stable to brush all the mud and ice from the horses' legs. Then rub them dry with a wisp of straw.

Rheumatism and chapped heels result from carelessness in this way.

This is the time to train the colts and young horses.

Carefully accustom them to all sorts of things.

Teach them to hold the cart back with their hind quarters as well as the breeching. Let wheels run off, open umbrellas over their heads and under them.

Let straps and things hit their legs and heels.

Let them understand that they will not be hurt and they will submit to almost anything.

It is the low-voiced, sympathetic, self-controlled, firm person who should train colts.

It is not the man who breaks the colts, but the one who trains them who does the most good.

The heaviest feed should be given at night when the horses have time to digest it.

When horses are taxed to the limit of their endurance all grain should be ground and fed on moistened cut hay.

Some long hay should be put in their mangers for them to nibble at while they are resting.

The morning feed should be mostly grain and not bulky.

Water before feeding always.

Give a horse a chance to drink often and he will never take enough to injure himself.

For over-reaching—"forging"—lower the front foot, shorten the toe and bring the heel up and set the shoe well back.

Set the hind shoe ahead and cut down the heel. Most blacksmiths do the opposite.

Stay with your horse while he is being shod.

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

AN INTERESTING DISCOURSE BY THE REV. L. H. CASWELL.

Subject: "A Little Inquiry Into Tribulation" — A Pathetic Figure in the Shilly-shally Youth Coddled in Luxury and Shrinking From Life's Combat.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—For his Sunday sermon, in the Tabernacle M. E. Church, Greenpoint, the pastor, the Rev. Lincoln Hollister Caswell, took as his subject "A Little Inquiry Into Tribulation." The text was from Romans v: 3: "But we glory in tribulations." Mr. Caswell said:

Unto each the ever recurring questions come. Whence the mission of adversity? Why the existence of trouble? Do pain and pleasure proceed from kindred laws? How is it that while our earth in its orbit keeps symphony with the host of heaven, it yet bears the undertone of anguish in its bosom?

Shall we answer by impeaching Infinite justice, by declaring the tyranny of pain, by asserting the bondage of suffering? Not so. But rather I come for the mission of trouble and learn the utility of adversity. It is clear to the student of ethics that there is an unknown quantity in the formula of suffering. In this question x equals life—life of service or of idleness; of force or of weakness; or grand or of mean proportions. Adversity either makes or ruins a man, his individual character alone determining whether he shall be crushed or exalted. Opposing forces stimulate to heroic action. A man may choose to dwell in luxury, but he must do so at the expense of the stronger forces of character. It is hard to endure pain, it is far harder to resist ease, but by resisting and by enduring are wrought out those princely qualities which are attributes of the ideal man. And so we are placed amid forces, rude and contrary, that we may gain the glory of breaking and bridling them. If nature and environment should befriend and never oppose, gratify and never grieve, satisfy and never smite, life would become immeasurably less noble.

It is not uncommon to think that suffering, as well as sin, comes fleet footed from Tartarus, whereas, suffering is not dependent upon sin. There is a ministry of suffering, but there can never be a ministry of evil. Is hatred the cause of love; revenge of forgiveness; selfishness of generosity; vice of virtue? Humility is not the daughter of pride, nor is error the propagator of truth. It is not true for a man to hold that because he has sinned he is capable of reaching a higher holiness. Give not evil the credit of befriending humanity. Sin alienates, debases, ruins. Behold how suffering rise above evil! Evil is infamous; suffering may be glorious. Evil merits antipathy; suffering often deserves praise. Evil swears fealty to the infernal; suffering never, but repeatedly vows allegiance to the Infinite. To punish evil is suffering's smallest province. It exists for a higher purpose than retribution—for a stimulating, educating, atoning purpose so that "afflictions are but the shadows of God's wings."

Upon material things a literature is written. Read it! It tells of strife, struggle, contention. The law of dissolution cooperates withthe law of growth. The rock dies that the vegetable may live; the plant withers that the animal may grow; the body decays that the spirit may expand eternally. Counter forces make the life of the universe. The meteor gleams because of resistance; the shimmering constellations that glow upon the brow of night are but fire balls from the furnace of the sun; light itself, resplendent and vitalizing, comes from combustion, antagonism and chemical conflict. Adversity enters into the very nature of things. Earth's living forms once slumbered in the granite rock, and would still have slumbered but for adverse forces active within. Chemicals were there to disintegrate, earthquakes to shatter, fires to fuse, glaciers to grind. There were corrodings, consumings, erosions, decayings, witherings and washing until the solid granite unfolded its treasures to make possible organic life.

What mean the expressions, "natural selection," "struggle for existence," "survival of the fittest?" They indicate that all life is an extended conflict, where each order preys upon the next below and grapples with the next above for mastery.

The life of nations is no exception to this law. Civilization may boast of her attainments, but revolt and revolution are the arbiters for her progress. She may exult in the "evolution of government," but turmoil, violence, bloodshed cry out, "We are factors in thy prosperity."

What people were more oppressed than the ancient Hebrews? Rameses enslaved them in Egypt, hardship harassed them in the wilderness; the Land of Promise pledged but little more than shock on shock of battle. That was the nation—buffeted, defeated, tried—that became the safe depository of truth, and gave to the world as its consummate flower Diety Incarnate.

What has been the discipline by which our own nation has attained its present strength? It had indeed a wonderful parentage. The brave little Netherlander whom the Council of Blood, the Inquisition and the Holy See could not down; the glorious Huguenot fresh from hearing the blood cries of St. Bartholomew; the sturdy, psalm-singing Puritan who wrung Magna Charta from John who served Hampden to resist the king, who animated Cromwell and his Ironsides at Marston Moor and Naseby, who taught Vane how to die, who struggled amid overwhelming forces for religious liberty; these, whom the American is proud to own as worthy ancestors, are all sons of hardship and endurance, conquerors in the nobler fields of battle. Thus out of milleniums of struggle with the myriad-headed hydra of persecution arises the America of to-day. The nation's birth was marked by pain. Speak, ye noble slain of Bunker Hill! Ye patriots clashing arms with an alien foe! Shout, ye pallid lips of the blood stained snow of Valley Forge! And tell us that freedom is gained by devotion to death; that liberty rides triumphant over a road macadamized by the bones of its devotees; tell us that the advancing stages of national life are heralded by conflict and hastened by the presence of a martyr host!

Passing into the realm of the intellectual it is found that the power of incisive intellect is purchased with the hard coin of struggle. The product of genius is dearly bought. No pioneer of philosophy, or science, or religion ever blazed his way through untrod forests who was not confronted by poverty, prejudice or hardships innumerable. Not in courts of ease; not in rich classic halls; not in the midst of fame and loud huzzas are deepest emotion engendered, rarest truths found nor sublimest conceptions begotten. From a cup of hemlock in Athens; from the cross in Jerusalem; from an apostle's dungeon at Rome; from the chamber of a blind bard in London have come the thoughts that have swayed the world.

Why is the sacred page so filled with tenderness, pathos and comfort? It was not written with a golden pen in an easy chair, in a scholastic library. For ink, there were tears of a multitude of weepers. For pens, there were fishermen, shepherds, bedouins of the desert, slaves, convicts and martyrs. For libraries, there were desolate rocks, caverns, mountain sides, sea shores and prison walls. Out of such harsh and unfavorable conditions came the volumn which through all the years has been coveted by the bereaved, sought by the lonely, loved by the troubled. Excellence of thought comes by way of toil, endurance, denial.

Mind, capable of Infinite thoughts, has its Gardens of Gethsemane. Mind wears the crown of thorns in the very hour of lofty achievement.

It is said that Ole Bull ascended the rough mountains of Norway, there he saw the majestic storm, heard the weird wail of the pines, listened to the roar of the cascades, and from these he caught those rapturous tones with which he charmed the heart of the world. Thus it is because men have climbed some craggy Matterhorn of chilling adversity, descended into some vale of shadows, or stood by some wave battered cliff; because they have braved opposition and hardship; because they have had passages in their lives where they have experienced the extremities of anguish and donation that they have become heralds of truth, have marked the advance of civilization, have been high priests of science, refiners of society, reformers of faith.

What is it that places this premium on grief? Why are the great doors also the great suffers? What is it that vitalizes pain, glorifies sorrow, and makes dead men's bones walk the earth clothed with tremendous influence? Let Moses answer from the mount of immeasurable glory: "I rejected a regal palace and the treasures of Egypt, choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God that I might be a statesman for the oppressed, liberate a nation of slaves, endure to be vexed, tried and discouraged through forty weary years that at last I might stand illumined in the transfiguration of the Son of God." Let David answer with his wail of anguish: "O, my son Absalom! my son, my son Absalom! would God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son!" It was in the depth of his mourning that he sung those poems which have comforted the aching heart for ages. Let Joseph and Daniel answer as from a prison and a den they ascend the steps to royalty and fame. Let Savonarola answer loving the red hot iron of martyrdom more than the red hat of a cardinal. Let Bruno answer, let Galileo, let Newton. Let Luther answer, and Wickliff and John Huss, and Wesley, and Francis Asbury. It is a noble company. But there are some whom reverses have ruined, whom afflictions have spoiled, who refuse to be sublimated by suffering or ennobled by calamity. I see yonder a Napoleon, of surpassing genius, the world's autocrat. He builds a throne of steel only to see it rust and crumble e'er he dies. From his pinnacle of power he falls and lies prostrate in defeat. His failure is ignominious because his spirit is ignoble. Upon the barren rock of St. Helena he wanders a lion at bay, a soul cowed, a phoenix life in hopeless despair. By his side and towering above him rises Washington. He comes to the government when there is nothing to govern. He becomes commander of the American Army when it is small and defeated. Without navy, without money, without munitions, with traitors and Tories abundant, with generals conniving for position and grossly slandering his character, he meets and defeats the most thoroughly equipped and appointed government of the world; and then, notwithstanding the importunities of a people he has freed, he refuses a royal crown and passes into history—an embodiment of unselfish service.

Far in the past I see corrupt Nero lolling in his chariot of regal magnificence; dying by inches a loathsome death, a victim of the very luxury and extravagance in which he delights. Rolling over the Appian way on toward the city, he passes the Roman guard leading a prisoner to execution. Unto the prisoner the Emperor gives but a contemptuous glance. That is all—and yet not all. That captive commands the gaze of mankind. The name of Nero is a synonym for vice and shamelessness, while the name of Paul wields a mightier influence with each succeeding century. Paul still lives! Die he cannot! It is true that for this purpose Nero led him forth from prison. But see! Does he tremble? Does he shrink from his last enemy? Does this spiritual hero who fought with beasts, struggled with waves, was scarred by the lash, incarcerated, smitten, stoned and left for dead, does he who, when each stroke of the "tribulum" fell upon him, shouted, "None of these things move," does he now flinch?

The block is there. The blade is ready. The headsman speaks, "Prepare!" Where is the tremor in the aged form? With radiant brow and stately mien immortal he stands. With eye flashing in hope, with voice strong and confident, hear him declare, "I am now ready to be offered; the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight. I have finished my course. I have kept the faith." Nero's axe cleaves his head and Paul, the hero, is crowned with the abundant life.

How has the ministry of the Christ been wrought out? In all the centuries of sorrow whose grief compares with that of Him who is at once the Author and Saviour of mortal man? With uncovered head bow we before the sublime sufferer. Behold! Out of the anguish of the garden, out of the gloom of the tomb He of the riven side, He of the thorn crowned head, He of the broken heart walks down the ages elevating sorrow until it grows with a heavenly hallow, lifting the burden of woe from bruised and staggering humanity. This is He who exalts the lowly and raises toil to nobility, declaring that pain shall no longer be accursed, but that life shall be triumphant in adversity. Is this our life? Not vacillating, meagre, indolent, but sturdy, unflinching, enduring, overcoming, decisive—a triumphant life? This only is life with deathless possibilities, and he only who lives for the future catches the secret of the present and its trials. Look we beyond diurnal revolutions gauging the sweep of the planet in its course around the sun. Trials and tests, slanders and betrayals, desertion and opposition are for to-day; character for eternity. If man in the future expects to rest upon his knowledge of truth, he must find some trial to test it now. If character is to count forever, some sharp and merciless criticism must prove its integrity now.

There is no more pathetic figure in the world of to-day than the shilly-shally youth cuddling in the lap of wealth and shrinking from life's combat. We are not wooden dummies, but must be men of granite, against whom the leaping waves and mountainous surges shall beat only to recoil in impotent fury. The need of this hour is strong manhood. Perseverence is the characteristic that wins. Expect not to glide through easy seas, with silken sails tense in the breeze of favor. You must steer through narrow straits; here a whirlpool of doubt, there a hidden rock of skepticism, where adverse currents would strand the bark high on the barren beach of despair. You must sail by the Siren Isle of insinuating desire; must resist enchantments which lull to the sleep of voluptuous death; must feel the grip of eternal realities; must move on and out to the unfoldment of the soul with an iron determination to wrest victory out of defeat, and weave a garland of praise out of the failure of friends, the malice of enemies, the contempt of rivals and the hardship of life.

The Treasure of Kindness.

Guard within yourself that treasure, kindness. Know how to give without hesitation, how to lose without regret, how to acquire without meanness. Know how to replace in your heart by the happiness of those you love, the happiness that may be wanting in yourself.—F. W. Faber.

The Only Safe Road.

Accident does very little toward the production of any great result in life. Though sometimes what is called "a happy hit" may be made by a bold venture, the common highway of steady industry and application is the only safe road to travel.—Samuel Smiles.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR APRIL 24.

Subject: The Mission of the Seventy, Luke x., 1-16—Golden Text, Luke x., 2—Memory Verses, 1, 2—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. The seventy sent forth (vs. 1-2). 1. "After these things." After Christ and His disciples made their final departure from Galilee. According to Andrews this took place early in November. They are then supposed to have journeyed along the borders between Samaria and Galilee eastward to the River Jordan. They crossed over into Perea and then turned south toward Jerusalem. "The Lord appointed." This appointment was temporary and not permanent like the appointment of the twelve apostles. "Seventy others" (R. V.) The twelve apostles had been commissioned and sent out about a year before this. As the number of apostles had reference to the number of the tribes of Israel, so the seventy disciples sent out call to mind the number of elders who were chosen to assist Moses in governing the people. The number also corresponds to the number of members of the Sanhedrin. "And sent them." The chief purpose of this sending was not to train these messengers for a later independent mission, but it was a new attempt to influence to decision at least a part of the people and by word and deed to prepare the coming of the kingdom of God in the midst of them. "Two and two." The same manner in which He sent out the apostles. This was done: 1. To teach them the necessity of concord among the ministers of righteousness. 2. That in the mouth of two witnesses everything might be established. 3. That they might comfort and support each other in their difficult labor. "Before His face." They were to visit those cities and places that He intended soon to visit.

2. "Harvest truly is great." The harvest is plenteous, the grain is ripe and spoiling and must be garnered immediately or it will be lost. There was need for such a mission as the district in Perea had been little visited by Jesus. There were multitudes who had not yet heard of the coming of "the kingdom of God." "Laborers are few." True workers have always been hard to find. This is the greatest calling in the world, and yet there are so few who are ready to make the small, temporary self-denial that is necessary in order to see success in Christian work. "Pray ye therefore." They must set out with prayer, and have a deep concern for precious souls.

II. Various instructions given (vs. 4-11). The instructions given them were distinct from and yet similar to the instructions given the twelve apostles. The twelve had greater authority to work miracles, and they were to receive persecutions which are not mentioned with reference to the seventy. 4. "Carry neither purse, etc." Trust God for your support. The purse was a small leather bag for carrying money. The scrip was a traveling bag used for carrying provisions when traveling. "Nor shoes." The shoes were made for use in the house. They did not need these; the sandals they were wearing would be sufficient. In fact, they were to take nothing not absolutely necessary for their journey.

6. "Son of peace." Any truly pious man who is worthy of such a blessing.

7. "In the same house remain." Their stay was to be short. They were not to choose the best places and neglect the poor, and were not to spend time going from house to house in search of better accommodations. "Is worthy." The one who really labors is worthy of being supported, but drones need not expect the workers to feed them very long.

8. "As are set before you." Probably Christ here refers to the traditions of the elders about their meat. They were extremely critical, and a dish of meat could hardly be set before them but there was some scruple concerning it. Christ would not have them regard those things, but eat what was set before them. 9. "Heal; and say." Their mission was twofold: 1. They were to gain the attention of the people by healing their bodies. 2. The important part of their work was to preach the gospel of the kingdom.

10. "Receive you not." Do not receive you kindly and accept your message. "Go your ways." You have no time to contend with them. Do not cast your "pearls before swine." "Into the streets." The most public place. Let every one see the result of rejecting the truths concerning the kingdom of God. 11. "Wipe off against you." The Jews considered themselves defiled with the dust of heathen countries, and the action here enjoined did not express anger, but a warning. It signified that these Jews were holy no longer, and was, in reality, placing them on a level with the heathen. "Be ye sure." The message was again to be repeated, if, perchance, some might hear at the last moment.

III. Impenitent cities upbraided (vs. 12-16). 12. "In that day." In the judgment day. "Sodom." See Gen. 19. This was one of the "cities of the plain" that was destroyed by God with fire because of its great wickedness. It was situated in the fertile plain of Jordan, but its exact location is not known. "Than for that city." Our Lord is here threatening the guilty inhabitants of the cities who reject His gospel, and from His words we learn: 1. That there is a future day in which the inhabitants of the earth are to stand before the judgment seat of God and receive their sentence. 2. The degree of punishment will be measured according to the privileges enjoyed and the guilt incurred. 3. Acceptance of the message of God is the only method of escape and the only means of salvation.

13. "Woe unto thee." "Alas for thee!" This is an exclamation of pity, and it is evident that our Lord used the words in this sense. "Chorazin." A town on the northwest shore of the Sea of Galilee. Its location is not definitely known, but it was near Capernaum. "Bethsaida." On the northwest shore of the Sea of Galilee, north of Capernaum. It was the birthplace of Philip, Andrew and Peter. "Mighty works." The great miracles. A miracle is a sign, a wonder, and a mighty deed (Acts 2: 22; 2 Cor. 12: 12; Heb. 2: 4.)

14. "More tolerable." The degree of your misery will be greater than even that of Tyre and Sidon. "At the judgment." The final judgment. 15. "Exalted to heaven." A Hebrew metaphor, expressive of the utmost prosperity, and the enjoyment of the greatest privileges. "Down to hell." Capernaum was to be brought down to a state of utter ruin and desolation. This prediction was literally fulfilled soon after this in the wars between the Jews and the Romans. 16. "Heareth; despiseth." He that welcomes the apostles and listens to them is listening to the voice of Jesus Christ and of God Himself, while the one who despiseth the apostles and will not listen to the message they bring is really despising and rejecting Jesus Christ and God the Father who sent Him. It was not long before the seventy returned with joy because of their success.

THE nomination of B. B. Comer for President of the Railroad Commission is sufficient evidence of the value of the primary. It proves that the people's voice is heard and their verdict justly rendered. The Banner did not support Mr. Comer, and it is noteworthy that scarcely a newspaper in Alabama favored Mr. Comer's candidacy. Above and beyond that, the railroads used every influence to defeat Comer, and yet in a Democratic primary Comer is successful and no one raises the cry of fraud. We have never had the slightest fear that Mr. Comer would be inimical to the railroads, he is a successful business man who knows that the railroads are essential to the advancement of the State, and while it is very necessary to see that they do not encroach upon their privileges, it is also necessary to grant them just and equitable rights. But the main point we want to make now is, that in a Democratic primary, with every influence against him, Mr. Comer comes out victorious, and the verdict of the people is accepted without a remonstrate voice.

THE New York State Democratic convention has instructed its delegation to the National convention at St. Louis to vote and work the nomination of Alton B. Parker for President of the United States.

EFFECT OF THE PRIMARY.

The recent primary operated to merge the party of the Populists with the Democratic party, and the two are now one. Says the Geneva Reaper:

"Many former Populists, seeing the absolute fairness of the new primary law, and having a desire to reunite with their old friends and neighbors, came in and voted in the primary. No questions were asked and no embarrassment followed. One old time Populist remarked jocularly that "the Democrats had been calling him a grand rascal long enough and that he was now coming back home," and he did. Many others came from different parts of the county."

Under no other plan could this much-desired consolidation of the white vote have been so efficiently and enduringly accomplished, for a Populite who voted in the primary considers himself in honor bound to act with the Democratic party hereafter. He is a Democrat, and as such he should be known and received.

The consolidation of the white vote of the state is desirable. The only whites left outside of the Democratic party are the Republicans, and precious good care is taken by themselves to limit their number to the federal offices to be dealt out.

The primary system becomes by the fact of consolidation imperative, because it keeps down factions and discontent, and it gives all an equal voice in the control of the party. Factions and cliques are impossible under a primary system fairly conducted—Age-Herald.

Consumption

People are learning that consumption is a curable disease. It is neglected consumption that is so often incurable.

The use of Scott's Emulsion at once, has, in thousands of cases, turned the balance in favor of health.

Neglected consumption does not exist where Scott's Emulsion is.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, April 18, 1904

There have been some excellent speeches made in the House of Representatives during this session by the Democrats, and, aside from those speeches made by the Hon. John Sharp Williams, who always makes a good one, the best that have been made and that will make excellent campaign material for the Democrats in the approaching campaign where those made by the Hon. Champ Clark, of Missouri, the Hon. Eaton J. Bowers, of Mississippi, and the Hon. Adam M. Byrd, of Mississippi. Mr. Clark, of Missouri, spoke entirely on the tariff question, and his speech may be taken as a clear and concise exposition of the Democratic position on that question. Mr. Clark is one of the hardest hitters on the Democratic side of the House, and he usually calls a spade a spade and does not mice words. He hit the Republicans some hard jolts in the course of his speech and they squirmed like a cut worm and attempted to rattle him by asking questions. They gained nothing, however, and he proceeded with his lambasting to their utter dismay and the delight of the Democrats. It was one of the strongest and most virile speeches made on the tariff question in years, and will be freely used as one of the campaign documents this summer.

Another good speech on the tariff question was the one made by the Hon. Adam M. Byrd, of Mississippi, and was devoted entirely to the manner in which the tariff affects the farmers in this country, and it will be read with great interest by them in this campaign. Mr. Byrd showed conclusively that the present apparent prosperity of the farmer did not come from the Dingley tariff rates, but from the failure of crops across the sea and a shortage in the world's supply of cotton and other crops. He also showed that this prosperity was more apparent than real, for the cost of living had increased more than thirty per cent. since 1897, which made it seem impossible for the present wave of prosperity to long to continue in the agricultural istricts unless the government comes to the rescue and reduces the cost of production by removing the tax from agricultural implements, machinery and other necessaries of life, the price of which is now only affected by the consciences of the heartless trusts organized and perpetuated by the theiving schedules of the tariff law. He showed up the fact that the percapita wealth of of Mississippi is only about $143, while that of Massachusetts is $1,419, and asked why it was that the farmer had been shackeled in poverty for the last fifty years while his manufacturing brother had prospered, and said that there could be no answer except that the one is being robbed to enrich the other, and that the Republican party is a joint heir to this legacy of shame.

He showed up the fact that the trusts were selling goods abroad cheaper than an at home, and that this method of robbing at home and underselling abroad, is rapidly revolutionizing the fiscal policy of England, which, if carried out according to the ideas of Joseph Chamberlain, will destroy the greatest market in the world for the products of the farmer in this country and absolutely impoverish him. This dire result will be brought about simply through the "stand pat" policy of the Republican party, and its refusal to revise and reduce the tariff schedules on the trust made goods. Mr. Byrd's speech was a splendid effort and brought forth the encomiums of his colleagues. It will be made a campaign document in the campaign, and will do much to make the farmer think of the miserable treatment he is, and has been receiving at the hands of the Republican party.

The best speech of the session on the negro problem was that recently delivered by the Hon. Eaton J. Bowers of Mississippi. It was the speech of a statesman, a deep student and a learned lawyer. It was made in reply to a speech recently made by Mr. Gillett, of Massachusetts, arraigning the South anent the negro. Mr. Bower's speech was temperate but forceful, and had the precision of a Kentucky rifle and the force and effect of a capias profine.

Another enjoyable day was spent at this place Sunday by many from different places. First, at 9 a m, Sabbath school 50 minutes, which was interesting to those who had been studying the previous day, and to many hearers also it was delightful. 10 a.m. intermission 10 minutes, then opening song by E. H. Mims, organist, Miss Mary tha Jane Mims, welcome address by Rev. W J. Armstrong. Then D D. Theus entertained the class 20 minutes, organist, Mrs. J. L Gore, followed by Prof. J. L. Gore 20 minutes, organist, Mrs. J. L. Gore, which was amusing to all to hear the sweet, gentle tone so soft and the instrument speaking the praises to God alone by the gentle touch of one who knew. Intermission 10 minutes. Preaching from the stand at 11 o'clock by Rev. W. J. Armstrong, which was undoubtedly the best of anything ever heard; subject of discourse, the King's business requireth haste. Recess for dinner and on to the beautiful pine grove a number went, and when dinner was spread on a nice table that had been created, thanks, by Mr. George Conville to God the giver of all good and perfect gifts. Dinner was served nicely in the misty grove and glad to say enough left to feed as many again, it reminded some of feeding the five thousand. 1:30 in the afternoon singing again, Prof. J. L. Gore entertained the class 30 minutes which was as beautiful and sweet as could be, organist Mrs. J. L. Gore, followed by S. R. Billingsley, organist Miss McGeehee, which was entertaining to the class. Intermission All called again by Rev. W. J. Armstrong. D. D. Theus entertained the class 30 minutes. organist Mrs. J. L. Gore, which was better again, followed Prof. J. L. Gore with same organist, which reminded the writer of the choir in the great beyond it sounded so sweet and low. And I imagine at the departing scene if we have so walked and lived according to the great command that on the fair banks of the other side we will be met by a band like this. I think it was the sweetest songs, the two last ones, that I ever heard and am sure every one can say as I do. Then dismissed and all wended their way homeward, and I am sure there are things I have not called to mind. We had several prayers by different ones during our services, and others made speeches, some on the singing school, some on the day, and how well they had enjoyed it

Man's Love Versus Woman's

By Helen Oldfield

THERE be some subject of never-ending discussion, all the more so, it would seem, because they are such as can by no possibility be definitely decided one way or another. Among these unprofitable questions few are more thoroughly and constantly thrashed out than this: "Which loves best, a man or a woman?"

To this there would appear to be but one answer. Feeling cannot be measured excepting by results, and even this measure is but partial.

Some men love more deeply than other men, more devotedly than some women, and vice versa. It seems the fashion of late to insist upon analyzing feelings and emotions, to strive to grasp the impalpable, to discuss men and women as though they were of different species instead of one flesh, members, all, of the same family. Humanity is much the same, male and female. At one time so wholly selfish that it thinks only of its own gratification, of its own trials, vexations and suffering; at another it will welcome the greatest sacrifices with the spirit of a martyr, will yield everything and endure anything for the sake of the beloved. It is truthful, yet suspicious; timid, yet bold; humble, yet arrogant. One moment it is reproachful and complaining, at another it pours forth praises and tender protestations. Weeping one hour and smiling and singing the next, no one knows what to expect of it nor what phase it may assume. All this applies as well to men as to women, and none can determine upon which side the balance sways lowest.

The balance of proof of strong and irresistible affection, as evidenced by desperate deeds, such as murder and suicide, is largely upon the masculine side of the ledger. But against this fact may be charged another—namely, that a man may, if he be so disposed, shout his love from the housetops. People may consider him a fool and suspect him of lunacy, but, since love is not infrequently accounted madness, he will have no such measure of scorn and contumely meted out to him as is the portion of the woman who openly parades an unrequited attachment. Tradition and custom are inflexible in demanding that she shall be silent in such case and hide her wound, however painful. It is as instinctive with a woman as with a wounded deer to creep to cover when hurt through the heart.

No one can dispute the fact that men often love devotedly and suffer cruelly from the inconstancy or heartlessness of women, but fate, here as in many other things, is on their side and against the woman. A man has many resources, chief among which is his business, for hard work is a sovereign antidote for mental troubles. He can get away from the familiar places which speak constantly of his sorrow, can make himself a new life and create a new atmosphere; while the woman, poor soul, must usually "stay put," with no chance of escape from her ghosts nor ability to seek "fresh fields and pastures new."

Woman's faith and unfaith, man's unshaken truth and man's contemptible treachery, these are to-day, as they have been from the beginning, the never-failing theme of poet and romancer, the threads interwoven with all human history, the underlying currents of life and love. Some ships are wrecked and others arrive safely at their desired haven, and none can prophesy beforehand which shall be saved and which shall be lost.

Every Man's Ear Tells the Story of His Life

By Loeb Weintrob

THE ear, to have any significance at all, must have the outer rim corresponding to the skull. Whatever point on the skull is more eminent, that part of the ear corresponding to it should be the most in evidence, and you will note that whatever group of faculties predominates, to those faculties does the whole ear point.

The principal thing to notice is the convolution inside of the ear, whether the ear protrudes from the head or is close to the same, and whether it is large or small.

If the convolution is well in evidence, healthy in color, and running parallel to the rim, you will always find keen intelligence.

If the rim of the ear is thick, turning over on the inner convolution, it denotes a thick skull. The brain has not yet fully expanded.

If the ear is shapeless, cramped up, or large and flaccid, either flat without any prominence inside, or the shape of a clam shell, and empty without any convolution, no matter how large the head, it has no capacity. It is a failure.

There is an ear that is often mistaken for a sign of the harmonious temperament. The rim has no particular point in evidence more than another—almost round. The interior of the ear is pretty well developed, but not very prominent and defined—rather meaty, and of a healthy color, with fair-sized lobes. The people who have such ears are at all times satisfied with themselves, and most of the time with everybody else. They are neither mental nor physical giants, and less so in a spiritual direction; but they strike a good balance between the individual who is in a tremendous hurry to go to Heaven and the one who is running post-haste to the other place.

The ear that has the upper part developed (judging from the opening, which is the centre,) and narrow at the base, without any indication of a lobe, indicates activity and industry in the direction in which the ear points, but those who have this ear suffer from malnutrition.

An individual with an ear like this must be judicious in the selection of his foods. The theory that to eat a potful of peas and be able to lift an ox, and to eat the ox and not be able to lift the pot of peas, may not be as foolish as it sounds, in their case.

Be that as it may, the diet of peas will not suit the people with a fair-sized lobe on their ears and a fair width at the base. The larger the lower half of the ear the keener is the relish for the good things of mother earth. Whether they will share their substance with others depends on how large the upper half of the ear is.

The perfect ears are those that have fair and shapely development, with a broad and prominent convolution running parallel to a fine rim all the way around, a fair-sized lobe and the cavity in the centre not obstructed. The whole ear is not too low toward the jawbone, nor too high up, of a good color and when viewed in profile with an inclination to point upward and forward.

When looked at from the front the inner convolution will be the most in evidence, with little of the points and lobe protruding. I do not expect you will know this ear at once when you see it, so I will tell its works, and you will know it thereby.

The owner of this ear will shake the whole world to establish justice, and a little harder for mercy. He will shake the trees of the celestial kingdom for the heavenly fruit, as well as the terrestrial, and more. He will move both places in order that all of the human family may eat their full share.—New York Journal.

If the Wrong Man Proposes

By Winifred Hall

HOW does a girl feel when the wrong man proposes to her? Ask the woman who knew herself what love meant, and then question the girl who had yet to be touched by Cupid's arrow. To this latter it is merely a trying time, with a certain romantic charm about it.

Probably it is a first proposal—that something that comes into the life of nearly every woman. It is enjoyed. Unexpected or not, there is a flavor distinctly novel and interesting about the experience.

It is amusing, too, she thinks, and she lingers over the thought of it until she realizes that she has to give an answer, and that, of course, she cannot think seriously of the proposal; she must say "No." This is not easy; the lover is persistent, begs her to think it over, to let him try again in a little while.

It is difficult to make the ardent lover realize that his love can never be reciprocated, and whether the man hovers around her or goes right away the girl has a trying time keeping the unpleasant part out of her mind. If she has tasted of love herself, the proposal from the wrong man means untold misery to a girl.

Perhaps it happens her own love is unreturned, unsought, unknown, and yet she sees a love equalling her own being poured out at her feet, and knows that by no will of hers can she take it up, caress it, and treasure it as all true love should be treasured.

She has to wound the man who would give his life for her, to gently crush out all the sweetness of his high hopes. To fail to do it completely would spell prolonged trouble to them both. Her task is difficult, but with an infinite tact born of pity, she will do what she knows to be right; she will send this lover away, and try hard to overcome the sadness that is left behind for her to battle with.—New York News.

Reminiscences of Fresh and Salt Water Fishing.

By W. F. SIBLEY.

Born of New England parents and living in Western Massachusetts until my seventeenth year, little or no opportunity presented itself for salt water fishing.

If results may be considered as being proficient in fresh water fishing, I certainly had some claim, as a boy, to knowing a thing or two about catching trout, as the strings of fish I brought home on every occasion when I could absent myself from school clearly demonstrated.

My outfit in those days, as I remember it, consisted of a grass laid line, possibly half a dozen trout hooks and an alder pole cut for each occasion at the brook's side. The proud distinction of owning a creel was something I looked forward to, but a small birch crotch stick served the purpose to string my fish on, and I don't know but full as well.

But if I am also to tell you something of my salt water experiences during the past fifteen or eighteen years, a single incident of the boyhood's exploits trout fishing will suffice to carry out my statement as to results.

About five miles from my home there was a small stream or brook known as the North Branch. It had its source in a swamp, wound in and out of the woods, brush and meadow land at the foot of rising ground and hills, until at last, after a five-mile course, terminated in a large lake.

It made little or no difference to me about fishing up or down stream, but as it was a shorter cut to the head of the brook, I usually commenced there, the brook at that point being scarcely a yard wide, running through meadow land.

I was always pretty sure of getting a fair number of trout in this meadow, as it was not fished so much as lower down stream, and a good start always gave me encouragement for the rest of the brook.

The day was overcast, and early I was on my way to the brook, striking in, as I usually did, at the source. My success was beyond expectation until I reached a small strip of woods, a mile or more down the brook, which terminated in a mass of brush and undergrowth. It was not until I discovered fresh boot prints along the soft bank, that it dawned upon me that, early as I was, there was some one ahead of me on the brook. However, I fished on until I came to the open meadow. There was conviction enough of my indifferent success—a man ahead, as I had thought, very carefully fishing that strip of meadow brook.

Disappointed, I seated myself on a large stone, under cover, to watch him for the time being and to think how I could get ahead. Yet I disliked to give up that strip of meadow brook, as there were always large trout there. I could plainly see that the man ahead was having fair success, as trout after trout found its way to his creel.

Suddenly he stopped. I guessed the cause, knowing almost every pool in the brook, and judged he was near a deep hole where dwelt a trout that had fooled me once or twice that season. To make a long story short, that man fished for that trout a full half hour at intervals, but gave it up, proceeded down stream and was soon lost to view. In turn I took up the ground he had fished over, picking up several good sized fish on my way to the scene of the fisherman's defeat. I got near enough to the pool to see a large trout sunning himself in the shallow water, and he saw me, I am quite sure. I was in no hurry to try conclusions, so, seating myself in the grass some distance from the brook, I baited my hook with fresh worms, winding the line lightly on the end of my alder until only a couple of feet hung from the end of my pole. Even then I waited some fifteen minutes before approaching the brook, finally doing so on hands and knees, until within casting distance, when I lay flat on my belly in the grass. An overhand cast, the bait strikes the centre of the pool, is seized almost immediately by a monster trout; a dextrous movement of the boy at the other end of the pole, and the biggest trout I ever took from that stream was writhing on the bank before me. It was a thrilling moment in more ways than one, and I was about the happiest youngster imaginable. There were some twenty odd trout on that birch string, and with this beauty to top out my catch, the day's fishing was over for me.

Curious to know how my rival on the brook was getting on, I took a cross cut to head him off, coming upon him just emerging from a clump of alders. Scarcely had we passed the time of day, before his eyes were riveted on the string of fish I carried, a volley of questions assailing me as to where I caught them, and particularly the big one at the top of my string.

Boylike, to his seeming chagrin, I related what I saw him try to do and what I had accomplished.

My story being told, the fish was put on the smallest scales I had ever seen at that time, produced by my chance acquaintance from one of the numerous pockets of a queer coat, and touched the fourteen ounce notch.

Be it to the man's credit there was no money offers for my big trout, but in lieu of a ride to the city, which, in our conversation, I had learned was his destination, and to a hungry boy the nice luncheon he gave me, the fish found its way to his creel without the asking.

Now comes the fairy part of the story, assuming that you have no reason to doubt the truth of what I have related. It was not long after this eventful day that a fine three-joint trout rod was delivered by express at my home, no doubt from my appreciative fisherman, but I never knew, as no card or letter accompanied it.

In 1876 the scene shifts from New England to New York City to engage in commercial life. Few were the holidays or outings accorded, as it was by constant application that I held my position for the next five years.

Sometimes in my Sunday strolls I had wandered to the docks in New York and there saw the gamins, yes, even men, fishing for porgies and having fair success. On such occasions my palms always itched to get hold of one of those lines the boys were using, but I never betrayed my feelings to them in the matter.

Next came the fishing bank excursions, but the boats were so crowded on Sunday, my only day, that after one or two successful trips I gave it up.

Time drew on apace. I had more liberty and money. A vacation of two weeks was also allowed me, which I divided up into day outings weekly, extending my vacation over the months of June, July and August.

From some companions I learned that Giffords, situated about midway of Staten Island, on that part of Raritan Bay known as the Great Kills, was a good place to locate if I was looking for salt water fishing. Accepting their advice, rods, reels and the necessary outfit was provided, a few lessons given me by the veteran, Mr. Fitzgerald, more popular as "Uncle Mike" among the fishermen, and I was fairly started on my salt water career.

Weakfish, bass and bluefish were the only game fish considered worth taking by "Uncle Mike," but I was satisfied at first to take almost anything that took my bait, and delighted if I caught a dozen weakfish. Later on I went in for number more than pleasure, for there was most always an empty basket waiting to be filled on my return.

Fish were plenty in those days and even up to the middle eighties. It was considered no great feat to take thirty or forty weakfish weighing from two and a half to four pounds each during a tide, but I honestly believe there were some men who either did not fish, or did not know how, for notwithstanding the fact above stated, they invariably came ashore "skunked."

The first stripped bass I ever took weighed about three pounds and was a disappointment from the fact that I was so intent upon catching weakfish, and weakfish only, that I am quite of the mind that I should have thrown it overboard had not a fishing companion prevailed upon me to keep it.

Later on, when I used lighter tackle and fished more for the sport than number, I could not hook on to a bass often enough.

It was in September, 1888, I think, that I surprised the natives and myself in taking from the Kills an eighteen pound bass after a half hour's struggle. This was an unheard of catch in those days, it having been some ten years previous that a bass of that weight had been taken in the Kills, so I went to the New York Sun office for a mention only of my catch, but the column article which the reporter devoted to it was so graphically written that it was widely copied by the newspapers and other publications like the Angler, and Forest and Stream. Right here allow me to tell you that Brother Harris, of the Angler, questioned the weight of the fish, or the claim made for me by the Sun, but I did not mind that. The fish weighed eighteen pounds then, and when I tell the story of its capture, etc., etc., to-day, that is what it weighed, never more or less.

Keeping everlastingly at it brings success, we are told. Well, I have been persevering enough in my efforts each four months of every season, but from a score of some 900 odd fish taken during the season of 1890, I have, with just as constant application and more hours, only been able to produce a score of 117 in 1903.

Seven years ago I fished from a Whitehall boat; since that time from a gasoline launch. Possibly it may make a difference, but I think not.

I have become so infatuated with salt water fishing that I do not think I could ever return to the now posted brooks of New England, seek of the owner a permit to catch a two-ounce trout, or do I think the streams of Nova Scotia, that held me captive for so many seasons, would to-day induce me to give up the prospect even of catching a few large weakfish, bass or bluefish.

The Paschal Candle.

In every Catholic church all over the world a "paschal" or Easter candle, made of purest wax, is blessed on Holy Saturday, the day before Easter, by a deacon, who fixes at its base five grains of incense in memory of the five wounds of Jesus and the precious spices wherewith He was anointed in the tomb.

From Easter until Whitsunday the paschal candle burns on the gospel side of the altar during mass and vespers, as a symbol that Christ, the light of the world, has risen from the grave.

Anciently the torch was a huge affair. One used at Canterbury, England, in 1457, weighed three hundred pounds. Another, at Norwich, was so high that it was lighted by means of an orifice in the roof of the choir.

PEARLS OF THOUGHT.

When life's all love, 'tis life; aught else 'tis naught.—Lanier.

Faith is the hand wherewith we take everlasting life.—Latimer.

Heroism is simple, and yet it is rare. Every one who does the best he can do is a hero.—Josh Billings.

And the servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient.—2 Timothy 2:24.

Never fear to bring the sublimest motive to the smallest duty, and the most infinite comfort to the smallest trouble.—Phillips Brooks.

"Do something every day that will allow you to feel at night that you have given some of your time and strength to the definite service of the Lord."

Because charity begins at home is no reason that it should be restricted to that limited sphere, of all the virtues she is the one who needs to have the most constant exercise.

It is worth realizing that there is no thing as commonplace life or uninteresting circumstances. They are so only because we do not see into them, do not know them.—Selected.

"Affectation in dress implies a flaw in the understanding. A faithful friend is the medicine of life. Affectation of wisdom often prevents our becoming wise. A fool's heart is ever dancing on his lips. A false-grounded hope is but a waking man's dream."

WILD LIFE OBSERVATION.

Most of Us Sees More or Less Than the Truth.

Good observers are probably about as rare as good poets. Accurate seeing—an eye that takes in the whole truth, and nothing but the truth—how rare indeed it is! So few persons know or can tell exactly what they see; so few persons can draw a right inference from an observed fact; so few persons can keep from reading their own thoughts and preconceptions into what they see; only a person with the scientific habit of mind can be trusted to report things as they are. Most of us, in observing the wild life about us, see less when our minds are dull, or preoccupied, or blunted by want of interest. This is true of most country people. We see more when we read the lives of the wild creatures about us in the light of our human experience and impute to the birds and beasts human motives and methods. This is too often true of the eager city man or woman who sallies out into the country to study nature.

The tendency to sentimentalize nature has, in our time, largely taken the place of the old tendency to demonize and spiritize it. It is anthropomorphism in another form, less fraught with evil to us, but equally in the way of a clear understanding of the life about us.—From John Burroughs' "On Humanizing the Animals" in the Century.

Clerks Please Note.

A good story is told of a very prominent man who lived in Newcastle 40 years ago, and who at that time owned wealth to a large amount.

He was very ignorant in all that books taught, but his learning was more like wisdom, and he knew what tree would make shingles by looking at it.

He had at the time of our story just completed a splendid new warehouse, and wanting a suitable clerk to take charge of it he advertised for one. Early next morning a candidate for the position presented himself, a rather flashy young man in appearance and the following conversation occurred:

"Young man, when you make a mistake in any of your books how do you correct it?"

The young man explained in a very profuse manner how he should proceed to make it all right.

"A very good way, no doubt, to do it," replied the old gentleman, "but I shan't want you."

Very soon another aspirant put in an appearance. A similar question was asked him, and in a long and eloquent manner he pointed out the remedy in all such cases. All the reply was:

"Young man, I shan't want you."

Several others dropped in during the day and to each one the same question was put, and they all had some smart way of covering up errors in their books.

Just at the close of the day a plainly dressed man, with a bright eye and a brisk step, called for the situation.

"Take a seat, sir," said the old gentleman. "I want to ask you just one question. When you make a false entry in your books, how do you go to work to correct it?"

Turning upon his questioner, a cold, sharp look, the young man replied:

"I don't make that kind of a mistake, sir."

"Ah, my dear sir, you are just the man I have been looking for all day," and a few moments after the man who corrected his blunders by not making them was installed in the office.

The Pastor and the People.

Take the whole range of activity and amusement which has, within a generation, swept into the various denominations under the name of "the institutional church." In response to whose initiative did that present itself? Pastors were, as a rule, averse to it, or dreaded it—often opposed it openly. But it entered church life resistlessly. Imagine a clergyman now trying to put a veto upon the manifold social and secular work that shelters itself today in the churches. He would find that there is a power not himself that makes for it. That is only an instance of the tides that rise and fall about him without his volition.—Rollo Ogden in Century Magazine.

Household Matters

The "Little Foxes."

Remember, it is the little foxes that spoil the vines, and, in like manner it is the little rips, rents and missing hooks, worn off buttons, ragged buttonholes and neglected stitches that spoil the neatness of our garments. These little neglects bring upon us, alas, the name of being untidy, badly dressed and shiftless. Nothing in the matter of one's garments is small; these little offenses against neatness, though apparent, but the careless combing of the hair, the dingy neckwear, the trailing shoestring, the wrinkled hose, the uneven hanging of the skirt, the general tossed appearance of everything we wear at our work. One does not go slipshod and untidy six days of the week without some rent or rip being torn from the garment of habit following after us on the seventh. Habitual untidiness cannot be hidden. If there is a rent or rip in the clothing it is much easier to mend at once than to wait until a patch is required. Often a stitch would have sufficed if taken in time. A rip or a rent never mends itself, if left to itself; no button ever sews itself, attaches itself to a garment. If we put away a garment needing only small repairs, is surely laying up trouble for another day, when, in an emergency, we have imperative need to wear. A few stitches in time may save us hours' work at a time when we can ill spare it, and in many cases the garment is rendered useless by additional mishaps because of our neglect.—The Commoner.

Washing Ribbons.

Women who study the subject of looking their best bestow the greatest amount of attention on their ribbons, wear, and keep their ribbons clean and fresh-looking by frequent cleanings and pressings. Many use gasoline for cleaning ribbons, and it does it readily, but is apt to leave a yellow tinge in delicate colored ribbons. There is nothing better for cleaning ribbons than a suds of soft water and castile soap. Wash the ribbon in this, but do not rub soap directly on the fabric, and after washing, rinse in two or three times in clear water. Ribbons must never be rubbed, and the best way to clean it is to place each piece on a smooth table and use a piece of the ribbon for a sponge, unless the ribbon is very stiff, when a small brush can be used to better advantage. The last rinse water should contain a little salt for delicate shades of pink, white, lilac and violet may be set with alum, using a small lump to a quart of water, and vinegar is good for the different shades of green. The best way to dry short lengths of ribbon is to press them smoothly over a clean window pane, and long pieces can be dried by stretching as smoothly as possible and laying them on a clean board. Even if the ribbon has not been wrinkled in the cleaning process, the pieces will dry perfectly smooth and will need no ironing. Black ribbon can be freshened by sponging with well strained cold coffee or with equal parts of alcohol and water, and if any stiffness is desired, rub the ribbon with thin gum arabic water and leave it to dry. Faded ribbons may be kept free from wrinkles by smoothing them out and each wearing and winding them on a roller, and there is nothing better for this than a small toy rolling pin which can be bought for a trifle.—Detroit Free Press.

Scotch Scones—To one quart of flour add four level teaspoonfuls baking powder; cut into this one-half cup of lard and one-fourth cup of butter; add one teaspoon of sugar, one egg until light and add to it two cupfuls of milk; toss this on a floured board; roll out half an inch thick, cut in three inch square pieces; fold each piece to form three corner pieces; bake on a hot griddle very slowly.

Vanilla Cream Stick—Boil two pounds of granulated sugar with half a pint of water, let it dissolve slowly, set in a cool part of the range, then add a large tablespoonful of vinegar and a teaspoonful of gum arabic dissolved in a little water. Boil until brittle, remove from the fire and flavor with vanilla, peppermint or cinnamon, and work quickly. Rub the hands with sweet oil or butter, and pull vigorously till the candy is white; twist or braid it, or pull into long, thin strips, and cut it off.

Baked Apple Pudding—Half a pound of pulp of apples, half a pound of sugar, four ounces of butter, the juice of lemon, four eggs, puff paste. Pare, core and cut up the apples, put them in a stewpan with only sufficient water to prevent them from burning and let them stew slowly until reduced to a pulp. Weigh the pulp and to every half pound add half a pound of sugar, the grated rind of a lemon and the well-beaten eggs. Beat these ingredients well together, then melt the butter and stir it in with the other ingredients. Put a border of puff paste round a pie dish, pour in the mixture and bake for rather more than half an hour.

It is a natural tonic and invigorator.

The annual estimate of the nation's drink bill shows a total retail cost of alcoholic and other stimulating beverages for the year ending June 30, 1903, to have been $1,451,633,379; the annual average for the past five years, $1,293,903,358. This shows an expenditure for stimulants of $18.15 for each of the 80,672,000 inhabitants, or $90.75 per family of five. The average annual cost for five years was $16.17, or $80.85 for each family. It is estimated that one-fourth of all the people using alcoholic beverages, on which basis each consumer of strong drink expends $62.16 every year to gratify appetite. The per capita cost of coffee, tea and cocoa is $2.61 every year against $15.54 for acholocic drinks.

Charles Blair, the oldest hack driver in Chicago in point of years as well as service, died Friday. He was 81 years old. For nearly half a century he had been a jehu in Chicago. Among those who were his patrons were Abraham Lincoln, General Grant, Stephen A. Douglas, Edwin Booth, Joseph Jefferson and other prominent men. Blair was the first man in the world to drive a sixteen-horse team.

WOMEN BREAK DOWN.

Sometimes women drift into a condition of "half invalid." Continual languor—all tired out, run down, backache, nerves shattered, headache, terrible pain, no appetite, poor digestion. In nine cases out of ten it's because the kidneys fail to do their work of filtering the poisonous system waste from the blood. The kidneys are weak and need the strengthening help of Doan's Kidney Pills. Read how these pills repair a weakened physical condition when this condition is caused by sick kidneys.

Mrs. Sadie Mettles, of 394 W. 4th Ave., Columbus, Ohio, says: "Prior to the year 1898 I suffered considerably from backache, pain in the head, languor and depression and weakness of the action of the kidneys. The pain was always worse in the morning and I felt miserable. I was induced to procure a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and I began their use. They proved prompt and effective. They cured me, and there has been no return of the trouble since taking them. I owe all the credit to Doan's Kidney Pills."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Mettles will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists, price 50 cents per box.

FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

To Use a Gas Range.

If the gas range is used and properly treated it is the greatest economizer of strength, time and fuel. The important thing to bear in mind is that matches are cheaper than gas. Don't leave a burner lighted because you will need it in five or ten minutes. Turn it off as soon as you are through using it, then light it again when you are ready.

Don't light up and then go on to fill your kettle or get out your frying pan. Have all in readiness before you light the flame. Don't use the large burners when the smaller ones or the simmerer will do just as well. Turn the burners down so as to use only what gas is needed. See that the flame is blue, not red. The red flame is wasteful, indicating imperfect combustion. If any of the burner holes fill up, clean them out with a wire or remove and boil in a solution of strong soda and water.

This last treatment cannot be given however, with the old style two-piece or cementer burners. Don't light the oven more than four or seven minutes before using. Longer is waste. Plan the baking and broiling so as to do as much as possible at the same time with the same flame.

If you want to keep anything warm in the upper oven simply light the oven lighter, and let that burn without turning on the gas in the oven burners.

Kitchen Neglect.

Why should kitchens be always built at the back of the house, where the grass is trimmed down and slop pails accumulate? Why have a back of the house, anyway, instead of two fronts, equally respected? The writer recalls in Georgia a long brick house, with three front doors, one of them the kitchen door; you could look straight through the house in pleasant weather, because there were three other doors facing the ones that looked over the bay.

The rose that was trained over the drawing room ran along to the kitchen and peeped in at the dear old mammy who sang there very often. To balance things, the peach tree that was trained, English fashion, on the sunny wall of the kitchen, extended its pliant branches to the dining room grape vines, says the Cooking School Magazine.

Parsley grew in the violet borders, the cream smelled of roses, and the flavor of peach leaves that shamed the druggists' product lingered in the cake.

The mistress could sit in the drawing room and see the children coming home from school, or guests driving up from either direction, and, consequently, a fresh handkerchief, and collar were always ready. Dicey in the kitchen could always see them, too; the cake was on the plate and Zeke was in his dress-coat when the door-knocker rapped. And no one in that house knew the front or the back thereof.

In was a kindly and original old Pennsylvania German who built a great sunny kitchen where the company room is generally placed, because, he said, "mother" spent nearly all of her time in the kitchen, and she should have the best. He gained praise in his county, but no followers.

Recipes.

Yorkshire Pudding.—Beat two eggs until light colored and thick; add one pint of milk and one level teaspoonful of salt; pour half of this on one and one-half cupfuls of sifted flour, then add the remainder; beat well and pour into a roasting pan; drop over the top three tablespoonfuls of dripping, in small pieces; bake forty-five minutes; serve with roast beef or roast lamb.

Potatoes au Gratin.—Put two tablespoonfuls of butter in a frying pan; when melted add two tablespoonfuls of flour; stir until smooth, then add one cup of thin cream and one cup of stock when boiling remove from the fire; add the yolks of two eggs, three tablespoonfuls of grated cheese, salt and a little cayenne; but a layer of sauce in a baking dish, then a layer of sliced potatoes, then more sauce; when four potatoes, cold boiled have been used, spread buttered crumbs over the top; brown in the oven.

Farina Jelly.—Soak one-half ounce of gelatine in one-half cupful of cold water; put one cupful of milk and three-fourths cup of sugar over the fire in an agate pan; stir until the sugar is dissolved; as soon as it boils add two tablespoonfuls of farina rubbed smooth in a little cold water, stirring a minute; cook until clear, add the gelatine and stir until dissolved; remove from the fire and when beginning to stiffen add one pint of whipped cream; turn into a mould and stand in a cool place; add one teaspoonful of vanilla extract when the farina is cooling.

Steamed Apple Pudding.—Make a biscuit crust with one pint of flour, two level teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one cupful of milk, half a teaspoon salt and two level tablespoonfuls of butter. Fill an agate pan two-thirds full with sliced apples, sprinkle over granulated sugar, a little grated nutmeg or grated lemon rind. Roll the dough on a floured board, wet the edge of the crust; place the pen on the edve of the crust; place the pan on the back of the range; cook for two hours. When ready to serve put a large platter over the pan, inverted. This will leave crust down and apples on top. Serve with lemon sauce.

Of the first seven presidents of the United States four were from Virginia, two of the same name from Massachusetts and one from Tennessee. All but one were 66 years old on leaving office, having served two terms, and one of those who served but one term would have been 66 years old at the end of another. Three of the seven died on the Fourth of July and two of them on the same day and year. Two of them were on the subcommittee of three that drafted the declaration of independence and these two died on the same day and year and on the anniversary of that declaration and just half a century after. The names of three of the seven ended in son, yet none of them transmitted his name to a son. The initials of two of the seven are the same, the initials of two others are the same and those of still two more the same. Of the first five only one had a son and that son was also among the first seven presidents.

No man who has filled the office of vice president has been elected to the highest place since Van Buren. Since Jackson's time only three presidents have been re-elected—Lincoln, Grant and McKinley—and only one, Grant, has served two full successive terms. Andrew Johnson and Theodore Roosevelt are the only two vice presidents who have succeeded re-elected presidents. If Mr. Roosevelt shall be elected this fall, he will be the first vice president to succeed to the first office after filling out the unexpired term of a dead president; he will be the first man ever elected by the republican party from east of the Alleghany mountains; and he will overturn a rule unbroken since 1836. If he shall be defeated he will become an ex-president—a younger man than General Grant was when he entered upon his duties as president, the youngest man ever elected to that office—at the age of forty-six years.

To be a successful wife, to retain the love and admiration of her husband should be a woman's constant study. Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Potts tell their stories for the benefit of all wives and mothers.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will make every mother well, strong, healthy and happy. I dragged through nine years of miserable existence, worn out with pain and weariness. I then noticed a statement of a woman troubled as I was, and the wonderful results she had had from your Vegetable Compound, and decided to try what it would do for me, and used it for three months. At the end of that time I was a different woman, the neighbors remarked it, and my husband fell in love with me all over again. It seemed like a new existence. I had been suffering with inflammation and falling of the womb, but your medicine cured that and built up my entire system, till I was indeed like a new woman.—Sincerely yours, MRS. CHAS. F. BROWN, 21 Cedar Terrace, Hot Springs, Ark., Vice President Mothers' Club."

Suffering women should not fail to profit by Mrs. Brown's experiences; just as surely as she was cured of the troubles enumerated in her letter, just so surely will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure other women who suffer from womb troubles, inflammation of the ovaries, kidney troubles, nervous excitability, and nervous prostration. Read the story of Mrs. Potts to all mothers:—

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—During the early part of my married life I was very delicate in health. I had two miscarriages, and both my husband and I felt very badly as we were anxious to have children. A neighbor who had been using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advised me to try it, and I decided to do so. I soon felt that my appetite was increasing, the headaches gradually decreased and finally disappeared, and my general health improved. I felt as if new blood coursed through my veins, the sluggish tired feeling disappeared, and I became strong and well.

"Within a year after I became the mother of a strong healthy child, the joy of our home. You certainly have a splendid remedy, and I wish every mother knew of it.—Sincerely yours, MRS. ANNA POTTS, 510 Park Ave., Hot Springs, Ark."

If you feel that there is anything at all unusual or puzzling about your case, or if you wish confidential advice of the most experienced, write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., and you will be advised free of charge. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has cured and is curing thousands of cases of female troubles—curing them inexpensively and absolutely. Remember this when you go to your druggist. Insist upon getting

"One of the most interesting times I have spent lately," said Lawyer Thomas A Curry, "is that I passed at the Farmer's Institute the other day. I learned more of farming than previously I had any idea of. Those lectures from the Auburn Agricultural Colleges gave us scientific ideas of farming, which added to practical knowledge, largely increases the prospects of success. The lecturers not only told us how to do things, but explained when and why we should do certain things. They told us how to use fertilizer, when to use fertilizer and what particular fertilizer was adapted for certain crops. Then they told us about cattle—breeds for milking, and breeds for beef, how a good Jersey for milk should be treated, and how a good Angus for beef should be fed. Some of the best farmers of Chilton were there and I have never seen a more interested audience in Chilton county. Hope we may soon have another institute."

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

THE NECESSARY MAGAZINE IN THE PRESIDENTIAL YEAR

The Review of Reviews is often called a necessity, in recognition of its usefulness in keeping readers "up with the times."

In Presidential election years the REVIEW OF REVIEWS is more than ever "the necessary magazine." Everybody wants to be truly and quickly informed about this or that public question that has forged to the front; to know about the new candidates and personal factors in politics, to have a complete picture at hand of the current movement of history.

In Dr. Shaw's editorials, in its authentic and timely contributed articles, in its brilliant character sketches, in its condensations and reviews of all the important articles of other magazines, and in its hundred a month of valuable portraits, witty cartoons, and interesting views, the REVIEW OF REVIEWS gives the most desired news of the world's and our own progress. "The World under a Field-glass" is the way one subscriber describes it.

Men in public life, like President Theodore Roosevelt, the members of Congress, and the great captains of industry, who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided it is "indispensable."

THE MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Sights He Saw, and Some He Saw Not.

The latest joke going the rounds is that the greatest loafer in town, a man who was never known to have done a day's honest work since he came to Clanton, is anxiously enquiring why the mayor and marshal do not enforce the vagrant act. Why, if they do make a start, he will be the very first one they'll get, sure!

O, the dust was something awful in Clanton Monday, and it was a blessing the rain came down that night. Gardens were suffering, and farmers who came into town were beginning to look blue. But the good Lord took compassion upon us, laid the dust in town, started garden truck to growing in fine style, and the farmer looks complacently at his crop making steady progress. "He doeth all things well."

A more innocent, and at the same time interesting, contest could hardly be devised than that now in progress to decide by vote "Who is the most popular young lady in Clanton?" Do you know? I don't, although I could mention a number of charming young ladies who may easily head the list, but I will take the counting of the votes to tell which one has the most friends. Such a contest as this puts a kindly feeling in the hearts of all; it makes the girls smile sweeter than ever (if that is possible); puts the young men on their gallantry to secure the largest vote for their particular favorite; [illegible] to find out if he has any [illegible] his miserable body; [illegible] the bashful widower to [illegible] and look around and hope [illegible] future; the little ones are [illegible] interested, and the old folks look proudly on and hope for the success of their particular loved one. Let the good work go on—this is a great contest.

Cheering news comes from Thorsby—the fruit crop is in fine condition and it is expected that some 25000 bushels of peaches will be shipped this season, the fruit being of fine quality. The settlers are beginning to reap the reward of their labor, and are demonstrating that the selection of Thorsby as a fruit raising country was a wise selection. "Rome was not built in a day," and it takes time to plant and raise fruit trees, but the harvest comes at last, and with no mishap the Thorsbyites will soon be in a flourishing condition. Good luck to them!

How uncertain is our tenure of life. It seldom occurs to the strong and healthy to think that at any moment we may be removed from this world, and when an apparently well person, in the prime of life, is suddenly stricken down, it comes as a shock, and causes the most unthinking to reflect that "In the midst of life we are in death." That an awful sudden ending it was of that good lady, Mrs. Burnett, last week. Leaving her home in the morning, with her husband, probably instructing her children what to do until she returned, and while making some purchases for her loved ones, the angel of death called her away, and in a few hours the happy wife and mother is carried back to the home now made desolate by her absence. Truly, we may be gone to morrow, we're only here to day."

Spring, Spring, beautiful Spring, why don't you come on, you backward young thing?

CORRESPONDENCE.

[We are willing to publish our subscribers views at any time, but it must be distinctly understood we do not hold ourselves responsible for these opinions.—EDITOR.]

Maplesville, Ala., April 22, 1904

Editor Banner—Please allow me space in your columns to express to my friends my heartfelt thanks for the interest they manifested in my behalf, in nominating me for Tax Collector of Chilton county. I highly appreciate the honor conferred upon me. If I am elected in November, I shall earnestly endeavor to serve you and all of the people of the county to the utmost of my ability. Again I must thank you for your confidence.

Very respectfully,
J. C. VEAZEY.

Wetumpka, Ala., April 25, 1904

Editor Banner—Sickness in my family has prevented my writing you at an earlier date, so I write you now to ask that you say to the voters of Chilton county, and of the 15th Judicial Circuit, through the columns of your paper, that I deeply appreciate the support given me in my candidacy for the Solicitorship.

While the majority of the votes of the Circuit were cast against me, I accept the decree of the people with true Democratic spirit, recognizing that in our form of govern ment the people are sovreign.

And I wish to say to them that my services are at their disposal for the good of the nominees and of the Democratic party.

Very respectfully,
F. LOYD TATE.

Clanton, April 25, 1904

Editor Banner—Please allow me space to thank my friends for their support in the Democratic primary of 11th inst.

I think that the campaign was conducted on the highest plane, not one word of mud slinging did I hear from beginning to the end; not a scintilla of undue advantage did I hear of one candidate taking of another. I know that I did not utter one word of disrespect of my opponents, and I never heard of either of them uttering a disrespectful word against myself. So taking it all the way through I am sure that the campaign offers us a lesson that the people might profit by. It only shows what the difference would be if the people were together in the Democratic party, one primary would settle all questions as to nominations, and settle it in kind and friendly manner, and the people would be saved the many unpleasant things that always follow in political campaigns where the people are divided. It does seem to me that there is no reason for our people to continue divided. Chilton is about the only county in the State that is divided and any man that will stop to think one moment can readily see the great disadvantage our people are in so far as the State is concerned, to say nothing of the unpleasant things in the county, and when we consider this state of things in Chilton, the answer is obvious, it is that a few men want office and nothing else. These men know that they are not standing for anything else, and they know that the position they take will continue a bad state of feeling, and they know that it is only a question of time when the people, through the Democratic party, will control Chilton county, and they know that it will be far better for the people when this is the case. But they fear their personal interest in the Democratic party, and it is nothing but selfishness and prejudice that continues this strife among our people. I believe that the time has come when the people of Chilton county will rise up and throw off this yoke of political prejudice and selfishness that a few office seekers and political jobbers are trying to fasten on them for another term of four and six years, and believing this I shall labor earnestly, honestly and faithfully to the day of the November election, hoping and believing that on that day the people will free themselves from a political state that has abuse of its neighbor for its watch word, a continuation of bad feelings in our churches and Sunday schools, and office its only object. I am in duty bound your obedient servant in the cause of right.

S. M. ADAMS.

Verbena, Ala., April 25, 1904

Editor Banner—I desire to say to my friends that I feel profoundly grateful to them for the interest they took in my behalf in the Democratic primary on the 11th day of this month. I feel that they represent the highest type of Southern Democratic citizenship in Chilton county. I again thank them for their support and assure them that I remain the same old Peg Leg.

New Cedron.

Please allow me a short space in your paper. I noticed sometime ago that we, as correspondents, were asked not to write foolishness, such as a visit from one neighbor to another. I quit, but it seems that I was the only one to heed, and so here I come again.

Farmers are getting along nicely with their work.

It is strange and very strange that the girls don't realize that this is leap year. I would be glad, for their benefit that they would go to work.

Mrs. Martha Jones is visiting relatives near Cane Creek this week.

Mr. J. F. Bone and his sister, Miss Canzada, visited Clanton Wednesday last. SUNSHINE.

New Salem.

Our community was saddened on April 21st by the sudden death of Mrs. Rebecca Burnett, wife of Joe Burnett. She left home with her husband for Clanton to do some trading, and while there was stricken down, and in a few hours lay a corpse. The next day she was laid to rest in the cemetery at New Salem. Mrs. Burnett was 48 years old, and for 26 years she lived a consistent church member. She was a Chfistian lady, a good neighbor, a loving wife and a fond mother. She leaves a husband and five children, of whom two are married, and a host of friends. We sympathize with the bereaved ones; we can only say put your trust in the all wise being who is able to heal the broken hearts.

The congregations were good, both Saturday and Sunday. Our pastor being sick was not with us therefore we had no preaching on Sunday, but had Sabbath school and delightful music conducted by Mr. Johnnie Gore and his charming young wife. We are proud of such young men as Mr. Gore and would say to Johnnie, to continue in the good work.

Prof. E. L. Dodson will close his school, April 29, after which he will return to his home in Fayette county. We regret that we have to give him up; while in our midst we learned to love him as a teacher and a Sunday school worker, and respect him as a Christian gentleman.

Mr. H. C. Martin made a flying visit to Greenville a few days ago on business and reports a nice time.

Maplesville.

The spring poets are yet raving over the beauties of nature and our good farmers are raving about the drought injury to their young crops.

Many of our good people attended the closing exercises of the Stanton High school, in charge of Profs. Jones and Speer, whose motto is "the best is yet to come." After attending the exercises I wondered the impossibility of there being any better suffice to say the exercises were most enjoyable to past criticism. It would be invidious to speak of the splendid training of the children, except little Ira Dunsmore, the born orator. If Providence permits, we think he is a second Henry Grady.

Mrs. Dr. Parnell has visited friends at Stanton.

Mr. Walter Shepherd of Cincinnati has been here on business.

Mr. E. Ensign is in New York on a business trip.

Mars Hill.

The health of this community is very good, and the farmers are getting along with their work fine, but we need rain to make everything grow.

Sunday school was well attended last Sabbath, and at the close of the school, Bros. E. G. Cofer and J. P. Gentry gave some good talks on the lesson, followed by J. N. Scott on the talents given to the servants, then was dismissed until two o'clock, when the people returned for singing, which was enjoyed by many. Quite a number from Providence and Jemison attended the singing; come again, we are glad to have you with us.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, is narated by John Oliver of Philadelphia, as follows: "I was in an awful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite, growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Then I was advised to use Electric Bitters; to my great joy, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents, guaranteed, at Clanton Drug co., Hopkins Drug co.

The British Government, through its Consuls in foreign countries, is discouraging emigration to Cape Colony, on the ground that trade conditions there are unfavorable to all except persons of ample means or those who have certain prospects of immediate employment.

Professor Bailey, head of the statistical department of Yale University, declares that New England towns are degenerating. He advises young women to leave their home towns to marry — thus avoid intermarriage, which is causing the degeneracy, he asserts.

The largest number of women employes in any line of work are in the United States Postoffice Department. More than one third of them are past middle age, and some are past seventy. They fill all kinds of positions, even many of the rural free delivery routes being filled by them.

The magistrates of the city of Bilbao, Spain, have passed an ordinance forbidding the ringing of church bells, in penalty of $5. "This noise," the ordinance says, "is dangerous to the sick and annoying to the healthy; it may have had its uses formerly, but it is out of place in a modern city."

A "Woman's Domestic Guild" has been organized in Chicago with the object of solving the "domestic" problem. When women will go to work in their own homes instead of organizing societies to discuss the servant question, the problem will solve itself. Men do not scorn to work for others. Why should women have such a fear of housework?

Against this subordinate sway of savagery—this proposition to rule little children by terror and by pain—the Medical Record most emphatically protests. The whip inspires terror of itself and not of the crime; its physical effects, quite aside from the pain engendered, are bad and may be deplorable; its moral influence is shameful and degrading.

A new regular service of passenger steamships is to be established between Scandinavian ports and New York and Boston. This will be heartily welcomed by intelligent supporters of American prosperity. Our Scandinavian friends, as a rule, are not mere fleeting birds of passage, like some other immigrants. Most of them come here to stay and to become American citizens, and do not desert this country when they have saved a little money.

The following tale, doubtless apocryphal, is told of the Bishop of London. Having indulged in that precious pastime of asking any small boy or girl in the audience to ask him a question, Dr. Ingram was met by the following: "Please, sir, why did the angels walk up and down Jacob's ladder when they had wings?" It is said to record that even the Bishop of London was driven to make the usual humiliating and miserable escape by returning: "What little boy or girl would like to answer this?"

Says the Cleveland Leader: The best authorities estimate the price paid for dishonestly made or sold food at $100,000,000 a year. It is believed that ninety-nine per cent. of this great sum is spent for food which is fraudulent, but not harmful. That leaves $10,000,000 paid every year for dishonestly concocted food preparations which are either poisonous or distinctly hurtful to those who unwittingly use them. It is a monstrous thing that nearly $30,000 a day should be spent for hidden poisons and noxious substitutes for good food. Red lead is used in making bogus cayenne pepper. Out of forty-one samples of that condiment examined by the Massachusetts Board of Health, no less than forty were fraudulent. Candy is often colored with deadly lead chromate. Of ninety-two samples tested in Massachusetts, eighteen were poisoned in that manner. Marble dust is sometimes found in confectioners' sugar. Compared with such frauds, the more commonly known and glaring food humbugs, such as the sale of young American herrings as French sardines and the marketing of great quantities of oleomargarine as butter, are of little importance. They do not trifle with life and limb.

MR. HEFLIN RESIGNS

Will Vacate the Secretaryship of State on May 1.

Secretary of State Heflin filed his resignation with the governor, to take effect May 1st. The special election for congress will be held on May 9th to fill the unexpired term, and after then Mr. Heflin will go to Washington, should congress stay in session, to represent his district. The governor will be notified by wire of the resignation.

Boy Run Over.

Three little boys, Leslie Hatcher, Angie Douglas and George Douglas, were run over by a negro drayman at Bessemer, and Angie Douglas was seriously injured, the heavy dray passing over his body and bruising his shoulders badly. It seems that the boys were standing in the street waiting for a car. The negro driver was also watching the car and drove over them before he became aware that they were in the way.

E. M. Carwile was found guilty of the murder of P. H. Snow, of Boaz, last winter and sentenced to life imprisonment. Snow was a business man of Boaz and he and Carwile had some dispute about a mortgage, and Snow was shot in the public road while Carwile was near by with his gun. Carwile says Snow shot himself accidentally.

Store Burned.

At Cullman, J. W. Sparks' store was burned down with all its contents, consisting of a stock of general merchandise valued at $9,000. There was $6,000 insurance on the stock. The origin of the fire is not known, but robbery and incendiarism are suspected.

AMONG LAWMAKERS

At the Seat of Government at Washington.

APRIL 22D.

The general deficiency bill occupied the major portion of the senate's time, but before it was taken up Mr. Gallinger spoke on the tariff policy of the republican party. While the reading of the deficiency bill was in progress, Mr. Cullom delivered a speech on the house Chinese exclusion rider.

During the day the attention of the senate was brought to the amendment of the house to the bill for the government of the canal zone and some embarrassment was created by naming Mr. Gorman as a democratic conferee on behalf of the senate in place of Mr. Morgan, who is the senior democratic member of the committee on interoceanic canals, with the result that both senators declined to serve. Senator Gorman in declining stated that the place rightfully belonged to Senator Morgan as the senior senator of the minority on the committee. The president of the senate then appointed Senator Morgan, who promptly resented the discourtesy by flatly declining to serve on the committee.

The house considered private pension bills and two hundred and thirty-three were passed in forty-five minutes. A conference was ordered on the bill to provide a temporary government for the Panama canal zone. Messrs. Hepburn of Iowa, Levering of Massachusetts and Adams of Georgia being appointed conferees on the part of the house.

The president was severely criticised by Mr. Kitchin of North Carolina, who included in his castigation General Grosvenor. He declared that the president had insulted the people of the south by saying in one of his publications that throughout southern character there ran a streak of brutal barbarism. He openly charged the president with being the advocate of lynch law and quoted from one of the president's books to sustain his assertion.

APRIL 23D.

The general deficiency appropriation bill was passed by the senate, leaving only one of the appropriation bills unacted on by that body. A number of amendments were adopted, among them one limiting the Chinese exclusion legislation to a reaffirmation of the exclusion laws of 1902 and other existing exclusion laws. An amendment which was acepted was that excluding Chinese and other aliens coming in as a result of agreements between other countries and a steamship company, having special reference to a contract between the Cunard line and the government of Hungary to supply 30,000 emigrants annually to the steamship company. About 200 private pension bills were passed during the day.

In the house speeches were made by Representatives Hepburn and Cochran and sharp retorts proved features of the session.

A bill was passed for the "protection of the public forest reserves and national parks in the United States." The bill for the commission to investigate the merchant marine was taken up by General Grosvenor. The house concurred in the senate amendment to a bill for a lock and dam in the Tennessee river at Chattanooga.

The house was in session for over five hours Sunday for the purpose of paying tribute to the memory of the late Senator M. A. Hanna, the late Representative C. W. Thompson, of Alabama, and the late Representative W. W. Skiles, of Ohio. Tributes to the memory of the late Mr. Thompson were paid by Representatives Wiley, Underwood, Clayton, Burnett and Bowie, of Alabama; Littlefield, of Maine; Thomas, of North Carolina; Bailey, of Illinois; Conner, of Iowa; Padgett and Gaines, of Tennessee, and Patterson, of North Carolina.

APRIL 25TH.

Whether the president shall order the construction of the battle ship provided for in the naval appropriation bill, or wait until the war in the far east demonstrates the comparative ability of the big sea fighter and the torpedo boat or submarine craft, was a question raised in the senate by Mr. Hale, of Maine, on the adoption of the conference report.

Mr. Bacon discussed trusts, replying to the recent speech of Mr. Dolliver. He devoted the greater portion to conditions which make it possible for American products to be sold abroad for a less price than American consumers are required to pay.

The military academy bill, the last of the general appropriation measures, was under consideration at the hour when memorial services for the late Representative Thompson, of Alabama, were begun.

Mr. Bacon read a letter from Charles Schwab to Mr. Frick giving the cost of manufacturing steel rails, which Mr. Bacon said showed that the "trust" needed no protection against English steel manufacturers. The letter said rails could be sold at a profit at $16 per ton.

"It will be very difficult to convince pig iron producers of Alabama and surrounding states, who have been receiving $18 and $20 for their iron," said Mr. Aldrich, "that the statement is correct."

"That is information given by Mr. Schwab in a private letter," said Mr. Bacon.

"I don't care how private it is," claimed Mr. Aldrich, "he can be mistaken as well as any one—what he states there is absolutely untrue and absurd."

The house passed a large number of bills, including the Alaska delegate bill. The bill to authorize the construction of a light house and for signal station at Diamond Shoal, N. C., occasioned a long debate, but finally passed without division.

An objection to a request by Mr. Grosvenor for leave to print brought a mild protest from him, which aroused Mr. Gaines, of Tennessee, who charged that Mr. Grosvenor had printed everything in the Record about President Roosevelt which the president did not do.

The house insisted on its disagreement with the senate on the amendments of that body to the emergency river and harbor bill, and Messrs. Burton of Ohio, Dovener of West Virginia, and Bankhead of Alabama, were appointed conferees.

Congressional Appropriations.

Chairman Hemenway, of the house committee on appropriations, in a statement compiled under his direction, gives the total of all supply bills (subject to slight changes in pending bills) as $597,862,324, to which must be added $84,971,820 for interest on the public debt. The estimated revenues are $704,742,060. By these figures the expenses are $22,000,000 less than the revenues. The estimates of the various government departments, on which the appropriations bill was based, exceeded the total estimated revenues by $42,845,862. No river and harbor bill making provision for new projects of improvement in the rivers and harbors of the country was undertaken. Likewise, no omnibus measures, carrying provision for public buildings, were allowed to pass.

Pay for Canal.

The state department has been notified of the conclusion in Paris of the contract for the sale to the United States government by the Panama Canal company all of its franchises and property on the isthmus. The money for the canal company will be paid over by the secretary of the treasury, it is understood.

Secretary Hay himself will pay to Panama the $10,000,000 to which it has become entitled. This payment will be made in Washington to Senor Morasemena, the newly appointed minister from Panama, as soon as the government authorizes him by cable to accept the money. The authorities in Panama have become clamorous for this payment, as the money is needed to defray certain expenses already incurred.

Following closely in the lead set by Great Britain, the United States government has decided to use some of its oldest vessels for target practice, for the drilling and experience of the gunners and officers on our modern war vessels. The first vessel to be put to this use is the old civil war monitor, the Montauk. It is proposed to put her through such repairs and changes as will better prepare her for the battering she is to undergo. Armor will be placed on her as heavy as she will carry. The shooting will be done in as shallow water as possible, and when she sinks the holes will be patched and she will be put through the same operation over and over again until she falls to pieces. The old monitor is one of the first of this class of vessels. She has undergone many engagements. Torpedoes have been fired at her and heavy ordnance has directed its missiles at her single turret, but she still floats.

Senator Hanna and seven members of the house have died during the fifty-eighth session, namely, Representatives T. H. Tongue of Oregon, Vincent Boreing of Kentucky, R. H. Foerderer of Pennsylvania, Henry Burk of Pennsylvania, W. W. Skiles of Ohio, G. W. Croft of South Carolina, and C. W. Thompson of Alabama.

T. H. Ball, of Texas, resigned. His place is filled by J. M. Pinckney. George B. McClellan, of New York, resigned and was succeeded by W. Bourke Cochran. Charles Dick, of Ohio, resigned to succeed Senator Hanna in the senate. George Howell, of Pennsylvania, was unseated in favor of William McConnell, and J. A. Shafroth, of Colorado, resigned in favor of R. W. Bonyge, who contested his election.

General Kuropatkin, it is believed, is destined to become commander-in-chief of all the emperor's forces, both military and naval, in the far east.

Admiral Alexieff may remain there for some time as viceroy, but his reign is considered practically ended.

While Alexieff and Kuropatkin on fairly good terms harmonious relations between Vice Admiral Skrydlov and the viceroy are considered impossible, and with the three enjoying independent commands, it is regarded that friction ultimately would be bound to arise which might endanger successful operations. Skrydlov and Kuropatkin on the contrary are warm personal friends.

Kuropatkin has sent a large portion of Rennekampff's cossack cavalry across the upper reaches of the Taitse and a considerable force of cavalry which crossed the Tumen at the same time is moving down to the sea west to effect a juncture with it. Together with this force, which is believed totals 2,000 men, he will threaten Inouy's left flank, when the Japanese are ready to cross the river down on the Yalu.

Dismissed the Captain.

The courtmartial of the captain of the cruiser Boyarin, which struck a mine February 13th, has brought out facts hitherto unprinted. According to the testimony adduced the Boyarin sighted a vessel in the fog off Port Arthur February 12th and a duel occurred between the two which lasted fifteen minutes. Both vessels were damaged. It was later discovered that the enemy was also a Russian and was the Yenesei. The latter vessel later struck onto a mine and was destroyed. The Boyarin gave her crew no aid. Subsequently the Boyarin also struck a mine. The crew escaped, but the captain failed to secure her by a hawser and the Boyarin drifted out to sea and was lost. In his defense the captain produced a letter from the dowager empress congratulating him on his courage in saving the crew of his vessel. Owing to the letter the czar did not condemn the captain, but merely withdrew his permission to serve in the future.

MINES IN THE NEVA

Proved to be Powder Packages Dropped Under the Ice.

Some excitement was caused by a report that mines had been discovered at the mouth of the River Neva where they had been placed by the Japanese to blow up the ships when they leave the works at St. Petersburg from Cronstadt to receive their guns. The report grew out of the sighting of four floating powder cans. These were recovered and turned over to the police authorities, who on making an examination found the cans to contain powder manufactured by a Russian factory. They were part of a lead of powder which was transported in a cast to Cronstadt more than a year ago and were dropped under the ice.

Rich Japanese are collecting money to send large batches of actors and geisha girls after the army to amuse the soldiers. "If our poor soldiers have something to laugh at and enjoy after a day's heavy marching or battling, it will do them the world of good," is the argument. The mikado has been petitioned to allow actresses and geisha girls to travel with the navy, but Admiral Togo refused. He said his boys were too busy acting themselves to need the tonic of mimicry. All the actors and actresses sent after the army belong to the comic line of business.

The Russian capital is agog with reports of possible mediation between Russia and Japan through King Edward as a result of Edward's visit to Copenhagen. Russia has made a new issue of $15,000,000 in paper currency against free gold in the state bank. At the ministary of finance it was explained that it was an ordinary issue and in no sense was forced. In the state banks there are in round figures $400,000,000 in gold, which would permit of an issue of $550,000,000 in paper, but the paper issue at present only amounts to $350,000,000.

It has been definitely decided to send the Russian squadron in the Baltic sea to the far east. There has been considerable hesitation regarding the dispatching of this squadron to the seat of hostilities. Once it was decided to send the fleet, but afterwards the advisability of such a move was questioned by the authorities. A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

A DISCOURSE ENTITLED "ULTIMATE AMERICA."

A Patriotic Address by the Rev. J. Alexander Jenkins, Pastor of Immanuel Congregational Church—This Country the Spiritual Teacher of the Nations.

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—In Temple Israel the Rev. J. Alexander Jenkins, pastor of Immanuel Congregational Church, delivered an address to a large audience on "Ultimate America, the Spiritual Teacher of the Nations." He said among other things:

It is a commonplace of the newer thinking that the evolutionary process culminates in the soul of man, the whole mighty movement being satisfactorily explained, according to the thinking of the theistic evolutionist, when matter endowed with life and perfected through countless generations, has at last given to the mind of the human being the instrument for the elementary exercises of its endless life. The struggles of the ages are justified in the soul. The student of history is perplexed as he hears the groanings and witnesses the travailings of the nations through the centuries, and his natural and legitimate query, as he beholds the rise and fall of nations, is: Where lies the goal of the peoples and what justifies the toils and agonies of the race? The answer to this inevitable question is this: Almighty God is leading the nations toward the goal of the highest life, and the struggles of the ages find justification in the birth of the world-soul. And if the fact that God breathed into man's nostrils the breath of life, so that he became a living soul is sufficient recompense for the bloody brute battles of the world's gray dawn, the thought that He will breathe a soul into the nations should likewise be deemed ample compensation for the gropings and grapplings of the aspirants for national permanency and supremacy.

The American colonists were not the first men to fight for independence, but the motives that produced the Declaration of Independence made their fight epoch marking as no other fight had ever been. Other nations had given up slavery, but no nation was ever before called upon to furnish so awful a proof of sincerity of motive in striking the shackles from the limbs of the enslaved. Other nations have had to deal with the problem of undesirable aliens, but no nation ever felt as feels America the imperativeness of a course of action based upon righteousness and justice. Other nations have seized the territory of the weak and helpless, but none has felt such deep, unselfish solicitude for a dependent people as has characterized our country in her dealings with a primitive people committed to her care as the outcome of her intervention in the interests of humanity. Other nations have had to effect adjustments between employer and employe, but no nation has ever been called upon to effect such an adjustment when the conditions presented revealed so clearly the fact that a great principle of universal importance is involved. The settlement of the "labor problem" in democratic America means the setlement for the world, for here the employer of the highest type meets the worker of the highest type, and the final result will be in keeping with the character of the contestants.

So we are learning the lesson of deliberateness; and one of the most promising signs of the times is the tendency to deal with great questions cautiously and calmly. The result of this course will be that what the new America settles will stay settled. She will settle, and that for all time, the question of the rights of inferior peoples, the question as to the character of the education most to be desired, the question of the relation of employer to employed. America is to-day solving the accumulated problems of the ages. And God is willing that she should have time to complete her task.

In view of what has been said, it will strike us as a fact of solemn import that our country is preparing for her yet larger service through the slow, constant development of her religious consciousness. The existence and growth of this consciousness the superficial observer of our life and institutions might feel inclined to deny. Nevertheless, we are convinced that this most necessary condition for present and future leadership exists.

Where shall we seek for this religious consciousness? Shall we look for it in the institutions set apart as avowedly religious? No man has the right to scoff at organized religion. Our schools, our churches, our synagogues are, on the whole, true to their mission. But the truly effective religious consciousness must be found in other places as well—in the editorial sanctum, in the political gathering, in the mart and the busy street. Let us find this consciousness in these places, no matter what its form, and we shall have as good a guarantee of the divine favor as though we had gazed upon overflowing houses of worship and listened to the eloquence of the elect. The religious spirit which makes for American pre-eminence may be discerned in many phases of the national life, but it is strikingly evident in the new press, the new politics and the new social ideal. There are many, doubtless, who would not concede that the press of the country furnishes an evidence of growing national righteousness, but the fact remains, that in the newspapers of our land there is a distinct trend toward righteousness and godliness.

The truthfulness and force of our present contention will seem to many hard to reconcile with the well-known fact that in the United States the avowedly religious journals are steadily losing ground. But even this fact, rightly interpreted, is not an evidence of national decay. The religious papers of to-day have a choice between degeneration and evolution. The signs of degeneration are stubborn adherence to denominational shibboleths, fierce championship of exhausted dogmas and growing impatience with progressive interpretation of truth. The signs of evolution are the throwing overboard of useless issues, and the adoption of the leading features of the great "secular" papers. The great religious papers of the country to-day are such in name only. Were the contents of one of these papers rearranged and printed in newspaper form it would pass as a newspaper, minus the newspaper's up-to-date freshness. In the secular press, on the other hand, there is steady progress and increasing vitality. The moral tone of the American people is reflected in the new journalism, and the fact that the citizens of the republic desire righteousness is patent to all who seek the underlying motives of journalistic enterprise of the highest type. And this fact is most significant when we remember that these great agencies of publicity, free discussion and education have a direct bearing upon the shaping of the ideals of the inflowing millions of our population. The spirit of the American journalism is communicated to the Americanized representatives of these foreign peoples, and they in turn give it to their dependent fellows through the columns of their publications. We have no right to assume that papers published in foreign tongues stand for Old World anarchy; we should, the rather, heartily concede the fact that these journals, printed in Italian, German, Hebrew, Welsh and other languages, constitute a great missionary agency for doing foundation work in Americanism and altruism. Indeed, the very fact that our citizens in the making eagerly grasp these informing agencies is a prophecy of great things to come. We have here no isolated, lethargic, self-satisfied aggregation of human beings, but we have millions of men who are being inspired by the air of a free country and by her institutions. The newspapers in the hands of these men are as banners waving encouragement to faraway nations lying in darkness and distress.

When we come to speak of the new American politics we invite the ridicule of those who see in American politics at its best only a crude "shirt-sleeve diplomacy," and at its worst a contemptible system of lust and graft. And the self-satisfied critics of our political life ignore their own inconsistency in that they expect a government which they take pains to tell us is "only an experiment" to run with the smoothness of an old governmental machine. The man who is content to live in a primitive cabin, subject to the limitations of a semi-barbaric life, may have tranquility and peace of a certain kind, but he should be the last person to scoff at the man who is battling against heavy odds for better and more adequate accommodations. As a nation we are building the better house. We have found that it costs labor and blood to secure the site for our edifice, that our material, cut from the forests of the Old World, is rough and unseasoned; that sometimes our workers fail to enter unselfishly into the spirit of the enterprise. We at times discover, too, that we have not followed correctly the plan of the great architect, and then it becomes necessary for us to humble ourselves by tearing down part of the structure. But, after all, the building grows, and its proportions already begin to challenge the admiration of the world. The critic, as he sits at the cabin door of monarchy or aristocracy, begins with vague alarm to contrast the cracked and crumbling walls and the leaking thatch of his abode with the rising mansion in the distance.

The nation's social ideal makes inexorable demands upon every citizen of the republic. The world of to-day marvels at the matchless benefactions of our men of wealth, and the nations are asking why it is that this unprecedented philanthropy is so peculiarly American. It is due to the imperative claims of our social ideal. Public sentiment demands, and men of wealth recognize the demand as just, that private wealth should be spent for the good of the nation and for the good of the race. The educator feels the same pressure. He hears the voice of the people summoning him to a free search for truth. The true labor leader recognizes the same stern call to service; so he becomes a mediator, an arbitrator between two great forces. The old story in the good Book tells us that a Babel a mighty calamity befell the race—that there the speech of mankind became confused. In this land of ours Babel is reversed. The nations are here assembled to build the greater tower of truth, and the confusion of the Babel tongues gives place little by little to a new language, the language of love, spoken by the toiling millions, so that in a sweeter, grander sense than ever before it is to be true that the whole earth shall be "of one language and of one speech."

Thales of old, with so shadowy a conception of God that we know not whether to classify him as atheist or as theist, yet strangely conceived of deity as creating the great world temple and so possessing it as to reveal in its every part the presence of the Creator. The world of our time may seem strangely indifferent to that presence of God which the seers of the race feel to be the most tremendous fact of life. But the world will not remain forever content with mere things. The time is to come when the nations must feel the Divine Presence. When that time comes the cry of the peoples will be, "Wherewith shall we come before the Lord?" God grant that in that solemn day of the world's supreme need it may be granted unto us as the teacher of the nations to shout the great reply: "He hath showed you, O nations, what is good; and what doth the Lord require of you but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with your God."

Resisting Power.

When a physician is called to a case of severe illness, the first thing that he estimates is the resisting power of the patient. The chances for his recovery are in proportion to his vitality. If there be little of that at the outset there is small hope of overcoming the disease. The resisting power of persons in full health is such that in an epidemic they throw off the disease germs that prostrate others. One cannot always tell from appearances just how much ability one has to withstand the inroads of a malady. Some who apparently are robust almost immediately succumb, while others who look frail recover from violent attacks. Of course, dissipation, unhygienic living, unhealthful surroundings sap one's resisting power, so that when a virulent ailment makes an attack one has strength insufficient to fight it off.

You see that it is not so much the malignancy of the disease as it is the vitality of the man that determines the result. Just so it is also in the moral world. There are some persons living lives so upright, so spiritually healthy, that they are practically immune from temptation. And when they are overcome, they soon discover themselves, for their power of resistance is great. On the other hand, there are those who after succumbing to one temptation are completely swept away by the power of evil. How can that be accounted for? Obviously in the same way that the ability to resist physical disease is to be explained. There has been unwholesome moral living; the mind has been permitted to become familiar with evil thoughts; the soul has breathed in miasma and corruption until one has no ability to put away temptation.

All this suggests the need of resisting power both against disease and against sin. A pure, clean, wholesome life, physical and moral, will make one secure against any harm that either can do.

Always at Our Side.

Mrs. Lucy Rider Meyer, the well-known deaconess and writer, says:

"A busy woman entered her own room as twilight shades were falling—went directly to her desk, turned on the gas, and began to write. Page after page she wrote. The solitude became oppressive. She wheeled her chair around and with a shock of joyful surprise looked squarely into the face of her dearest friend, lying on the lounge at her side. 'Why, I didn't know you were here!' she cried. 'Why didn't you speak to me?' 'Because you were so busy. You didn't speak to me.' So with Jesus—here all the time. The room is full of Him, always ready to greet us with a smile—but we are so busy. But when the solitude grows oppressive we suddenly turn, and lo, He is at our side. We speak to Him and He speaks to us, and the soul's deepest yearnings are satisfied."

Men Wanted.

There is nothing we are so much in need of in our city and country as holy men. When we think of the "epidemic of crime" that alarms us, the social depravity that disgusts us, the commercial dishonesty that startles us, we wonder if with our opulence in material resources and our spread of educational advantages, we are growing men, true men, as we ought.—Rev. John Thompson, Methodist, Chicago, Ill.

Joy That Helps.

Christian joy is an experience of great depth and solemnity. It never overlooks the sadness and sternness of life; it is never shallow or unreflecting; it is restrained, tender, sympathetic, confident. We know it when we see it in the face of any whom we love; it helps us.—H. J. Campbell.

Be at Your Best Always.

God's will comes to thee and me in daily circumstances, in little things equally as in great. Meet them bravely. Be at your best always, though the occasion be one of the very least. Dignify the smallest commonplace by the greatness of your response.—F. B. Meyer.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR MAY 1.

Subject: Prayer and Promises, Luke xi., 1-13—Golden Text, Luke xi., 9—Memory Verses, 11-13—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. Christ teaching His disciples to pray (vs. 1-4). 1. "Was praying." It was the habit of Christ to pray. Many instances are referred to in the gospels besides the general statement in Heb. 5: 7. "When He ceased." Perhaps He was praying such a powerful prayer as to arouse the feeling that they knew not how to pray, and needed to be taught. "Teach us to pray." They knew that prayer was important, and they had a desire for ability to pray aright. "As John also taught." Each new dispensation may not only have its new unfolding of truths, but its new revelations may open new modes of access, and new topics of prayer and modes of worship. A different prayer was offered in the Mosaic ritual from the patriarchal form. John opened up a new scope of prayer, and this new dispensation requires of Jesus to get the range of prayer in accordance with the new range of truth, and the new position of man with God.

2. "Say." The beauty and value of the lessons in the Lord's prayer arise from: 1. The tone of holy confidence, it teaches us to approach God as our Father (Rom. 8: 15), in love as well as holy fear. 2. Its absolute unselfishness, it is offered for all the brotherhood of man. 3. Its entire spirituality; of its seven petitions, one only is for any earthly boon, and that only for the simplest. 4. Its brevity and absence of all vain repetitions (Eccl. 5: 2). 5. Its simplicity, which requires not learning, but only holiness and sincerity for its universal comprehension. For these reasons the Fathers called it the "epitome of the gospel" and "the pearl of prayers." "Our Father." An expression of love and condescension. Here are two grand ideas: 1. That tender and respectful love which we should feel for God, such as that which children feel for their fathers. 2. That strong confidence in God's love to us, such as fathers have for their children. This relation dictates to us reverence for His person, zeal for His honor, obedience to His will, submission to His dispensations and chastisements, and resemblance to His nature. "Which art in heaven." In the former clause we express His nearness to us, in this His distance from us. In this we contrast Him with the fathers we have here below, and so raise our souls to that "heaven" where He dwells, and that majesty and glory which are there, as in their proper home.

3. "Give us." The good things of this life are the gifts of God. This teaches us our dependence upon Him, and is a lesson of contentment, frugality and patient labor, moderation, benevolence and faith. "Day by day." In the order in which our needs are felt. "Our daily bread." Life's most common necessity. Strength to gain it, skill to earn it, power to eat it—all are from God. From Him the soil, the seed, the sun, the harvest. This includes a prayer for the instruction of God's word, which is often compared to food (Job 23: 12; 1 Tim. 4: 6), and for the assistance and support of His grace, for strength to do His will, for that bread which endureth unto everlasting life.

4. "Forgive us our sins." Sin is here represented as a debt. Man has nothing to pay; if his debts are not forgiven they must stand charged against him forever. Sin is an old debt, a just debt, a great and growing debt. "We also forgive." Else how could we entreat Thee for pardon? "Not into temptation." As the prayer for daily bread raises us above care for to-day, and the prayer for the forgiveness of sins is meant to quiet us concerning the past, so is the prayer against temptation a weapon for the uncertain future, that we may not fall again under the might of evil. "Deliver us from evil." From all the wicked fascination and miserable results of sin.

II. The parable of the importunate borrower (vs. 5-8). 5. "He said." Although idle repetitions in prayer are forbidden, yet persistency and importunity in prayer, wrestling with God and not letting Him go until He has blessed us, are here distinctly taught. See Luke 18: 1-8. "Midnight." In those hot countries it is common, where it can be done safely, to travel in the night. "Lend me." It was usual with the Jews to borrow bread from one another, and certain rules are laid down when and upon what condition this is to be done. 6. "Friend; is come." Benighted, belated, and who has lost his way. A strong reason why he should have prompt relief.

7. "Trouble me not." The trouble made him insensible both of the urgency of the case and the claims of friendship. "In bed." We learn from travelers that it is usual in the East for a whole family to sleep in the same room, each laying his mattress on the floor. "I cannot." Without exertion, which was equal to "I will not." 8. "His importunity." Literally, his shamelessness; that is, his unblushing persistence. His perseverance in asking and stating his own inability to supply a friend. "As many." His reluctance once overcome, all the claims of friendship and necessity are felt to the full.

III. The disciples used to persistency in prayer (vs. 9-13). 9. "I say unto you." We have it from Christ's own mouth, who knows His Father's mind, and in whom all promises are yea and amen. "Ask, seek, knock." This verse contains very important directions. In everything, by prayer and supplication, we are to make our requests known unto God; then we are to "seek," continue to ask and knock at the door of His mercy. Our approaches to God should be with earnestness and in sincerity. These three words include the ideas of want and loss. We are destitute of all spiritual good, and have lost God; and are in danger of losing eternal life; be in earnest; be importunate; ask with confidence and humility; seek with care and application; knock loudly and long. 10. "Every one receiveth, etc." Christ binds Himself to hear and answer. No soul can pray in vain that prays as God has directed. But our asking must be in harmony with the will of God, and in faith (James 4: 2, 3).

11, 12. "If a son shall ask, etc." From that which the friend will do, the discourse of the Saviour rises even to that which one could expect of a "father;" and from that which an imperfect earthly father does even to that which the perfect Father in heaven bestows. The stone represents to us useless gifts, the serpent and the scorpion things which are really harmful. If human fathers would not give either one or the other to their children, then it is impossible that our father in heaven will mock the prayers of His children who call upon Him. 13. "Being evil." Sinful people are ready and anxious to give good gifts to their children. From natural affection they are ready to provide everything necessary to their support and comfort.

Gov. Jelks, being compelled to go to New Mexico for the benefit of his health, Lieut. Governor R. M. Cunningham, of Jefferson, has been sworn in as acting Governor. We hope Gov. Jelks will soon recover.

THE Birmingham Ledger says "The Associate Justices of the Supreme Court are literally favorite sons: Ander-son, Den-son, Haral-son, Simp-son and Ty-son." It must not be inferred from this that Dowdell is not also a favorite son.

11,766 bales of cotton (500 pounds to the bale) have been ginned in Chilton county this season from the crop of 1903. Of this number 6639 bales were marketed at Clanton. This shows that the metropolis of Chilton is by far the best market in this section.

THERE is a feeling of confidence in the Democrats of this county that in the future Chilton will have its proper place in the affairs of the State and nation. For a long time it has been disheartening to the party to find that in all important matters outside the county, Chilton had no voice and her very existence was ignored. Then, again, if anything was required for the county itself, it was necessary to go as humble petitioners asking for favors, instead of being able to demand our privileges. All this was on account of the political isolation of the county from the rest of the State. If any good could be accomplished by continuing this state of affairs there might be some reason in it, but the thinking people of the county know that it is suicidal to the best interests of our people, and there is a quiet determination to again get in line with the dominant party, and elect all of the Democratic nominees in November.

COUNTY CONVENTION.

The Democratic county convention was held at the court house, Clanton, Tuesday, April 26. Tipton Mullins, chairman of the Executive Committee, called the meeting to order, G. Higgins was elected temporary chairman, and Frank Crichton temporary secretary.

The secretary called the roll of delegates, and on motion the temporary organization was made the permanent organization.

The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

We, the Democrats of Chilton county, in convention assembled, April 26, 1904, hereby express our appreciation and congratulations to the people of Chilton county, for the interest manifested in the re ent Democratic primary of April 11. We rejoice to see the tendency on the part of the people to return to the old Democratic ship, and to know that they are again waking up to the fact that the Democratic party is the party of the people, and the one party in which a Southern white man can hope to accomplish anything in politics for himself, his family, or his country.

Therefore be it resolved: First. That we the Democrats of Chilton county, in convention, most earnestly commend, and endorse the wisdom of the Democratic State committee in inviting all white men, who would agree to support the nominees of the primary, to participate, regardless of their past political affliation.

Resolved Second: That we re-consecrate ourselves and endorse the Jeffersonian idea that the Democratic party was, and is now, and shall ever be, the party of the people, by the people, and for the people.

Resolved Third: That we pledge ourselves with our influence to the time honored principles of local self government by the people.

Resolved Fourth: That we are opposed to all methods of government in which the people are not consulted, believing that the people themselves are the rulers, and should by their ballots, control all public questions.

Col. W. A. Collier was called upon to address the convention, and said that while he was a defeated candidate he was with them to the end and would do all he could to help carry the Democratic party to victory.

Judge S. M. Adams was then called for, and remarking that he had no speech to make, offered some valuable suggestions to the convention.

The convention then proceeded to elect five delegates to the State convention to be held at Montgomery, May 25, 1904, and the following were duly nominated and elected: Tipton Mullins, S. M. Adams, H. B. Oliver, R. H. Martin and S. A. Thorson.

A discussion was then entered into as to the desirability of holding a mass meeting in the near future, and the convention made a request that the Executive Committee take steps to thoroughly organize for the campaign.

Then the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved; That it is the sense of this convention that for the purposes of a thorough organization of the Democrats of Chilton county, that a Rousing Democratic Rally be held at Clanton on Saturday, June 11, 1904, when all the Democratic nominees shall be present, and an organization of our forces be made to carry the county to a sweeping victory in November.

Resolved, further, that a committee of arrangements be appointed, with power to engage a band of music, and make such other arrangements for the comfort and amusement of the guests of the day as may be deemed necessary.

The convention was enthusiastic as to the bright prospects of victory in November, and congratulations from all sides were spoken of the gratifying nature of the recent primary.

At the Grand Rally to be held at Clanton on Saturday, June 11, it was at once arranged for the Thorsby cornet band to be on hand and enliven the day with music, S. A. Thorson, leader of the band, undertaking to bring them down for the occasion. Several other attractive features will be provided, but the committee will in due time make the program public, and it was confidently predicted that the rally would be a memorable day in Chilton.

The convention then adjourned.

WHO IS THE MOST POPULAR YOUNG LADY IN CLANTON?

Here, in Clanton, it's hard to decide
As to which is the most charming maid,
They're all lovely—it can't be denied,
Their sweetness can not be gainsaid,
So each vote for the one you love best,
And vote often and many a time,
A vote's ten cents straight, so vote early and late,
For it's only a dime, yes, only a dime.

There is Kate, she's a jewel, she's a gem,
There is Blanche with the green of'n eyes,
There is Lottie as sweet as a rose on its stem,
And Lucy as bright as the skies.
There is Polly and Dolly and Jessie and Belle,
They are fair, they are dark, they are short, they are tall,
Which shall I vote for, oh dear, I can't tell,
So I'll vote for them all, I'll vote for them all.

Never, in the history of Clanton, has a more staggering problem confronted the young men of the town, nay, not only the young men but the older ones too are greatly excited over the matter, and votes are also coming in from far and near. There is no necessity for a man to bring his registration certificate or poll tax receipt—you pay your poll tax (and it is only ten cents) when you vote, and you can pay it just as many times as you please, and every time you pay a dime down goes another vote for the sweetest girl you know. Of course, just like it is in politics, all don't think alike, some prefer one candidate, and some another, but the beauty of this contest is, you can have your own way at the small cost of a dime a vote. Some of the candidates in the late primary would have thought votes mighty cheap at that price. But this is voting for love and glory, and where is the laggard who will not come to the polls and register a vote for youth and beauty?

By the way, there is probably some anxious ones who are unable to come to Clanton and vote; well, all they have to do is to enclose ten cents, or as many dimes as they like, in an envelope with the name of the young lady they wish to vote for, and send it to Miss Ellen Stanley, Clanton, Ala., who will duly record it.

The proceeds are for the benefit of the Methodist church, and votes will be received up to the night of Tuesday, May 31, 1904. Each week the progress of the voting will be published in The Banner, and at the conclusion of the contest we shall be delighted to publish the picture of the Most Popular Young Lady in Clanton.

The vote up to Wednesday evening, April 27, is as follows:

Miss Alee Stewart	28
Miss Essie C. Stewart	27
Miss Ellen H. Stanley	26
Miss Nellie Mullins	19
Miss Emma Potts	17
Miss Essie McDaniel	8
Miss Dovie Roper	3
Miss Lotta Bell	2
Total	130

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, April 25, 1904

The Republicans are doing their level best to deceive the people as to the real conditions existing in the business world. They are pouring speeches into congress for use in the coming campaign, the tenor of which is "stand pat," "all is well," "prosperity is still rampant," despite a few facts to the contrary. They would have the country believe that we are rapidly recovering from the set-back to industry which occurred from October last to January, when wage reductions became general, and when nearly half the mills in many industries had to close

Although there never was more important business for congress to attend to than at present, in order to bring relief from the tyrannical trusts which have put up prices and increased the cost of living to the highest point ever known, while reducing wages in all directions, yet is the aim and policy of the Republicans to adjourn congress just as soon as the appropriation bills can be rushed through.

They will begin to circulate their "stand pat" and "prosperity" speeches, hoping to lull to sleep the great mass of voters and to keep them ignorant of the real facts as to the industrial depression which is on still and which cannot be vanquished even by Republican rhetoric. The Republicans know that every day they remain in Washington will not only bring to light new scandals in their administration, but that it will add new evidence of the depression which is now running its course. They know that the Democrats hesitate to picture conditions as bad as they really are and that, if congress adjourns at once, the Democrats will practically be without frankable speeches to off-set the frankable prosperity speeches of the Republicans. This, they think, will give them another opportunity to fool the voters of the country, and I am sorry to say many of them are fooled. This accounts, also, for much of their unseemly haste to adjourn congress.

At the War Department, the other day, I learned that Quartermaster General Humphrey and other officers of the quartermaster's department of the army, have arranged a most interesting exhibit of that great military supply department for the Louisiana Purchase Exposition. The exhibit includes representations of different methods of field transportation and uniforms of the army of United States from 1776 up to date. The uniforms are illustrated in movable frames. Lay figures show a group of officers and men of all arms and departments in the present service, and dress uniforms, including the new olive drab field uniform, also a group in the tropics in khaki and in white summer uniforms. Special exhibits show the development of army boots and shoes since 1857, including all sorts of foot gear worn during the civil war, in Alaska, and the Indian campaigns, together with a sample brass screwed shoe worn by a confederate soldier and two pairs of moccasins worn by Apache Indians during the Geronimo campaign. In fact, the exhibit will be a complete expose of the whole equipment of the army from the beginning of the republic up to the present time, and as an object lesson to children studying history is invaluable.

I also learned from Mr. P. V. DeGraw, the Eastern Press Agent of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition, that thousands of World's Fair passes, good for ten admissions to the Exposition, are being mailed to editors of daily and weekly newspapers throughout the United States. These passes are signed by Edward Hooker, Secretary of the Department of Press and Publicity. Mr. Hooker has signed so many passes that he has contracted a serious case of writer's paralysis. Every newspaper in the United States that has printed news of the World's Fair is to receive free admission to the grounds in return for the editor's courtesy.

National politics of the Democratic brand is still holding the boards as the one great attraction here in the national capital. The action of New York state convention in endorsing Judge Parker and instructing for him has been the chief topic of political conversation.

Sciatic Rheumatism Cured.

"I have been subject to sciatic rheumatism for years," says E. H. Waldron, of Wilton Junction, Iowa. "My joints were stiff and gave me much pain and discomfort. My joints would crack when I straightened up. I used Chamberlain's Pain Balm and have been thoroughly cured. Have not had a pain or ache from the old trouble for many months. SUDDEN DEATH AT CLANTON.

On Thursday morning, April 2, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Burnett came into Clanton from their home at New Salem to do some shopping. Mrs. Burnett was apparently in usual health, and while making some purchases at Mrs. Phillips' millinery store it was noticed that something was wrong and she was given a seat. Her right arm fell by her side, and she became speechless. The husband, who had gone to the Hardware store, was sent for, and at once called Dr. N. S. Johnson from the drug store close by.

Dr. N. S. Johnson procured a cot and had the unfortunate lady carried to his residence, where he and Dr. W. F. Middleton did all that was possible for the sufferer, but she never recovered consciousness and died at one o'clock, about three hours after the seizure, which Dr. Johnson says was paralysis of the right side. It appears that she had previously been stricken with paralysis.

The body was carried back home and interred at the New Salem cemetery next day, a number of sympathizing neighbors attending the funeral. The widowed husband and bereaved family have the deepest sympathy of all in their sudden affliction.

A Thoughtful Man

M. M. Austin of Winchester, Ind. knew what to do in the hour of need. His wife had such an unusual case of stomach and liver trouble, physicians could not help her. He thought of and tried Dr. King's New Life Pills and she got relief at once and was finally cured. Only 25c, at Clanton Drug co., Hopkins Drug co.

Russia's Sacred City.

Moscow, the Old Capital, Place of Shrines and Nihilists. :: ::

TO see a real Russian city it is absolutely necessary for the foreigner to visit Moscow.

Its narrow streets, countless minarets, Moorish architecture, and the ancient walls are full of interest to the stranger. Merchants from Siberia, China, Japan, Persia, Turkey, Syria and all parts of Eastern Europe journey to Moscow to dispose of their wares.

The markets are a babel of strange tongues, intensified by the violent gesticulations of the speakers.

Moscow is the Manchester of Russia and the centre of the commerce and wealth of that vast empire. The sturdy Muscovite merchants begin work early in the morning, and have all their business finished before St. Petersburg confreres are scarcely out of bed.

Napoleon the Great was the most important tourist who ever visited Russia. In the spacious courtyard of the Kremlin there are 869 pieces of cannon which were left behind him in the retreat of 1812.

These cannons, mostly bronze, were originally taken by Napoleon from the Prussians, Austrians, Italians, Spaniards and Portuguese during his various victorious campaigns.

Recently thousands of soldiers have passed through Moscow on their way to Manchuria and Siberia.

They marched through the silent streets at midnight or early in the morning, when the inhabitants were asleep. The military bands and waving of handkerchiefs by wives and sweethearts were missing from the scene. Nothing but the tap-tap of the drum was heard as the soldiers silently marched through the snow-clad streets on their way to the Siberian Railway station.

WHERE WAR IS DECLARED.

It is an ancient custom that war must be proclaimed from Moscow, and nowhere else in the Russian empire. The report that the Czar was to visit Moscow on January 21 gave rise to the rumor that war was to be declared with Japan, and caused a fall of stocks on the Russian markets.

For the Czars, the ancient capital has always been considered dangerous. It is the hotbed of socialism and revolutionary ideas in Russia, and it is the place where the students have been trying to organize revolts against the government during recent years.

On the day of the Feast of St. John (January 19), I went to the Kremlin to see the "blessing of the waters," performed by the Metropolitan and his assistants.

Thousands of peasants rolled in through the "Holy Gate," like a resistless tide, and assembled in the great square of the Kremlin, which overlooks the river. For hours they waited in the snow and icy blast in order to bare their heads and utter prayers as the holy relics were carried past by the priests.

I watched the enormous throng, numbering over 100,000, for three hours, as it was a far more interesting sight than the religious processions.

Men and women with matted hair and dull, staring eyes, trampled over each other without uttering a word. They came shambling along like a vast herd of buffaloes being driven into a stockade. There were no sounds of merry laughter or jesting to be heard on every side, as there would have been in England, but simply a sullen silence that grew oppressive as the hours sped by.

LACK OF ENTHUSIASM.

The peasants, standing high up on the church steps, when they wished to come down simply stepped on the people below them without saying a word, although there was really plenty of room to have avoided it. Those who were knocked down just got up, brushed off the hard snow, and looked sullenly after the man or woman who had caused their fall, but said nothing.

The Russian peasants are awful when once aroused, as they have no intelligence to enable them to be reasoned with. The mounted Cossacks can handle them up to a certain point, but when the peasants have stood enough they seize the Cossack and pull him off his horse and throw him on the ground.

Ten years ago there was a strike among workmen of a large mill a little way out of Moscow. The English manager, who was popular with the people, went outside to address the men and try to induce them to return to work.

Without uttering a sound they seized the unfortunate manager and literally rent him to pieces in full view of his horror-stricken wife, who was looking out of an upper window.

These are the wild hordes that the Moscow students are trying to arouse against the government. If once they succeed in getting the peasants to rise, heaven help those they meet on the way, because these terrible, ignorant slaves of the soil will show no mercy to man, woman or child.

MULTITUDES OF SHRINES.

There are about 1,500,000 inhabitants in Moscow, and 1750 churches and chapels. The Church of St. Basil, in the Kremlin, has eleven spires, and each one is a complete and separate chapel.

The Muscovites are more devote even than the people of St. Petersburg, and pray at all hours of the day and night. The streets literally teem with shrines on either side of the way. One the length of Chancery Lane in London would contain about six shrines.

Occupants of sleighs offer a prayer while the driver slows up and also performs his devotions.

Russians try to believe that they only tip on New Year's Day, but this is a myth, as the custom goes on night and day throughout the year. It has to be done on a larger scale on the first day of the year, that is all.

All Russians tip the porters of the hotels or restaurants each time they hang up their coats. Living in hotels is expensive, and hot baths cost 3s. 6d. in the bathroom. There is a police charge on passports at each town, and hotel bills are full of various extras, from candles up. It is absolutely neccessary to have candles in the bedroom in order to see the electric light.

During the present war crisis one did not hear the subject mentioned publicly in St. Petersburg, but at Moscow it was the subject of discussion and argument. The ancient capital is really the Manchester of Russia, and the Muscovite merchants greatly resemble the merchants of that northern English town with their sturdy business-like ways and plain, abrupt form of speech.

The wealth and prosperity of the Russian empire is collected in Moscow, and its men of standing and repute were all strongly against war with any nation. The masses of the common people were simply indifferent. Dynamite would not cause them to turn round quickly.

Beyond the cafe chantants at Ammon, one of the suburbs, and the opera and circus, there is very little in the way of amusements in Moscow.

Nearly every male in Russia wears an order of some kind or other. The most popular one, perhaps, is the "Sons of Continuous Rest." Including Sundays, there are 220 public holidays in Russia and this enables members of the order to act fairly up to its rules.

Uniforms are worn by at least two-thirds of the male population on some excuse or other. Amateur gypsy bandsmen are attired more gorgeously than Cossack officers. Russians pride themselves on the fact that they are the only nation where every individual washes once a week. I do not wish to deny this, as I may have met them on their non-washing days.

Moscow is far more healthy than St. Petersburg, but a dearer town to live in generally. The wealthy inhabitants spend money like water. Restaurants have to pay from 1000 to 1500 pounds sterling per annum for their wine and spirit license. Generally speaking it costs thirty pounds sterling a year to send a child to an ordinary day school, so education is very limited and the majority of the peasants cannot read or write.

The Writing of Letters.

A successful merchant once said: "In my younger days I used to write some pretty 'sassy' letters and signed them with a bold, large signature. On my first visit to New York I called on a house with whom I had done a large business, and introduced myself to the senior partner. He looked down at me a moment and said: 'So this is Mr. Blank, is it? I thought from your letters that you were at least seven feet high.'" A large proportion of people with whom the average man does business, form their impressions of him from correspondence, and as the good opinion of a correspondent, whether buyer or seller, is a valuable asset, the importance of good letter writing is obvious. There are three simple rules to be observed in correspondence. Keep cool, be plain, and boil it down. A "sassy" letter is a good outlet for the feelings, but when it is written the best thing to do is to tear it up. It never accomplishes any good if it is sent. No man raises himself in anybody's estimation by lowering his dignity, and an angry letter is a most undignified performance. A funny or sarcastic business letter is at best a risky experiment. A letter is not always read in the mood of the man who sends it, but of him who receives it, and one can never tell at long range how his correspondent's liver is acting. Time used in rewriting a letter is never wasted. It not only makes that letter better, but it helps to make the next one right the first time. The fewest words which make the meaning plain are enough, and anything more is too much.

The Retort in Kind.

W. D. Howells, the novelist, seldom fails, when any one has animadverted on his corpulence, to come out with a neat retort.

When Mr. Howells was consul at Venice a very lean and long American said to him one day jocosely:

"If I were as fat as you I'd go and hang myself."

"Well," said Mr. Howells, "if I ever take your advice I'll use you for a rope."—New York Tribune.

The Frozen Rabbit Industry.

Consul-General Bray, at Melbourne, Australia, has reported to the Department of Commerce and Labor upon the frozen rabbit industry, which has become an important one in Victoria. During the year 1903, 3,650,000 pairs of rabbits were exported, as compared with 3,244,210 pairs for the year 1902. —Washington Star.

AGRICULTURAL.

Feeding Rye to Hogs.

In feeding young hogs the rye may be fed either ground or soaked to growing hogs. It is not desirable to feed the whole grain dry. The better method of feeding is to grind the rye and feed it as slop. As to which is the more economical method, will depend on the question of grinding. The man who does his own grinding will find it more profitable to grind his rye and mix it with some corn and oats ground; feeding this combination as slop feed. Where it is necessary to pay for the grinding, the soaked grain will probably be more economical, as soaking costs but little; twelve hours' soaking is sufficient. Rye makes a splendid feed for growing pigs. It should be free from the disease known as "ergot," as rye which is thus affected is poisonous to stock.—J. H. Skinner, in Indiana Farmer.

Feeding Sheep in Troughs.

The design of a sheep trough illustrated this week is one which has been found entirely satisfactory, all things considered; it is some little trouble to make it, but its superiority over the average trough is so great that the labor spent in its construction will be well spent. As shown, the trough is twelve feet long, sixteen inches wide, twenty-two inches high, tapered as shown. With the exception of the slats, which are one-half inch thick, and two and one-half inches wide, the trough is made of inch lumber. The sides, which are nailed on the edge of the bottom, are six inches wide. The end pieces, or legs, are three inches wide and extend six inches below the bottom of the trough as shown. These legs are, of course, fastened securely to the trough after the latter is built and are independent of the rack itself. The rack is built by nailing the slats one foot apart on pieces three inches wide and twelve inches long, and are then hinged to the sides of the trough so that they rest on the edges of the trough when closed. Two hinges on each side (strap hinges, of course,) will be sufficient. At about the middle of the racks a bent hasp is fastened so that when the racks are in place they may be held so by turning the hasp to the other side over a staple and holding it in place with a bit of wood. In this arrangement either rack may be let down and the trough thus filled from either side.—Indianapolis News.

Two Mistakes.

It is a mistake to allow colts and calves to remain out in wood or field through winter storm and cold with no other shelter than a fence corner or tree trunk. Hardening them, some farmers call it. It surely is a case of the survival of the fittest if they survive it and do well. The bony, scraggy colt and calf brought up in the spring may live out its allotted time in spite of such usage, but it is at a loss. If you trust to the mercy of nature, she asks pay for it in shortened days or stunted growth. The other day, passing a large field, I saw one lonely calf, its back parts to the storm, covered with snow, shivering in the fence corner. Not a shed or straw stack in sight. And I thought of the proverb concerning the merciful man. Stock should never be turned into corn stalk or wood pasture in winter without having something provided in the way of shelter, which they can reach in stormy weather. Better not sell off all the straw to the stawboard, and use it in covering rude sheds for cattle and other stock. Our cattle are now far removed from their wild ancestry and do not bear cold and exposure well. Again, it is a second mistake to confine horses and cattle too closely. They require plenty of fresh air. The stables and cow sheds should be as warm as possible to make them, but they should be provided with good ventilators. Cows standing in a close atmosphere, laden with the poisonous exhalations from their own bodies, pass that poison back again to diseased lungs and milk. Some exposure to the cold and fresh air is necessary for the well being of the cow. It is a tonic that shows up quickly in her appearance. You can kill or weaken your stock by lack or care, and sometimes you can weaken them by too much care.—Ida Shepler, in The Epitomist.

Chutes For Grain.

In a great many farm barns the feeding grain is kept on the upper floor, and all that is fed out is carried down in one way or another. An American Agriculturist writer has a barn arranged thus and with no suitable space in the basement for a grain bin. As a way out of the difficulty he put in some grain chutes to run from the bins above, as shown in the accompanying cut. In some cases the chute could be allowed to drop directly from the bin above without any joints. Under few circumstances will a chute with less than half pitch be satisfactory. Oats will run through such a pitch with little difficulty. Wheat or rye will follow even a less slant, but with bulky stuff like ground feed there is considerable danger of clogging.

The interior of the chute ought not to be less than six inches square—six by eight would be even better. The interior should be free from all obstructions. The hopper shaped device just under the bin is quite necessary with oats and ground feed to give greater headway. The cut-off (A) is an ordinary draw supported by two cleats on either side. An extension is also made to the rear board of the chute so that it projects about half an inch outward, thus giving chance for holding a bag if necessary.—Connecticut Farmer.

Practical Farm Dairying.

Thinking, perhaps, the experience of a "common" farmer with a common herd would be interesting as well as instructive, I submit this: During the year ended April 1, 1903, our herd averaged a trifle over 300 pounds of butter each. We sold the same at twenty-two cents net. During the last year we sold part of the cows. At the present time I am milking four October cows, which make an average of forty-two pounds a week. It would be somewhat difficult to average them to April 1, but I am confident the four will make 400 pounds each next year. The cows are common Jerseys. Not one is registered. No two are alike, nor is there one which could compete in the show ring. In fact, they are what Mr. Pack would call "scrubs."

They are stabled in a rather cold upground stable, confined in stanchions, and let out twice a day for water and put back immediately, except on pleasant days, when they are given an hour's run. Their feed consists of plenty of good oat straw and timothy hay twice a day, and shredded corn fodder or chaff at noon. The grain ration is four quarts of whole oats and bran mixed and four quarts of buckwheat rinds once a day. They are watered at a trough from which the ice has been removed beforehand. They have no ensilage or summer grain; are well bedded, but never curried. They are treated kindly, but in no sense are they under different conditions than are, or should be, in reach of every farmer. We try to have them dry through September. While I fully agree that cows will do better with scientific surroundings and better breeding, still there is better money for the plain farmer with a common herd of full blooded Ayrshires, but the scrub cow is where we got the start to do so, and, in defense of this much abused beast, will say that many a one with a reasonable chance would surprise the fellows with the high-priced fancies.—Lee Hathaway, in Tribune-Farmer.

Poultry Notes.

See that there is vigor and activity in the male bird.

Changing hens to new quarters is apt to check their laying.

It is best to cook cut clover hay and then mix it hot with ground grain.

Even if the chickens do belong to the wife, you should help her with the heavy work.

Exposing fowls to heavy wind storms is as dangerous to their health as is rainy weather.

Crowded roosts at night will bring colds to the flock about as quickly as anything we know of.

Heavy forcing will no doubt increase the egg yield, but it will cripple the stamina of future generations.

Sifted coal ashes should be spread, several times a week, upon the dropping boards. Never use wood ashes.

Feed the morning mash before giving water to drink. It is a mistake to allow a fowl to become chilled by drinking cold water while the crop is empty.

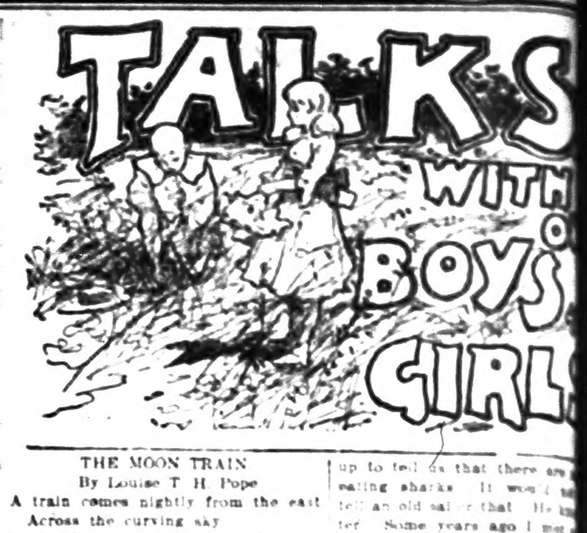
It is a very easy matter to improve the farm flock, and now is the proper time to look over the flock and select a few of the very best pullets and mate them up with the best cockerel upon the farm. They can be confined in a wire netting yard adjacent to a portion of the poultry house.

The use of the lead pencil in putting down in black and white the number of eggs and fowls produced and the price received for them is a good way to change the mistaken belief that hens do not pay for their feed. A record should be kept of the fowls and eggs consumed for family use.

This is the season when many farmers are moving from one locality to another. Changing hens from one place to another is a good way to cause them to stop laying. They may be coaxed to resume operations sooner than they would otherwise by changing their diet. Give something new and they will come to their meals with an appetite.

Durability of Sycamore.

The durability of sycamore wood is vouched for by a specimen in a Cairo museum. It is nearly 6000 years old and is in perfect condition.



THE MOON TRAIN.

By Louise T. H. Pope.

A train comes nightly from the east
Across the curving sky
Its headlight is the big round moon,
Its smoke the clouds close by

Those clouds of smoke conceal the train
I long to have appear;
I watch the brilliant, brilliant light
That makes the path so clear.

The little sparks of stars fly out
Along the moon train's way;
I'd like to hear the engine puff
And some bright night, I may.

I'd like to see the passengers;
Perhaps a boy like me
Rides on the train to China, now,
But oh! I cannot see.

The splendid headlight blinds my eyes.
The train seems but to creep;
And long before it reaches here,
In bed I'm fast asleep.

A LOST CHILD.

Nobody ever called this tiny child Beth, or Bess, or Betty. She was such a solemn little creature, that Elizabeth, though quite a mouthful, suited her best. She took life seriously, this maiden of five summers, and brooded over many things, as she sat in a diminutive rocker, which her mother had secured at the hotel for her special accommodation.

It was a great summer hotel in a fashionable watering place, where the Eldridges were stopping until they secured a permanent boarding-house for the summer. Meanwhile, Elizabeth had been having a very good time, for she was very popular with everyone, from the head waiter to the elevator boy. Indeed her own heart turned to the elevator boy, and she often thought how lonely he would be without a little girl to say "Good morning" to him each day.

When the time of parting came, Elizabeth was very sad indeed. She felt that she couldn't bear to leave her elevator boy, and I'm afraid she cried the least little bit, when he shook hands with her. But she never forgot him, and after they left the hotel, she often spoke of him to the cook's little girl.

It is very nice, if one is in a large boarding-house, to know the cook's little girl. The acquaintanceship brought Elizabeth many outside treats in the kitchen, and here, too, she made friends, as she did in the hotel.

One afternoon Elizabeth was missing; so was the cook's little girl. They were not to be found upon the premises, and soon the alarm spread from house to house along the street. Elizabeth's nurse was frantic; she had gone indoors to get a glass of water, leaving Elizabeth leaning over the railing of the low veranda, talking to the cook's little girl. When she came back, both children had disappeared as completely as if the earth had swallowed them.

All the afternoon they hunted, going from house to house, store to store. Mr. Eldridge roused the little town, sending scouts in all directions. Many things might have happened; they might have fallen in the lake; they might have been run over, or, worst of all, they might have been carried off by one of the small bands of gypsies infesting the region, and held for ransom. Mr. and Mrs. Eldridge were distracted, and the cook folded her arms, and wept and wailed, while dinner waited.

But the nurse, who stood wringing her hands, stopped suddenly, for she had an idea. She ran out of the house straight across the velvety common, to the hotel from which they had moved only a few days before. She was quite out of breath when she reached the elevator, meaning to ring and question the boy. But there was no need, for there, side by side, she found Elizabeth and the cook's little girl, serenely content, and chatting away as if there were no such things as distressed parents and cooks, and sympathetic neighbors.

Elizabeth looked up with a start, as she saw her nurse.

"Have you come for me?" she asked. "Please, Nurse, let me stay for one more time, and we've had such fun!"

"You're to come home at once, you naughty child! To think of the state we've been in!" exclaimed Nurse.

Elizabeth never could understand why she was kissed and cuddled and scolded in the same breath. But the cook's little girl understood perfectly, after the mourning parent had unfolded her arms and administered justice; for cooks' little girls are brought up in a much harder school.

MAN-EATING SHARKS.

Every once in a while one will rise up to tell us that there are no man-eating sharks. It won't tell an old sailor that. He knows better. Some years ago I met a man who knows that there are. He had left his left part of his leg with one of them. He was bathing off Key West, had not the ship's boat got to the moment it did the shark was eaten the rest of him. When in the steam whaler in 1871 our amusements was fishing sharks. I made a hook after the fashion of them. One of our men gave me his opinion of why a shark became a man-eater. I have often since thought he was right. Since then I have held the same opinion advanced to me by the man-hunting tiger. All tigers are not man-hunters, any more than all sharks man-eaters. His theory is that if a man-eating shark finds a man, then any other shark might also be in the neighborhood would also attack him, and these sharks had done so, they too, became man-eaters. This is like the wolf in one respect. If gets hurt, any of his companions may be present will tear him to pieces without loss of time. I have seen them do it.

We were under sail and standing west under a light breeze, hardly doing more than steerage way, with the sea as smooth as a mill-pond, when one day just after daylight a shark was following us about one hundred astern of the ship. He had evidently been doing this all night. His dorsal fin showed above the water and he seemed to be a large one. A hook was thrown to him, but I did not notice he took of it was to eat a little further astern, he did so. He took the hook. At noon he was still in place astern, and leaving the ship out for him, we went to dinner. We might get bold enough to take the hook when we were not looking, I thought, but he did not, for at his next came on deck he was still in place astern as before; and now I made up my mind to shoot him. We had no rifle on board, but I could not use one of them without the captains permission, and just as I had started to get his permission, he came on deck, and seeing the shark ordered me to his glass and a rifle. I had only an old Sharp's rifle, and while the captain stood with his glass before me, I fired three shots, aiming at his fin, the only part on him that I could see, to aim by. I wanted to hit him amidship, and as low down as possible and not have the water deaden the ball. The first shot was too high, the next one not high enough, but the third shot got him, and the ball had hardly hit him when two others, to see that none of us had seen before, joined him, one on each side of the first and dragged him down.

For the next few minutes nothing seemed to be doing below. The big shark got to the top of the water twice, throwing himself half out of it the first time, and I thought I had a chance to see how large he was, but each time the others pulled him below again. They were still at work when we had dropped them astern to be able to see the fight terminated. These sharks follow a ship day after day, for what may be thrown overboard. No sailor thinks that it is he has to pick up. Some of them will refuse him if he did drop one, but we found them following us to bring up a bucket of kitchen and throw it to them, then take them the hook; and some one generally made the mistake of it. When he did we only had the rest of them always left us and Stream.

Three in Chinese.

Religious superstition appears in Chinese architecture, and the universal sacredness of the numbers three and nine is shown in the arrangement of temple doors. There is a triple gateway to each of the courts of the Imperial Palace, and in order prevails at the Ming tombs. When the sacred person of the Emperor when he was in his Pekin palace could only be approached, even by the highest officials, after three successive prostrations. The Temple of Heaven has a triple roof, a triple flight of staircase, and all its mystical significance points either to these or to multiples.

UNCLE SAM'S WORLD'S FAIR BUILDING

At the St. Louis Exposition the United States Government Has Erected a Structure Which is a Model of Grace and Beauty.

BY MARK BENNITT.

THE Government Building at the World's Fair ranks with any on the Exposition ground in point of architectural design and sculptural beauty. The architect is Mr. James Knox Taylor, Supervising Architect of the United States Treasury. The sculptor is Mr. James Farrington Early, the youngest pupil ever admitted to the Royal Academy.

The exterior of the building is classic, stately and beautiful. The main entrance consists of a portico of eight Ionic columns, five feet in diameter and forty-five feet high, surmounted by an entablature and attic.

The attic is enriched by eight colossal female figures eleven feet high, representing Music, Painting, Sculpture, Architecture, Agriculture, Manufactures, Transportation and Commerce.

On each side of the central portico and just above the top of the attic are groups of four figures each. A seated female figure, fourteen feet high, representing America, with a torch in one hand and an eagle at her feet, is surrounded by three young athletes, each ten feet six inches high, typifying the youth and strength of the Republic. Each has a laurel wreath in his hand.

The dome is surmounted by a quadriga, a Goddess of Liberty fourteen feet high, bearing a torch in one hand and an eagle in the other, standing in the triumphal chariot drawn by four colossal horses. The horses are guided by two nude male figures, each twelve feet high.

The Fisheries Building, which is connected with the United States Government Building by a colonnade, is severely classic in outline. It is as simple as the Greek temple of Poseidon, which still crowns "Suniumi's Marbled Steep." Groups of maids, mermaids, mermen, sportive dolphins, sea shells and tridents adorn every available place. The friezes and crests around the building all suggest the sea.

The central ornament for the United States Government Building proper is the statue of "Armed Liberty." The first plaster cast of this statue was made in Rome by Thomas Crawford, the sculptor. It was used by Clark Mills in 1860 for making the mold in which he cast the bronze statue surmounting the dome of the Capitol in Washington. The height of this statue is nineteen feet six inches. The Government Board appropriated $15,000 for the interior decoration of the Government Building. This work was under the immediate supervision of Miss Grace Lincoln Temple, whose plans, however, were subject to the approval of the members of the United States Government Board.

A FEW WORLD'S FAIR FEATURES.

In a short article such as this, one can only refer to such great features as the Philippine exhibit, covering forty acres and containing more than 1000 natives from those far off Pacific Islands; the United States Government Indian exhibit, covering many acres and occupying a large building; the exhibit of the United States Bureau of Plant Industry, consisting of an outdoor map of the United States, covering four acres; the great Athletic Field, where the Olympian Games of 1904 will be held; the Aerial Concourse where the airship and balloon contests, having prizes aggregating $200,000, will take place; the Anthropology exhibit; the forty or more State buildings; the outdoor exhibits of the Departments of Agriculture and Horticulture, covering many acres; the Palace of Horticulture, 400 by 800 feet, containing the largest exhibits of horticulture ever brought together; the beautiful Temple of Fraternity; the magnificent buildings erected by foreign nations; the great Inside Inn, where 6000 guests may find accommodation at rates from $1.50 to $5.00 per day; the extensive Live Stock Pavilion; the great landscape clock, made of flowers.

the opening day of the Exposition, but that an unusual treat is in store for them is assured.

Poems by Mr. Stedman have been used for musical settings of several of the most distinguished American composers, and he is especially gifted in lyric composition. The song for the World's Fair is considered his best effort.

Mr. Stedman was born in Hartford, Conn., in 1833, and was graduated from Yale in the class of 1853. He became editor of the Norwich (Conn.) Tribune and the Winsted (Conn.) Herald, and in 1859 joined the staff of the New York Tribune. He was war correspondent of the New York World from 1861 to 1863. After the war he purchased a seat in the New York Stock Exchange, and while devoting his life to literary work, has also carried on a successful business. He has published many volumes of his own poems and is the editor of several collections and libraries of poetry and literature.

Frank Vanderstuken, director of the Cincinnati Orchestra, has written "Louisiana," the World's Fair march, and Henry K. Hadley, of New York, has written the Exposition waltz, "Along the Plaza."

AUTHOR OF THE WORLD'S FAIR HYMN

The selection of the veteran poet, Edmund Clarence Stedman, to write the World's Fair hymn, seems to have been a popular choice. When the question was asked who should be invited to undertake a work of such moment, the name of Mr. Stedman was suggested from many quarters.

The poem has now been completed and set to music by Mr. John K. Paine, of Harvard University. The title is the "Hymn of the West." Permission to hear this notable composition is withheld from the public until SUPERSTITIONS OF MECHANICS.

Some Queer Beliefs That Obtain Among Craftsmen.

Cal McSimms, of the Bricklayers' Union, speaking of superstitions known among his craftsmen, said: "Should a bricklayer drop a brick from a wall while at work and break it lengthwise it is a sure token of great luck, and that the man will get money, but if it falls and alights on its end and stands in that position for a moment, he is sure to die in a month.

The painters have only one real superstition, and that is that, if while one of their number is at work fitting a pane of glass he lets it fall, and it is broken into thirteen pieces, he will meet with ill luck within the next twenty-four hours.

Many of the waiters in the restaurants believe if the first order they take in the morning is for ham and eggs they will have good luck all that day. It is a common superstition among the barbers that if a man comes into the shop and has a long beard removed there will be a marriage among the barbers in the place soon.—Kansas City Journal.

"What is the King?"

The Hereros, now in rebellion against Germany, have a pretty fair opinion of themselves and of their chief. One of their songs begins: "What is the King of England, what is the King of Germany compared with thee, O, Mahereo, first among all princes? Have they so many thousand cattle as thou? No! Who is so mighty as thou?" The Hereros despise Europeans. The name for a European is "otyirumbo"—"White thing."

THE CROWS AND THE BALL.

An Invincible Egg That Baffled All Their Attacks.

During a piazza game of ping-pong one of the balls was sent quite a distance out over the lawn, where a crow seized it and bore it off in triumph, evidently thinking it was an egg. After much pecking, from all of which the frolicsome little ball bounced away unbroken, the crow had an excited consultation with several of his fellows, and then deliberately carried the ball to the top of a high tree and let it drop. Again the assembly of black feathered experimenters gathered around in amazement. Was there ever such a remarkable egg? It had fallen from a height that played havoc with their eggs and their little ones as well and yet survived intact! Then one after another tramped on it, cawing loudly all the while.

At last, in sheer exhaustion and disgust, they all gave it up, flew to the top of their favorite tree, and, still cawing loudly, watched one of the ping-pong players came out from the house and carry off the invincible egg that had baffled their boldest attacks.—Boston Weekly Herald.

The Odd Korean Flag.

The Koreans, who have lately recalled their Minister in Washington, attract attention for one reason if for no other. Their peculiar flag adorns their legation building. The body of the flag is white, and in the centre is a design about the size of a football in red and blue, looking very much like huge entwined comma marks. On the top, bottom and sides are short lines of dots and dashes, reminding one of the Morse code alphabet.

DIGGING UP GREECE

Studying Archaeological Remains to Find How the Ancients Lived.

They are digging up Greece to find out how the men of olden times lived, carried on business and died. According to a dispatch from London, a large number of expeditions under the leadership of scientific men are at work studying archaeological remains.

The American school under the direction of T. W. Heermance will continue its excavations at Corinth, where the difficulties in connection with the expropriation of landowners stopped the work in 1903. These have now been settled.

The British school will now resume its excavations at Palaeocastro, Eastern Crete, where a rich series of Mycenaean vases and terra cottas have been discovered. Trial excavations will be made at Laconia. The first site will be the Temple of Artemis, at Kary.

The French school will continue more completely and more systematically the Delos excavations of 1903, which have already revealed interesting traces of the commercial activity of Roman republican times.

Onions For the Nervous.

Onions eaten raw, with bread and butter, make a capital complexion clearer and nightcap, especially for the nervous person, who is generally inclined to lay awake o' nights and to make up at disheartening early hours of the morning. Slice the onions thin and sprinkle lightly with salt to take off the raw, crude taste, and have the bread thin and a good deal of butter. Talking of nervousness, there is no better nerve food than good butter.

The black hole of Calcutta was 18 feet square. When Fort William was taken, in 1756, by Surajah Dowla, nabob of Bengal, 146 persons were shut up in the black hole. The room afforded each person a space of 20 1-2 inches by 12 inches, which was just sufficient to hold them without their being violently packed together. To this dungeon there was but one small window and the weather being very sultry, the air within could neither circulate nor be changed. In less than an hour many of the prisoners were attacked with extreme difficulty of breathing and several were delirious. In less than four hours many had died in delirium. In five hours all the survivors except those at the grate, were unconscious. Eleven hours after they were imprisoned 23 only of the 146 came out alive and all of these had high fever, from which they were slow in recovering.

Over the trans-Siberian railroad a fast freight train leaves Moscow once a week and reaches Vladivostock in eighteen days and Port Arthur in twenty-one days. During the year 1902 the railway transported over its entire length 1,980,000 tons of freight and 1,370 passengers, though some of the short hauls exhibit much larger figures. The pettiness of this business is shown by a comparison with the same amount of mileage on American roads, on which the amount of freight carried in a year is from 40,000,000 to 140,000,000 tons.

The Miss Rose Peterson, Secretary Parkdale Tennis Club, Chicago, from experience advises all young girls who have pains and sickness peculiar to their sex, to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

How many beautiful young girls develop into worn, listless and hopeless women, simply because sufficient attention has not been paid to their physical development. No woman is exempt from physical weakness and periodic pain, and young girls just budding into womanhood should be carefully guided physically as well as morally. Another woman.

Miss Hannah E. Mershon, Collingswood, N.J., says:

"I thought I would write and tell you that, by following your kind advice, I feel like a new person. I was always thin and delicate, and so weak that I could hardly do anything. Menstruation was irregular.

"I tried a bottle of your Vegetable Compound and began to feel better right away. I continued its use, and am now well and strong, and menstruate regularly. I cannot say enough for what your medicine did for me."

The Boll Weevil

Careful inquirry regarding the boll weevil has developed the fact that this insect is now in 96 of the 178 cotton producing counties of Texas and destroyed cotton of the crop of 1903 amounting to 739,360 bales, which is the difference between an ample and a short crop for the country. Including the value of the seed the loss is equivalent to $49,272,989. A conservative estimate of the loss resulting to Texas from the impertect weather conditions which affected the section in common with the other cotton states is placed at 227,945 bales. The proportion of the Texas crop to the total crop increased from 23.3 per cent. in 1902 to 25.1 per cent in 1903.

For nearly four years I suffered from ovarian troubles. The doctor insisted on an operation as the only way to get well. I, however, strongly objected to an operation. My husband felt disheartened as well as I, for home with a sick woman is a disconsolate place at best. A friendly druggist advised him to get a bottle of Wine of Cardui for me to try, and he did so. I began to improve in a few days and my recovery was very rapid. Within eighteen weeks I was another being.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[We are willing to publish our subscribers views at any time, but it must be distinctly understood we do not hold ourselves responsible for these opinions.—EDITOR.]

Clanton, April 29, 1904

Editor Banner—As this is a year in which a great national election will be held, it is most opportune that the Democratic party should present a solid front and engender not only a spirit of harmony, but enthusiasm. It will be remembered that when President McKinley was elected the last time Chilton county gave a majority for him and several other counties in the State. But for the foolish policy of appointing negroes to office (which the Republicans it seems will never understand) there is no reckoning to what extent the rift in the ranks of Democracy even in Alabama, one of the most solidly Democratic states of the "Solid South," might have grown.

There are but two great parties, and there will probably not be more in our time, viz.: The Democratic and Republican, and the history of recent events shows how futile it is to split up among ourselves and that if we wish reforms and to avenge wrongs, the fight should be made within the ranks of the Democratic party.

There is a black cloud of ignorance and vice that hangs over the South and for this reason Democracy and local self-government demand that we should organize and urge the young men to enlist beneath its glorious banner, for there is no other party save the Democratic party that offers the young man any opportunity in this country. The other party, with corporate greed and the rule of the monied class over the masses, with a president whose ruthless hands are busy all the time trying to pull down Anglo Saxon supremacy and by example fostering upon us social equality, should be met with rebuke and reprimanded by the white voters of the South.

True Democracy means as much and probably more than it ever did to the people. Have we not had fostered upon us the gigantic trusts and a monied aristocracy? Let us organize and learn the history of the two great parties of Jefferson and Jackson on the one side and Roosevelt on the other. Again let us put forth every effort to bring Chilton county into line with the other counties of this great State.

Union.

I will say a few words by permission. The farmers in this community are well up with their work.

Sorry to say Mrs. W. H. Conway and Mrs. J. W. Sorrell are on the sick list.

Quite a crowd from Union, Mineral Springs, Jumbo and other parts of Chilton and Coosa counties gathered at Adams Ferry on Coosa river on Sunday, the 1st day of May and had a jolly time; had a good dinner and all went home in the evening well satisfied.

Politics is dead in this community. Success to Banner. ANON.

The farmers of our community are getting along nicely with their work.

Yes, April has gone and May has come, and with it brings many pretty flowers to cheer us in our lonely hours.

Some of the people of our community went to the Decoration at Pleasant Grove last Saturday and report a nice time.

Mr. Wm. Barrett and wife visited relatives at Stanton.

Rev. Joe Foshee visited his brother, Mr. B. G., the past week.

A FALSEHOOD EXPOSED.

The following has been handed to us for publication:

"Let us take a glance at some of the counties where the Democrats have redeemed them. Take Bibb county, for instance. In less than two years after the Democrats got control the county was several thousand dollars in debt with nothing to show where the money went. They have the same old court house that was built before the war. Notice the examiner's report as to how they do things over there."

Centreville, Ala., April 25, 1904

Mr. J. W. Billingsley, Thorsby, Ala.

Dear Sir—I have your letter of 23d inst., and in reply will say that I am glad of the opportunity to refute so base a lie, so far as the same refers to Bibb county, as is published in the Union over the name of X-Ray. To begin with, I will state the following office holders of Bibb are ex-Populites—the Probate Judge, the Clerk of the Circuit Court, Tax Collector and three Commissioners, the Democratic Executive Committee is composed almost entirely of ex-Populites. The people of the county are satisfied with the management of the county affairs, and in the recent primary there was no issue at all, every man running on his merits. Now, to what X-Ray says about Bibb county; he says we still have the same old court house that was built before the war. This statement shows how little he knows about Bibb county. We have an up-to-date temple of justice second to very few in the State of Alabama, which was completed last year at a cost of nearly $35,000. It is equipped with all modern conveniences, we repaired and overhauled the jail at a cost of $3,000; built water works for court house and jail, and have completed in the past four years three very fine steel bridges, ranging in length from 300 to 600 feet, at a cost of about $18,000 We have also spent on the wooden bridges and public highways of the county in the past four years about $25,000, putting our roads in good condition for travel the year round. We have three road graders and several hundred dollars worth of other tools, which aid in making our good roads.

At the last term of the grand jury, it was found, and so reported by said grand jury, that the total indebtedness of the county was only forty two thousand dollars, the last payment of which was to be paid in eight years. This county has no bonded debt, and does not owe a dollar that is not paid promptly. If X-Ray had a warrant on the Treasurer of Bibb county he would get his money as promptly as if he had one on the Chilton county Treasurer in her best days.

I do not know who Mr. X-Ray is, but I will gladly pay his expenses to Bibb county in order to show him that he is "talking through his hat" and that he is in abject ignorance of the conditions of his sister county, and I will try to further serve the good county of Chilton should I have the pleasure of this man's acquaintance by convincing him that he is a demagogue, and ought to go home and "cool off."

I return the clipping as you requested, and hope that I have at least given you some light on the conditions of this county.

Very respectfully,
W. L. PRATT.

IN MEMORIAM.

The death angel visited the home of Mr. D. H. Gentry on the morning of April 21st at 8 o'clock and carried their sweet little Maud to the bright angel's home, for God thinks it's best to carry such a sweet little girl out of this world of troubles and trials. Sleep, sweet little Maud, and take thy rest, for God calls thee, he thinks it best. Little Maud was sick only two weeks and everything was done to save her that could be done, but at last we had to give her up to Him that does all things well. She was three years old and was loved by all who knew her. Her kind and affectionate mother left her when she was a small infant. Weep not, dear father, brothers and sister after little Maud, but try to so live on this earth as to be able to meet the precious one in heaven when each of your summons come. We pray thy blessings may ever be with the entire family, that each of them may be able to meet the precious mother and sweet little Maud when the trumpet sounds.

Our school is still progressing nicely. The school grounds are somewhat attractive since Prof. Williams and the children have cleaned them off and planted flowers. It is so attractive that a little bird has built a nest in one corner of the house.

A Troublesome Cat Captured.

Blocton, Ala., April 26, 1904

There has been a troublesome cat loafing around the residence where I live for two years or more and I been unable to capture him. Late yesterday evening I cut open a salmon can and threw the empty can out at the door and the meddlesome cat stuck his head in the can to get the remains, and to his surprise was unable to get the can off. So I immediately proceeded to execute him without further notice.

I wish to say a few words to the people in behalf of our Alliance. It is improving right along and will do great good if it is carried out right. So we do not want to do any one harm, but to better ourselves.

We had a large crowd at singing last Sunday evening and had some pleasant visitors, some from Pleasant Grove and some from Pleasant Hill and some from Jemison. We have a good Sunday school here, it is interesting to attend it.

Mr. C. W. Langston is getting better of his cold. He has been so he could hardly talk.

It is somewhat cool now, but the people are farming right along.

Mr. F. M. Langston is still on the mend.

Baltimore has begun the giant task of remodelling its street lines in the burned area, with wider thoroughfares and city ownerships of the water front as the central features. This last-named policy will involve an expenditure of some millions of dollars, and already has precipitated a conflict with interested railroad companies.

Shipments of frozen rabbits from Australia to London has grown to considerable importance. In 1900 there were exported 2,859,112 pair. In 1903 this had increased to 5,650,000 pair. Altogether there were utilized for the export market during that year at least 20,000,000 rabbits, some frozen in the fur and the rest tinned. The rabbits are of the variety which was introduced for sport, which developed into a pest, and now, slain for the market in lots of many thousands, is again a "good fellow" to the Australians.

Drink water and get typhoid fever. Drink milk and get tuberculosis. Eat soup and get Bright's disease. Eat meat and encourage apoplexy. Eat vegetables and weaken the system. Eat dessert and take to paresis. Smoke cigarettes and die early. Smoke cigars and get catarrh. Drink coffee and obtain nervous prostration, says the Southwestern World. In order to be entirely healthy one must eat nothing, drink nothing, smoke nothing, and even before breathing one should make sure that the air has been properly sterilized.

Considering the fact that some girls at a Beaver (Pa.) college were sent to a murder trial in the course of their training in social science, can anybody doubt the immense importance of sociology? asks the New York Evening Sun. It is a large and elastic subject and ranges from corsetology to penology, and from breakfast foods to baby incubators. In view of the importance attributed to it in post-graduate courses, one is led to wonder how people ever learned anything about the world they lived in before it was invented. Perhaps a time will come when criminals will be regarded as necessary persons in so far as they supply subjects for feminine students of the "science."

Andrew Carnegie has lately made it clear, in a public address, that a professional man, even poorly paid, may readily get more out of life than the money grubber does, even if the money grubber becomes a trillionaire, because the professional man works for others and feels the effect of a more altruistic occupation, whereas the money getter works only for himself—and perhaps feel the effect of it. The bricklayer, carpenter, plasterer, steamfitter, granite cutter or linotyper does not follow an altruistic occupation any more than the money grubber does. He works for himself all the time. Yet he has the advantage over the average business man that he works more with others than the man at the desk does, and is less likely to fall a prey to egotistic self-concentration.

The Chicago officials refused to allow Sir Henry Irving to use a calcium "spot" light in the impressive vision scene in "The Bells," and the great Englishman showed his vexation by making a speech to the audience condemning the panic which has seized the authorities as a result of the Iroquois disaster. It was a spot light that caused the Iroquois fire, and that makes people specially afraid of that kind of light, though of course a fire might as easily be started in any one of a thousand other ways. During the dynamite scare in London about twenty years ago an American was arrested with some dynamite in a black satchel. For years thereafter Americans with black satchels were regarded with suspicion, while other people with black satchels or Americans with russet satchels escaped surveillance. We seem to be very watchful of the particular dangers from which we have once suffered, while being often sometimes grossly negligent as to others.

Who could forebode that Japan would develop so much naval ability in a generation? It is hardly longer than that since she dropped her junk system, obsolescent through countless ages, old as the Pandects of Mann or Noah's Ark. Now on Neptune's fields she copes with the proudest and lays them low.

POPULAR SCIENCE

About 730 tons of ore have been used to produce about a fifth of an ounce of radium.

To test the mosquito theory of malaria, two French physicians propose to be bitten by mosquitoes fed on an ague patient, and to allow any fever contracted to run its full course without treatment.

The curious theory of M. Boyn is that N-rays keep marine animals in their native habitat. These rays enter salt water readily, but are completely stopped by fresh water, and they have the remarkable property of increasing visual power, other effects being probable.

A baker's oven heated by electricity is a novelty at Montauban, France. The heating elements—numbering twenty—are placed at the side of the interior, and heat is quickly applied and cut off at once, with a considerable saving in time. No heat is lost up the chimney, as the only opening is the door through which the bread is passed.

French statistics show that a total of 238,702 horse power from the falls of the Alps is now used for generating electricity. The electric power serves the following: Aluminum works, 22,536 horse power; other metallurgical factories, 20,485; chlorate of potassium works, 9000; calcium carbide works, 104,466; sodium chlorate works, 13,500; transmission of power and lighting, 48,727; various industries, 19,989.

The human body changes its temperature very slightly under any conditions of heat or cold, but a Russian naturalist finds that the body temperature of insects is practically that of the atmosphere. It usually rises more slowly than the air, though more rapidly when the air is very moist. When the insect begins to move, the temperature rises rapidly, and may reach about 38 degrees C. (102.2 F). Below—0.5 degrees C. insects remain motionless, and the wings are not moved until the temperature reaches about 12 degrees C.

The United States Supreme Court.

As the hands of the clock point to twelve the crier of the Supreme Court of the United States raps with his gavel, the murmur of conversation ceases and attorneys, court officials and visitors rise while the crier slowly announces, "The Honorable the Chief Justice and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court of the United States." Robed in black silk gowns, they walk with slow and dignified steps toward the bench, and as the Chief Justice appears at the entrance at the rear they slowly proceed to their seats. As they do, the crier cries, "Oyez! oyez! oyez! All persons having business before the Honorable the Chief Justice and the Associate Justices of the United States are admonished to draw near and give their attention, for the court is now sitting. God save the Government of the United States and this honorable court."

It is an imposing and inspiring spectacle, the mere witnessing of which increases the red corpuscles of one's patriotism. No man entering that domelike court room may wear his overcoat. No member of its bar may appear before it in a coat of any other color than black. Such is the dignity and impressiveness of that tribunal that men to whom embarrassment has long been a stranger evidence the renewal of their acquaintance with it by a stammering speech, a quickened breath, a nervous manner, when addressing the court.—Green Bag.

Easter Lilies From Japan.

Our Easter lily, called the "Bermuda" lily, is in reality a native of Japan and China. In 1879 Japan sent us only $2000 worth of bulbs for growing them; but in 1895 the exports jumped to $40,000; by 1899 they reached $130,000, and they have been climbing steadily ever since, while the output from Bermuda is supposed to be a quarter less than it was a decade ago. In spite of heavy freights the Japanese bulbs could often be delivered here for half the price of the Bermuda product.—Country Life in America.

What Microbes Are.

Since Pasteur demonstrated the fact that many human diseases are due to minute living things which grow and multiply in our bodies, there has been a tendency to call all microscopic organisms, whether harmful or not, "germs" or "microbes" or "bacteria" indiscriminately. This confusion may be cleared by the statement that protozoa are the lowest form known of animals and that bacteria are the lowest known forms of plants, while "germs" and "microbes" may apply to the disease-causing forms in either group.—From Gary N. Calkins' "Protozoa and Disease" in the Century.

New Saccharine Plant.

The new saccharine plant discovered in South America contains a considerable quanaity of saccharine matter, is not fermentable, and is unusually sweet. The plant is herbaceous, growing to a height of eight to twelve inches, and its scientific name is Eupatorium rebandium. It is expected to prove of much industrial value. It was discovered by the director of the agricultural institute at Asuncion, and his experiments indicate that the sugar yielded is from twenty to thirty times as sweet as ordinary cane or beet sugar.

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

AN INTERESTING DISCOURSE BY THE REV. ROBERT MACKENZIE.

Subject: "The Trials and Triumph of Life"—The Outside and the Inside Sources of Strength—The Weakness of This Present Day—Life a Issue of Compromises

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Dr. Robert Mackenzie, pastor of the Rutgers Presbyterian Church, Manhattan, preached Sunday on "The Trials and Triumph of Life." His text was found in Acts xx:22-24: "And now, behold, I go bound in the spirit into Jerusalem, not knowing the things that shall befall me there. Save that the Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying that bonds and afflictions abide me. But none of these things move me, neither count my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the gospel of the grace of God." Dr. Mackenzie said:

Paul feels himself set to a definite purpose in life, something appointed to God and worthy of himself. He is determined to finish his course successfully. Each of us is called of God to live some definite purpose, to add by our lives to the sum of the good in this world, to do something and to be something for God. To accomplish this purpose Paul saw that he had to pass through many trials, temptations, difficulties. He is looking back upon those through which he has already come and forward to those he saw he must yet meet. He knew that bonds and afflictions awaited him if he pursued his present purpose further. He saw his life as a very stormy one. His friends sought to persuade him to change his course, to compromise a little with his purpose, to adapt himself more prudently to the ways of the world in which he found himself, to be less straightforward, and so escape those bonds and afflictions that threatened. He was not indifferent either to the dangers of the way or to the kindly interest of his friends; but he answers: "What mean ye to weep and to break mine heart? For I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die for the name of the Lord Jesus." Then the calm conclusion of our text: "None of these things move me." It is difficult to get up to the level of Paul, he is the most determined, uncompromising straight-on man in this book of great characters. Yet there are ordinary human steps leading to this level; all who will can rise.

"These things" of our text have not passed away with Paul. Trials are behind, bonds and afflictions are before every man that will make a worthy course across this life. When you build a ship for the North Atlantic you must take storms and icebergs into account and build accordingly. When you would build a boy for business, for honor, for goodness, for Christian service in this community, you must take "these things" into account. Last year's icebergs have melted in summer seas, but new ones have formed and will meet the sailor of this year. The North Atlantic is ever the same—a scene of storm and ice. The particular trials that overlook Paul may not fall on any of us, but others will come, bearing other names, equally disturbing to our souls. This world is ever the same—a scene of many trials. Only a few are exempt, only a few are permitted to stand with their hands at their back and their backs to the fire looking out upon the storm. There are such people. We are glad when old people can do this, but the young people who can do it, or do do it, are not to be envied, but pitied. Most men must go out and meet the storm of "these things"—opposition, competitions, disappointments, temptations—meet them and make their way through them, as best they can, and become men, and all the better men for meeting them.

"These things" move some men mightily; they seek to edge their way out of the storm, they change their course, compromise with their original purpose, choose some less strenuous way through life. Some young men form a purpose to go to college, when the bonds of mathematics and afflictions of Cicero's orations come between them and their purpose "these things" move them out of their course. They compromise with their purpose and look for an easier way. Some men go further, they finish their preparation, face their profession, meet the difficulties incident to any such beginning, complain, flinch, fall out discouraged, despairing, scarcely living, driftwood on the streets.

Some men, like Paul, are unduly moved by these things. These are not spared the storm nor does the storm beat less hard upon them; yet they keep their faces to it, keep to their purpose firmly, often bent like trees, but like trees well rooted, recover themselves; often like William Tell going through a pass of his native Alps on a narrow path cut in the face of the precipice, the mountain wind blowing a gale against him; unable to make progress against it, unable to stand against it, he lay down in the path, but he lay with his face to his goal and crawled to it. Men knowing their full share of the trials of life are yet able to say, each in his own measure, "None of these things moved me." Most of you here belong to that number. Your life in youth was not cast in easy places; your present life is not spent in sheltered places. Most of you were cast as young men into this, or some similar stormy community to make your own way. You have been met repeatedly by the storm of "these things" in business, in home and in your Christian life; yet you are here to-day with your faces to your purpose, your purpose well in hand, able to say after as well as before the storm, "None of these things move me."

How is this explained? Take the life of such men as Job, and Joseph and Daniel and Paul—men who have set before us examples of how much the human heart can bear and not break, what bonds and afflictions it can endure and not be unduly moved. Take the men and women of your own acquaintance and observation on whom these things have broken with full force and yet they are cheerful, sunny, sympathetic people, reaching a middle life of high honor and an old age of charity and faith and hope—people whom it is good to know, people who show into what rich coinage the rough ore of human nature can be minted. How is their triumph accounted for? By the fact that if life has its scenes of trial, life has also it sources of strength in which to endure and triumph over the trials.

After all, if you will think about it, this life is a scene of compensations. On the whole, "these things" are balanced by other things. On the whole, life is not so bad as we were taught to expect it; the fears of pessimism are not realized by healthy men; our young fears were larger than the experienced facts. "Oh! Yes," said a colored woman, "I have had a great many troubles in my life, most of which never happened." When they do happen we find that there have been compensating preparations in which to meet them. If nature smites the Norway and the Oregon pine trees with its north winds it lays the protecting moss on that side of the tree. If nature allures the animal to the Arctic it wraps and baps it in furs. Man is not neglected in this distribution of compensation, no trial has overtaken you more than is common to man, no trial is put upon you more than you are able to bear, with the trial there is some way of escape, of compensation. Both God and nature lay burdens on us, for life is a discipline for character in ourselves, for service for others; but neither God nor nature has any pleasure in seeing our shoulders stoop too soon, or our hearts break untimely. It is possible for us to hear these things and not be moved, for God and nature have ordained sufficient sources of strength to enable us to bear them.

There are outside sources: The young germ of wheat beginning to grow in the bleak winds of November or March finds itself supported by a little barrel of flour in the grain out of which it springs. The young caterpillar waking up to begin its life finds itself providentially deposited by its winged mother on some green leaf on which it can feed while yet too weak to forage for itself. Take your own children, you can count up "these things" of trial that been the child to an extent that would make you sigh with pity. They have come into a world fraught with pain, privation, dangers to body and to mind. They are wrapt in no furs, furnished with no weapons, provided with no stored up food in themselves. How can they bear "these things" and not be moved? How can they bear them and be happy? Yet they are happy. Scarcely is the tear dry on the little face when the wreathed smile of an angel comes there. For the child also draws its first strength from outside sources. "God hath set the solitary in families." God lets down on the child in normal society the protection and provision of home. This is the necessity and sanctity of the home; not only that it is Christian law, not only that it is moral law, but simply that it is natural law.

There are inside sources of strength. Neither God nor nature revels the child. By 9 o'clock nature withdraws her morning dews leaving the growing things to find new sources of strength in which to stand unmoved in the sultry or the stormy noon. Not now the outside dew but the inside sap. Nature giving the sprouting grain an outside supply for its first few days now leaves it to send its own roots into the earth, its green leaves into the air and by its own inward activities transmute them into life and growth. The first green leaf exhausted the caterpillar must now move off to find a new leaf for itself. From the children of men, too, God withdraws the early baptism. The youth must one day leave home and its protection and provision and by the exercise of his own powers wring a living for himself. If now he is to meet these things and not be unduly moved, if he is to meet them like a true man with courage and strength and triumph he must develop the sources of strength within himself.

Here exactly is the weakness of this present day. Every age has its own strength and pre-eminence. The strength of our day has been the discovery and application of the forces of nature, by art and science, to our daily living in all its branches. We have turned the bullock cart into the automobile, the tardy sickle into the steam harvester, the postman going three miles an hour with letters into the telegraph and the telephone. Yet it is always true that from the greatest strength falls a shadowing weakness. Our fathers had but few outside forces on which to rely. Not long were they allowed to lie in the cradle, not long to play in the nursery. Nature was rugged and rough with them. The old farm house stood far from its neighbor, drifts of snow or swollen streams often lay between. When the wintry night closed in there was no public place of amusement, no stirring procession of multitudes under the electric lights of the streets, but moonlight and shadows on the lonely country road. If the family would pass a genial evening they must develop the inside sources of the home, of the hearthstone in the log cabin, and find the comedies and tragedies of life on the stage of their own minds and hearts. No newspaper or magazine allured them out of themselves. There, in their own little world, at their own fireside, they thought out their politics, their literature and their theology. In education the schools were poorly furnished, the teacher but poorly trained, the text books but few and serving the successive members of the family in turn. If they were to be educated they must find their education by the painful development of their own powers of memory and reflection. You have seen pictures of the poor school house in which Daniel Wester or Henry Clay was trained, or, going a generation further back, we may think of the simple school in which George Washington or Patrick Henry was educated; yet out of such school houses came leaders who founded States, wrote constitutions, built a republic, grappled with the diplomacy of Europe; out of them came orators whose eloquence, though dead on the printed page, still thrill the reading soul. Gather them out of this primitive school house, closet them in the Colonial Congress in Philadelphia to fashion out of their own minds, their own destinies and that of their own nation and what was the result?

In religion the churches of yesterday were bare and cold, no fresco on the wall, no inward vision of spiritual things; no organ rolled its music to lead their praise; no gifted voices in a selected choir lifted them out of themselves on the waxen wings of Icarus; no grace of rhetoric made theology easy. They were left to the development of their own inward sources of praise, of prayer and of thought. And what Homeric characters they were! Jonathan Edwards in barren Stockbridge made himself the first philosopher of his age. It may well be feared that the church of to-day is doing for the young people just what the schools are doing for them, surrounding them with ever increasing outside religious props and stays—societies, clubs, brotherhoods, guilds, and now, to add to this, comes the threatening addition of a "scientific pedagogy" for the simplicity of the Sunday-school. Some of you were brought up in a Sunday-school where there were just two outside sources to help, the Bible and a question book without answers. You learned to know your Bible, you came out of that school into the church and into a Christian service that has filled the world with Christian philanthropy. The Sunday-schools of our children are furnished with a Vallombrosa of lesson leaves—primary, intermediate, quarterly, and the teachers with a variety of helps, ready made expositions, to be familiarized in the hour between breakfast and Sunday-school. Ask the average scholar to turn to the second chapter of Zephaniah or of Titus, and see the vain turning over of unfamiliar pages. What can you expect? How should they cultivate the inward sources of memory and reflection when you have excused them by supplying them with all conceivable outside supports that make memory and reflection superfluous. Do you remember that solemn parable of the seed falling on stony ground, quickly growing on the shallow soil and as quickly withering before the heat and the drought of the growing day because having exhausted the supply of the outside source, "it had no root in itself." As Christian men, let us lean less and less on these temporary and childish outside supports and develop these inward sources of thought, of reflection, of conscience, of high duty with which God has endowed us, that amid all "these things" of task and of trial we may rise as the sea gull rises against drowning wave, blinding spray, baffling wind, rises into the calm of the upper air by means of its own well disciplined wings.

When We Return to God.

You have seen the heavens gray with dull and leaden colored clouds, you have seen the earth chilly and comfortless under its drifts of unmelting snow; but let the sun shine, and then how rapidly does the sky resume its radiant blue, and the fields laugh with green grass and vernal flower.

So will it be even with a withered and a wasted life when we return to God and suffer Him to send His bright beams of light upon our heart. I do not mean that the pain or misery under which we are suffering will necessarily be removed—even for Christ it was not so; but peace will come and strength will come, and resignation will come, and hope will come—and we shall feel able to bear anything which God shall send, and though He slay us we still shall seek Him, and even if the blackest cloud of anguish seems to shroud His face from us, even on that cloud shall the rainbow shine.—F. W. Farrar.

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR MAY 8.

Subject: Watchfulness, Luke xii., 35-48—Golden Text, Luke xii., 37—Memory Verses, 35-36—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. The duty of watchfulness (vs. 35-40). 35. "Girded about." This is an allusion to the long robes of the East, which those who wear must bind up before they engage in any active employment." Jesus had just admonished them against undue anxiety about temporal affairs (vs. 22-32), and now He gives an admonition to watchfulness. Be active, diligent, determined, ready, let all handrances be taken out of the way. "Lights burning." The Master was likely to return at any hour of the night, and in order to be ready to receive Him their lights must be burning. 36. "From the wedding." The Jewish weddings were conducted with great pomp. The ceremony was usually performed in the night. The festivities lasted from three to seven days. "That when He cometh." As these servants waited, with girded loins and burning lights, already to meet their master and run at his bidding as soon as he approached, so we are to wait for the coming of our Master. Wait (1) with eager longing, and (2) with joyous expectation. "May open, immediately." Few will thus "open immediately." They will have something to do first, will have to get ready. They will need time to collect themselves.

37. "Blessed." Those who are ready are blessed and are highly honored by their Master. "When He cometh." Christ will return to all from the heavenly wedding at the end of the world, when He has taken to Himself His bride, the church, to each individual He comes when He stands suddenly before a man at the hour of death. "Shall find watching." We are to watch against temptations from within and without. "Gird himself; serve them." "Whatever we do for God He will do in return for us. It is unusual for masters to wait upon their servants, but "Jesus Christ was among His disciples as one that served." See John 13: 4, 5. This also signifies the joy with which they shall be received into the other world by the Lord Jesus, who has gone before to prepare for them, and has told them that His Father will honor them (John 12: 26). 38. "The second or third watch." The Jews had adopted the Roman custom of dividing the night into four watches. The first watch was from 6 to 9, the second from 9 to 12, the third from 12 to 3, the fourth from 3 to 6.

39. "Had known what hour." The householder's ignorance of the time when the thief would come is the reason why he does not watch. He cannot always keep awake, so he has to go to sleep and is robbed. But our ignorance is the reason for wakefulness, because we can keep spiritually awake all through life. The householder watches to prevent, but we to share in that for which the watch is kept. "Would have watched." "In the East the State punishes, but leaves the prevention and detection of theft and robbery to the individual interested. Hence the watchman is necessary and important everywhere." 40. "Be ye therefore ready." Always ready so he will never be taken unawares. Watchfulness insure readiness; readiness insures safety. Indifference marks the way to sin and despair. A scriptural preparation includes repentance and conversion. "Cometh; when ye think not." See 1 Thess. 5: 2; 2 Pet. 3: 10. We should resist the temptation to spiritual drowsiness. Nothing is much worse than a sleepy religion (Rev. 3: 16).

II. The faithful servant rewarded (vs. 41-44). 41. "Peter said." "This apostle was the one who afterward most needed the admonition (Matt. 26: 74), and in so bad a manner forgot it. Those who stand in most danger are often slowest to profit by words of warning." "Unto us, or even to all." Is meant for us as thine apostles, or for all men?

42. "Faithful and wise steward." The steward was a middle person between the master and slave, and had the care of the whole household. It was a post of confidence in which faithfulness was required. As the steward to the rest of the servants, so should the apostles stand with reference to other believers. Faithful comes before wise because the true wisdom of the heart comes from faithfulness. "Shall make ruler." That one would be ruler who had previously proven himself faithful and wise, who attended to his duties during his master's absence with the same fidelity that he did when he was present. "To give; meat." As God's stewards we should be ready to give out to others what he places at our disposal.

43. "Blessed." He is blessed in his deed; he rejoices because he is found in the faithful performance of his duties by his lord, and he is blessed with a high promotion. "Shall find so doing." We see here what Christ means by watching; "not gazing up into the heavens for signs, but the faithful performance of duty." 44. "Over all." So each saint owns all of God's possessions, even now (1 Cor. 3: 21, 22). "The reward is both outward and inward; more glories and blessing and joys, and larger capacities for usefulness and enjoyment." To him that hath shall be given.

III. The profligate servant punished (vs. 45-48). 45. "Say in his heart." If, instead of being faithful, the servant begins to plan wickedness and to actually enter into sin, a different "portion" will be appointed him upon his Lord's return. "Delayeth His coming." The fact that Christ's coming is delayed causes the love of many to wax cold (2 Pet. 3: 3, 4). "To eat and drink." Self-indulgence is a very common sin. "To be drunken." This was not only a common and terribly destructive sin in Christ's time, but it is the same to-day. 46. "When he looketh not." The Lord will come suddenly and call every one to an account. "In sunder." This was a most terrible method of executing criminals, anciently. "With the unbelievers." Read Rev. 21: 8. This verse shows the awful doom of the ungodly. The worst forms of punishment are used to show the punishment that will come to the unrepentant sinner.

47. "Which knew." Either actually, from received information, or, virtually, because the revelation was within reach. God will hold us accountable not only for what we know, but for what we might have known by putting forth a proper effort. "Be beaten." This is a reference to the Jewish custom of beating guilty parties. "Many stripes." Shall be severely and justly punished. Those who have many privileges, who are often warned, who have clear gospel light, and yet do not repent, shall be far more severely punished than others. Exceptional guilt and punishment (Luke 10: 13; James 4: 17; 2 Pet. 2: 21). 48. "That knew not." That knew not fully, for there is no such thing as absolute moral ignorance (Rom. 1: 20; 2: 14, 15). The reference here is to those who had comparatively little knowledge.

Expenses are Low.

[illegible] expenditures of the United States government are much less in proportion to population than those of any other leading nations of the world. This fact is shown by a statement just published by the department of commerce and labor, through the bureau of statistics, showing the population, revenues, expenditures and indebtedness of the principal countries of the world. It shows that while the expenditure of the United States, with 80,000,000 of people, is $640,000,000; that of the United Kingdom, with 40,000,000 of people, is $898,000,000; that of France, with 39,000,000 people, $705,000,000; that of Germany, with 60,000,000 people, $653,000,000.

The colored delegates, of which there are seventy-five, will make an effort to have one of their race elected bishop.

Expenses are Low.

The expenditures of the United States government are much less in proportion to population than those of many other leading nations of the world. This fact is shown by a statement just published by the department of commerce and labor, through the bureau of statistics, showing the population, revenues, expenditures and wealthiness of the principal countries of the world. It shows that while the expenditure of the United States, with 80,000,000 of people, is $640,000,000; that of the United Kingdom, with 40,000,000 people, is $898,000,000; that of France, with 39,000,000 people, $605,000,000; that of Germany, with 56,000,000 people, $553,000,000.

Two Suicides.

Lewis B. Rafield, a resident of Montevallo, committed suicide at his home Friday cutting his throat with a razor. He was found in a dying condition by a negro who heard his groans.

He then asked why he did such a thing he said that his wife was going to leave and that there was no peace for him on earth.

He died two hours after being found. The man's wife is dying.

Mrs. Sid Marsh, of Clintonville, committed suicide Friday night. Deceased was prominent in social circles. The cause is assigned for the rash act. Mr. and Mrs. Marsh had been at supper, when the woman left the table. She soon returned and, resuming her place at the table, swallowed the contents of a box of strychnine. In a few minutes, while gasping for breath, she told her husband that she was going to leave him.

The Sloss company has six or seven furnaces in operation, and each furnace is turning out 200 tons and more daily. Other companies report good production. The shipments equal the production.

Work on new furnaces is being pushed, two iron makers being under way, one at Woodward, belonging to the Woodward Iron Company, and the other at Ensley, belonging to the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad Company.

Up to July 1st sales have already been made which will require almost steady production, while a few orders have been booked for delivery after that period, and there is an inquiry for iron which guarantees a steady business to the first of November.

The Canal Commission's Work.

The sanitary officers connected with the isthmian canal commission find they have a task on their hands. They have returned from a month's trip to the isthmus, where they went over the field. Nowhere were there the commonest facilities for the preservation of health. In all the isthmus the doctors found but one bath room.

So far as the quarters for employes along the route of the proposed canal were concerned nothing for the preservation of health had been considered. The first step will be the creation of a water supply and sewerage system. There will have to be medical attendants for forty thousand people.

JAPANESE VICTORY

Russians Beaten in First Battle on Land.

After five days of fighting, largely with artillery, the first Japanese army, under General Kuroki, has forced a crossing of the Yalu river, and with an infantry charge, covering a frontage of four miles, drove the Russians from Chiu Tien Cheng and the heights opposite Wiju. The Japanese turned the left flank of the Russian position and swept away the new front interposed by the Russians.

The twelfth division of the Japanese army was chosen to make the first crossing of the Yalu. It began on Friday by driving the Russians from their position eight miles above Wiju, and the point selected for the crossing. This division constructed a bridge and Saturday morning began crossing. The entire division passed over.

The Japanese captured twenty-eight quick-firing guns, much ammunition, more than twenty officers and many non-commissioned officers and men as prisoners. It is reported that General Sasoitch and General Kashtolinsky were wounded. Our casualties number about 700 and their loss is more than 800 men.

The Russians were forced to abandon Antung. They burned the town and retreated.

The Russian report of the battle acknowledges defeat, but ascribes it to superior numbers and the aid of Japanese war ships.

Work of the Japanese.

The special commission appointed to inquire into the cause of the sinking of the battleship Petropaviovsk has established beyond a doubt the fact that the battleship struck a mine laid by the enemy within the radius of the customary evolutions of our fleet on the occasion of its sorties into the outer roadstead to meet the enemy.

Japan's Treatment of Prisoners.

The advanced position taken by the Japanese in the adoption of humane rules of warfare shown in a report to the state department from United States Minister Griscom at Tokio, in which he encloses a communication to himself from Baron Komura, the Japanese minister of foreign affairs. The ministers shows that Japan is the first country to give full effect to the elaborate code of laws governing war laid down by The Hague conference.

He announces that there has already been put into operation by the Japanese the rule of war regulating the dispatch of letters, money orders and valuables between the prisoners of war and their friends in their own country. The Japanese government also has ordered that such prisoners be supplied free with postal facilities, communication and means of receiving gifts. Also they are not subjected to any railway charges.

At Pekin it is declared that Russian officials are circulating a story accusing China of having made a secret treaty with Japan regarding the port of Amoy, and the province of Fu Kien and containing the statement that prominent Chinese and Japanese officials have left Shanghai for Amoy to arrange the preliminaries of the treaty. HEAVY LOSS BY FIRE

Sustained by Birmingham on Sunday Morning.

Birmingham Sunday morning suffered its most destructive fire since the early nineties, when the six-story Caldwell hotel and a block of buildings were destroyed.

Sunday's result is three handsome four-story brick buildings on the south side of First avenue, between Twentieth and Twenty-first streets, in the heart of the business district, and making up a part of one of the most substantial business blocks in the city, with another smaller building almost totally destroyed. It now appears as if new structures will be erected for probably two hundred feet along First avenue.

The loss from the fire is estimated to be nearly $150,000, with between $75,000 and $85,000 insurance.

The fire started in the one-story establishment of A. T. Killian, wholesale grocer and produce merchant at No. 2023 Morris avenue, from an unknown cause. The building occupied partly by Killian is a one-story brick structure belonging to parties in Mobile. The flames originated in the rear of this store, spreading to the place of business of P. Giacoppazzi, No. 2021 Morris avenue, which was also a one-story building.

When the flames were discovered they were shooting out of the rear of the Killian and the Giacoppazzi buildings. This latter contained a large stock of fireworks. It was just before daylight and the shooting flames lighted up the skies brilliantly and the fire could be seen for miles.

All of the apparatus in the fire department of Birmingham, including the aerial truck, was brought into service.

The principal losers are:

	Damage.	Insurance.
John W. Tomlinson	$10,000	13,000
Mrs. E. W. Turner	10,000	10,000
Geo. P. Harrison	30,000	16,000
Caldwell & Meinetts (office building)	10,000	20,000
P. Giacoppazzi	4,500	3,500
Turn Verein Society	5,000	2,500
T. V. Beardman	25,000	10,000
W. D. Colby	7,500	5,000
Underwriters' Real Estate & Ins. Co.	5,000	3,000
Attorneys and others, including Confederate Veterans	15,000	5,000
Robert Garry & Co. (damage by smoke and water)	5,000	5,000

It is claimed by the owners of the office building that the structure can be repaired and put in good condition for the sum of $7,500.

Colonel Tomlinson states that his building will be rebuilt immediately.

Colonel W. H. Denson, who had offices in the Harrison building, was probably one of the heaviest losers by the fire. Besides his office fixtures he lost a library of 2500 volumes which he valued at $10,000, his insurance amounting to only $3,000. Included in the library of Colonel Denson was a complete set of the Alabama reports, there being eighteen volumes of the old series and 137 volumes of the "First Alabama Reports."

"I have lost all of professional life practically," declares Colonel Denson. "There are between 2500 and 3000 attorneys at law in Alabama, but there are only 87 sets of reports left. There were also included in my library a full set of the Reports of the British Parliament of 1857, the time of the monetary crises." A number of other attorneys lost their libraries also.

Gadsden sporting men have organized the Etowah Game and Fish Protective Association, which has for its aims the protection of all kinds of game and the encouragement of stocking the streams of the county with fish by the government.

On account of the increased receipts at the Anniston postoffice for the last year the salary of the postmaster will be increased another $100 when the apportionments are made in June. In the matter of postoffice revenue Anniston is the fifth and perhaps the fourth office in the state, Birmingham, Mobile, Montgomery and possibly Selma alone exceeding her.

Lee County Improvements.

The new Phenix-Girard bank, with a capital stock to begin with of $25,000, will open its doors next week. It is reported that a wholesale house is to be established at an early date. Much building is going on. The Columbus Railroad Company now operates car lines through Phenix City and Girard, and the opening up of these new lines has aided much in the development of the two cities.

At Opelika W. O. Harrell is moving the ruins of the Planters' warehouse burned some time ago, and it is rumored will build new stores on the lot. He has a large wholesale house in contemplation. Colonel Lum Dukes will soon erect two stores.

The Cunman county democratic executive committee has nominated Asa B. Fuller to fill the vacancy on the democratic ticket caused by the death of S. H. Herrin, nominee for clerk of the circuit court. Petitions bearing the names of over 750 voters were presented asking for a primary.

TREASURER ROBBED.

Marengo County's Funds Stolen by Masked Men.

Marengo county's treasurer, Mr. Brasfield, was in his office at a late hour Friday night in the court house at Demopolis preparing his books and other things so as to be in readiness for court this week, and standing with his back turned to the door and did not hear the footsteps of any one approaching.

He turned to face three pistols pointed toward his head by three masked men, who commanded him to throw up his hands. The safe was open at the time and while two held him up the third proceeded to empty the safe of its contents. After getting all that they could, something like $5,000, with a pistol still held upon Mr. Brasfield they backed out of the court house with their boodle and that was the last thing seen or heard of them.

Mr. Brasfield immediately notified Sheriff Hasty and his deputies, who made every effort in their power to catch the thieves. Mr. Brasfield has held the office for the past eight years. The robbers are supposed to be white men.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.

AMONG LAWMAKERS

At the Seat of Government at Washington.

APRIL 28TH.

President Pro Tem Frye adjourned the senate sine die at 2:p. m. today, the hour fixed by resolution of the two houses of congress. The occurrence was devoid of unusual incident and the final close of the session was but slightly different from the end of an ordinary day's sitting.

The senate began its day's work at 10:30 a. m., but the greater part of the time was devoted to a political debate.

The only important acts of legislation during the day were the presentation and acceptance of conference reports on the Panama canal government and emergency river and harbor bills. Neither report aroused debate.

The closing day of the second session of the house of the Fifty-eighth congress was made notable by the demonstration which was evoked by a resolution offered by Mr. Williams, the minority leader, testifying to the courtesy and impartial manner in which Speaker Cannon had presided over the house.

Many conference reports were agreed to on bills which had been in dispute between the two houses. The only debate of any importance was on the bill providing for the restoration to the naval academy of three cadets who had been dismissed for hazing, the house voting overwhelmingly against it.

At 2:10 the gavel fell and the fifty-eighth congress concluded.

ADDED TO THE NAVY.

Uncle Sam Has Another Cruiser, the California.

The armored cruiser California was launched Thursday at the ship yards of the Union Iron works. She was christened by Miss Florence May Pardee, daughter of Governor Pardee, of the state of California.

The cruiser California is supposed to embody the latest and best in vessels of her class. There are to be five vessels like her. She will cost complete $5,000,000. Her principal dimensions are: Length on load water line 503 feet, extreme breadth 69 1-2 feet, mean draught 24 feet and displacement 13,400 tons. She will have a belt of steel armor 7 1-2 inches wide on the water line and varying in thickness from 3 1-2 to 6 inches, as well as the 5-inch casement above the belt of armor for 232 feet of the vessel's length.

The total number of bills introduced in the house during the session just ended was 15,756 and in the senate 5,087. Most of these were of a private nature, involving appropriations for claims or pensions. The total number of private laws approved by the president up to noon Friday was 1441. The total number of public laws 181, and the total number of resolutions which have become law 37. The aggregate number of bills was not above the average of a long session, but the number of private bills passed was far in excess of those generally enacted during a similar term. The total number of reports on bills in the house alone was 2943, or nearly double the usual number. The amount of public business transacted was below the average.

The naval board appointed to investigate the circumstances attending the bursting of two 8-inch guns on the Iowa February 5 last, has reported to the secretary that the board finds that in the firing of the guns all precautions were taken. ON the banks of the Yalu far away the Japs drove the Russians before them, and it is stated that from 3000 to 4000 men were killed.

THE stationery required by the Board of Registrars has been sent out to them, so that they may have time to prepare themselves for the registration of voters by July 1, 1904.

ON the first page of this paper will be found a letter from Judge Pratt of Bibb county, exposing the falsity of a statement published in the Birmingham Union. This is only one of many malicious and false charges that are constantly being placed before the people of Chilton, and it is worth while to reflect that while it is easy for evil disposed persons to make false charges, it is not always to at once produce the evidence to deny them. We do not suppose that anyone pays much attention to X Ray, whose nom de plume is incorrectly spelled, he is ex everything.

Falakto.

Farmers in this community are about done planting and are anxious for rain that they may go on with their plowing; gardens are suffering for rain also. Rev. J. L. I must tell you of our Sabbath school, that must not be left out; we have a large school and regular attendance. The church and community seem thoroughly aroused to the interest of the school. We challenge any county church to show us a finer school than ours. We have so much to be thankful for, yet we murmur sometimes.

A SUBSCRIBER.

NOTICE AS TO SCHOOL DISTRICTS

Clanton, May 3, 1904

We, the Re districting Board of Chilton county, have this day completed the work of laying out the county into school districts. We have exerted our best efforts and energies, with the best information that we could gather from the several communities in the county, to so locate the school districts, that in each district there can be a good school, provided the people will come together and put forth the proper efforts and use the advantages which this change has given them.

It is of vital importance that every one should know at an early date the district in which he or she is placed, and this they may know with very little trouble, for as the law provides, we have written out a description of each district, giving the name and number of each and submitted the same to the Probate Judge to be recorded in his office.

The law requires the qualified voters in each district to meet on the first Saturday in July, 1904, and elect three district trustees, and these trustees must, on the first of August, 1904, take the enumeration of the children between the ages of seven and twenty one in this district and report the same to the county superintendent. Hence it is very needful that you should know your district, otherwise you will lose your appropriation for the next two years.

The poll tax in each school district will be used for that district only, so you should know your district, that you can inform the Tax Collector the name and number of it when you pay the poll tax, if you fail to do this, the Collector will not know to which district to apply the same.

We earnestly trust and insist that every parent who has children will put forth energy and determination to inform themselves on these vital points, and make stronger efforts and greater sacrifices than ever before to educate their boys and girls who are to be our future men and women.

Very respectfully submitted,
Alex Glasscock, Chm., R. F. Sims,
J. W. Moore, Sec., Redistricting Board.

P. S. It would be well for all persons interested to clip the above information for future reference.

FREE RURAL DELIVERY.

FILE YOUR APPLICATIONS FOR NEW ROUTES.

Editor Banner, Clanton, Ala.

Dear Sir:—We have now fifty-six rural delivery routes in the Fourth Congressional District of Alabama already established and between thirty and forty petitions pending.

It is my ambition to have one hundred routes established if possible, by January the first. It is difficult to overstate the great importance of this service to our rural communities, and it is of almost as much, if not quite as much importance to the towns from which the service originates.

I have been making an earnest effort to have a special agent in my district to investigate the pending petitions, and I now inclose you a copy of a letter from the Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, which explains the delay. From this letter I infer that some time during the summer I can safely rely upon a special agent.

They claim that preference is given as far as practicable to priority of filing. In order to get this service extended to communities which do not now have it and which have no petitions pending, requests should be sent in to me as soon as possible. I will furnish any one desiring the same with all necessary blanks and information and will file the petitions promptly in the order in which they are received.

I shall make an earnest effort to have a special agent in my district in the summer to remain there until his work is finished, but in any event it will be of advantage to any community desiring this service to forward petitions just as soon as possible. With just a little more help I can have the one hundred routes established by the first of next January. Can we not put our shoulders to the wheel and get it done? Yours very truly,

SYDNEY J. BOWIE.

Whooping Cough.

"In the spring of 1901 my children had whooping cough," says Mrs. D. W. Capps, of Capps, Ala. "I used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy with the most satisfactory results. I think this is the best remedy I have ever seen for whooping cough." This remedy keeps the cough loose, lessens the severity and frequency of the coughing spells and counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. For sale by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton; A. Horn, Thorsby.

TRUE HAPPINESS.

What is true happiness? Is it not that cherished goal to which we all are continually striving? Some work and save, spending their lives hoarding up the yellow dust, and for what purpose? It is to obtain happiness, but alas! mistaken creatures, how they must be disappointed when they stand on the downward plain of life, slipping farther and farther away from the goal of their ambition. Happiness cannot be bought for gold, though standing on the brink of the grave and looking far beyond we scarcely realize the mistake. We still love the yellow metal. When we awaken in the morning do we see the beautiful sun rise, as the say is, tinted in the East, or do we hear choruses in the neighboring trees, or see the budding flowers as they burst forth in all their glorious effulgence, nor do we pause to thank Nature's God for all his contributions for our comfort. Some expect to buy happiness with the fruits of their life's work. Others think happiness is only to be found on the dizzy heights of fame, and spend all the energy of their youth, sacrifice health, money and friends to the god of their ambition, only to find the populace fickle and that fame is an empty bubble which, "like a circle in the water, never ceases to enlarge itself until it vanishes to naught." True happiness is in doing our duty to ourselves and to our fellowman. There is no feeling so comforting as the full realization of having done our duty. It is our duty to make all the money we can when we can do it honestly, but we should spend it judiciously and in a charitable way. We should strive to cultivate our talents and develop them to the fullest extent, and thus use them as our unbiased conscience dictates. If we wish to be happy we must live as naturally as possible, we must live in communication with nature, where we can ever imbibe the true and correct ideas of life. Contentment is the boon we all crave, for if we are truly content we are happy, and to be contented we must feel that we have done our duty, and be satisfied with the life we have lived.

Our home down on the farm should be the happiest and dearest place on earth to us, and dear readers may each of you strive to make it a refuge from all the temptations, cares and trials which so often assail us. Remember there is always room for improvement, and each to morrow should find us better than to day.

If this escapes the waste basket I will try to do better next week. Success to the dear old Banner and love to its many readers.

8 Cents

Eight cents a pound is what a young woman paid for twelve pounds of flesh.

She was thin and weak and paid one dollar for a bottle of Scott's Emulsion, and by taking regular doses had gained twelve pounds in weight before the bottle was finished.

Eight cents a pound is cheap for such valuable material. Some pay more, some less, some get nothing for their money. You get your money's worth when you buy Scott's Emulsion.

We will send you a little free.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, May 2, 1904

Last week was a hay making and hay raking one for the Democrats in the House of Representatives. They placed the Republicans on the spit and toasted them to a rich brown. In the first place the Hon. John Sharp Williams, the able and vigilant floor leader of the Minority in the House, caught the Republicans napping in the committee on the judiciary, and when there was a majority of Democrats present, and obtained favorable reports on both his resolutions aimed at the vitals of this Republican administration. One of those resolutions requested the Attorney General to inform the House whether any investigation was ever had at his suggestion, of the so-called Anthracite Coal Trust, and to send to the House all reports, papers and documents bearing on the case. The other resolution requested the Attorney General to inform the House whether any criminal prosecutions have been instituted by the Department of Justice against the individuals or corporations who were adjudged recently by the Supreme Court of the United States, in the Northern securities case, to be guilty of having violated the laws of the United States, and to send to the House all papers and documents bearing upon any prosecutions inaugrated or about to be inaugrated in that behalf.

These resolutions were sleeping peacefully in the pigeon holes of the desk of the Republican chairman of that committee, and there the Republicans intended they should sleep and die of inanition or be smothered to death. They did not want them ever to see the light of day, because they knew their recalitrant Attorney General had not taken any action and would not take any action in either case. When it became known that John Sharp Williams had dug them out of the committee with a favorable report, and that the committee on rules could not stifle them on account of the fact that they now come up as privileged matter, there was consetration on the Republican side, and many quick conferences and much wagging of heads. It was all too late. The mischief was done and their Attorney General will be shown up as a tool of the trusts and recreant to his oath of office, for which he ought to be impeached. Let the people of the country rejoice at a leadership on the Democratic side endowed with vigalance, brains and patriotism.

The next gun shot the Republicans received was on last Saturday when the Hon. W. Bourke Cockran, of New York, simply tore the innards out of them and strewed them along the floor of the House. It was a great speech and aroused the most intense enthusiasm on the Democratic side of the House and the deepest gloom on the Republican side. Mr. Cockran reviewed the whole gamut of Republican legislation on the tariff question, the trust question, and on the rottenness of in the departments and the refusal of the Republicans to investigate them and give the people the benefit of such investigation to the end that the light may pour into the dark places and the guilty may be punished. He arraigned them, he lashed them, he scored them and blistered them in language that fairly sizzed with venom and invective and bristled with facts that were irrefutable. The Republicans sank lower into their seats than they have been wont to sit for many a day. Several of the old dowager statesman on the Republican side, like Grosvenor, Payne and Dalzell, essayed to interrupt him with questions and statements, but on each interruption they went to their seats limping. He had flattened out old man Grosvenor and old man Payne, and made them look like thirty cents' worth of dog meat. He was a human buzz saw in rapid motion, and any Republican with the temerity to interrupt him, had the sympathy and commiseration of the House. The climax of the dramatic scene, however, came when Dalzell interrupted him to state that he had understood that Mr. Cockran had received large pay for his speeches for McKinley in the campaign of 1896. When Dalzell again arose and said he had been informed by a Democratic member of the House of the accusation he had made, the storm broke over his head in real earnest. Mr. Cockran rushed down the aisle shouting, with his arms raised above his head, "name him," "name him," "name him," and the entire Democratic side joined in the chorus, "name him," until pandemonium reigned and no such dramatic scene has been enacted on the floor of the House during this session. When Dalzell refused to name him, then with the most withering scorn, Mr. Cockran turned to him and said that any man who made that confession could not again interrupt him or come voluntary within his vision.

A Sure Thing.

It is said that nothing is sure except death and taxes, but that is not altogether true. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption is a sure cure for all lung and throat troubles. Thousands can testify to that. Mrs. C. B. VanMetre of Shepherdtown, W. Va., says "I had a severe case of Bronchitis and for a year tried everything I heard of, but got no relief. One bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery then cured me absolutely." It's infallible for Croup, Whooping Cough, Grip, Pneumonia and Consumption. Try it. Mrs. Bessie Hines departed this life last Thursday morning. She went to Mr. Albert Wilkins, just a short distance from her home, and was standing on the door steps talking to Mrs. Wilkins, and by some means her foot slipped and she fell her full length on the ground, and when she got up Mrs. Wilkins asked her if she was hurt. She replied that she was not, and then in a few moments she fell again and her sweet soul went to rest She leaves a husband and one little baby to mourn and grieve for her, and may God bless the father and little babe. She is gone, although she was loved and, with the angels now she lives, and a place is vacant in their home which never can be filled.

An Open Letter.

From the Chapin, S. C., News: Early in the spring my wife and I were taken with diarrhoea and so severe were the pains that we called a physician who prescribed for us, but his medicines failed to give any relief. A friend who had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy on hand gave each of us a dose and we at once felt the effects. I procured a bottle and before using the entire contents we were entirely cured. It is a wonderful remedy and should be found in every household. H. O. Bailey, editor. This remedy is for sale by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton; A. Hora, Thorsby.

SCIENCE NOTES.

Thunder clouds sometimes reach a thickness of eight miles, with the varying strata of damp mist and frozen snow and ice particles.

The most prized of the singing insects of Japan is a black beetle called "suzumushi," or "insect bell." Its singing resembles the dainty sound of a sweet-toned bell.

The heat lost by radiation from bare pipes containing steam at one hundred pounds pressure has been estimated by Prof. S. P. Thompson to be that of about two tons of coal a year for each ten square feet of pipe surface.

Carbon monoxeid has been recently found to play a more important part in poisoning by tobacco smoke than nicotine. This poisonous gas forms a considerable part of the smoke, and, as much of the smoke from cigarettes is inhaled, it is thought to explain the harmfulness of this use of tobacco.

A new system of wireless telegraphy is based on a detector of electric waves described by W. Schloemilch, a German. The detector depends on the property that when electric waves fall on a polarized electrolytic cell placed in circuit with a source of current of slightly higher electromotive force the current in the circuit is increased from some cause.

Westrumite, the invention of Herr van Westrum, is a mixture of oil, which may be diluted as desired, and sprinkled over a road with an ordinary watering cart. The water evaporates, leaving the westrumite as a moist film, which absolutely prevents the arising of dust. Tested in London on a dry roadway where every vehicle raised clouds of dust, the material so effected the surface that several automobiles at highest speed raised no dust whatever.

The camera records of human emotions obtained at Geneva by Dr. E. Magnin and M. Edward Flegenheimer, are of remarkable artistic and scientific value. The experiments have been made upon a very susceptible hypnotic subject, who has been influenced by both musical and oral suggestion, and the entire range of human passions—joy, anger, fear, sadness, gluttony, greed, etc.—have been recorded in about five hundred photographs of the woman under the various forms of suggestion. The intensity of the expressions is said to have been rarely equaled by the great artists.

Fox Farm a Failure.

A gentleman by the name of Skillings of Bangor recently started a new industry on an island off the coast between Machias and Jonesport, Me. This was fox raising. He believed that there was money to be made in raising foxes for their hides and so leased what is known as Triton island some distance off the coast. Having secured the island he went west and bought about sixty of the finest furred and most hardy foxes he could find, paying for some of them as high as $500 apiece. These he placed on the island last fall and started his fox farm with every prospect that his novel plan would be a success.

Of course, the island being some distance from the land it was impossible for the foxes to get off and so fences were not necessary. This winter came with its cold weather and gradually the water between Triton island and the main land closed slowly in until finally the wide passage was covered with thick ice which could support a man or a team, for that matter.

All this had been going on so quietly that Mr. Skillings had quite failed to think of what this rapidly forming ice might mean to his new industry, and one morning he awoke to find that every fox owned had escaped from the island to the main land and had taken to the heavy growth of timber which covers much of this section of the coast. Mr. Skillings instituted searches and scoured the surrounding country, but he has not succeeded in recovering one of the animals. The 60 foxes, many of which were extremely valuable, aggregated an amount of many thousand of dollars and the loss gives every indication of being a total one.—Portland Express.

An Exhorbitant Dentist.

High prices often prevail in frontier towns, and those who live in new settlements become accustomed to the charges and think little about it. A man who recently returned from the Klondike tells a good story.

"People get used to paying big money for trifles," he said, "and two dollars for a box of sardines or five dollars for a pound of bad coffee came to be regarded as reasonable prices. But once I had the surprise of hearing an unexpectedly low price named. It was like this: I had a jumping toothache—was nearly wild with it—and went to a shanty where I was told there was a dentist. A rough-looking fellow told me that he was the dentist and I asked him to draw my tooth. He looked me over, got his forceps fastened on my tooth, and yanked it out after a couple of hard twists.

"How much?" I asked.

"Well, two dollars, I guess," said the dentist.

I paid him, although my jaw still ached badly.

"That's the cheapest thing I've seen round here," I remarked, as I gave him the money.

"Well," he said, "I thought I'd make it low, because on account of the bad light I pulled the wrong tooth."

I had to go the next day and have the bad tooth out, and he made matters square by charging me ten dollars.—New York Tribune.

"PE-RU-NA," A VALUABLE PREPARATION," WRITES DR. KEMBALL.

Most of the Ailments Peculiar to the Female Sex Are Due to Catarrh of the Pelvic Organs.

Rachael J. Kemball, M. D., 334 Virginia St., Buffalo, N. Y., is a graduate of the University of Buffalo, class 1884, and has been in the practice of medicine in that city since then. She writes as follows:

"My conviction, supported by experience, is that Peruna is a valuable preparation for all catarrhal affections. I have taken one bottle of Peruna myself and just feel fine. I shall continue to take it."—Rachael J. Kemball, M.D.

Peruna has cured thousands of cases of pelvic weakness. As a rule, however, before Peruna is resorted to several other remedies have been tried in vain. A great many of the patients have taken local treatment, submitted themselves to surgical operations, and taken all sorts of doctor's medicine, without any result.

The reason of so many failures is the fact that diseases peculiar to the female sex are not commonly recognized as being caused by catarrh. These organs are lined by mucous membranes. Any mucous membrane is subject to catarrh.

Catarrh of one organ is exactly the same as catarrh of any other organ. What will cure catarrh of the head will also cure catarrh of the pelvic organs. Peruna cures these cases simply because it cures the catarrh.

Most of the women afflicted with pelvic diseases have no idea that their trouble is due to catarrh. The majority of the people think that catarrh is a disease confined to the head alone.

This is not true. Catarrh is liable to attack any organ of the body, throat, bronchial tubes, lungs, stomach, kidneys and especially the pelvic organs.

Many a woman has made this discovery after a long siege of useless treatment. She has made the discovery that her disease is catarrh, and that Peruna can be relied upon to cure catarrh wherever located.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

September 27th will be "apple day" at the world's fair. This idea originated with Mr. John T. Stinson, superintendent of pomology, department of agriculture for the world's fair. He suggested that an "apple day" be named, on which every visitor to the world's fair should be presented with a few eating apples. The apples to be given away on "apple day" will be chiefly of the Grimes Golden, Jonathan, Malden's Blush and Fulton varieties, all of which will be ripe and ready. Every one eating an apple on that day will be requested, through the literature presented with the fruit, to join the apple consumers' league. The management expects to have about 300,000 persons in attendance if the day be bright. Estimating the attendance at 300,000 and allowing three or four apples to each guest, we have, in round numbers, 1,000,000 apples to be given away. There are 300 apples on an average to a barrel and 150 barrels to a car load. A very little figuring will show that more than twenty car loads of the fruit will be required.

The richest preserves of the noblest game of Asia will be at the mercy of the "yellow heathens" if the Japs succeed in taking the island of Askold. Askold is 30 miles from Vladivostock and several great Russian nobles established there preserves for the famous Siberian deer, the last of the genus. Only a very few are allowed to be shot by the noblemen, paying dearly for the privilege, and their number was estimated at 3,000 before the war. Aside from their flesh, the deer are valuable on account of their most beautiful coat, and particularly on account of their antlers. These horns are used by the Chinese and Japs for medicinal purposes. The horns of the deer sell for 500 rubles a pair.

The discovery is announced of a wonderful tree found growing in the west of Africa. The extraordinary proportions of a trunk four feet in diameter with a height of only one foot make the plant look like a round table. The tree never has more than two leaves, and those are the seed leaves, which appeared when the plant first began to grow, and which it never sheds or replaces with others. They are in themselves remarkable productions, often attaining a length of six feet with a breadth of from two to two and a half feet, each being cut into numerous ribbon-like segments. The flowers form crimson clusters something like those of the larch.

Since 1895 England has been involved in fourteen more or less serious wars. During the last nine years they have cost her $1,250,000,000, and during the same period she has spent about $2,000,000,000 more on the normal expenditures for buildings and maintaining war vessels, barracks and troops, etc.

Paul Dwight Moody, 24 years old, youngest son of the late Dwight Lyman Moody, seems inclined to follow in the footsteps of his father and become an evangelist. He is teacher of Bible study in Mount Hermon school for boys near Boston. He is also teaching English there. The young man is more tolerant of so-called liberal thought than was his distinguished father.

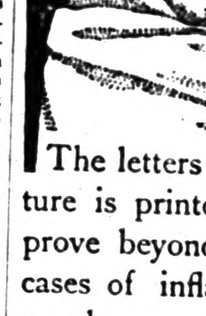
The leading Jap actor, Kawakami, was robbed of a diamond-studded watch, worth $1,000, a present from the czar of Russia, who took a liking to the Jap when the latter made a tour of the empire. Kawakami did not mind the loss much and was more astonished than overjoyed when, next day, he received back his watch, with a letter signed "Pickpocket." "Our guild has ordered me to return this infamous bauble," wrote the patriotic cutpurse. "We will not smudge ourselves with contraband from the enemy."

The letters of Miss Merkley, whose picture is printed above, and Miss Claussen, prove beyond question that thousands of cases of inflammation of the ovaries and womb are annually cured by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—Gradual loss of strength and nerve force told me something was radically wrong with me. I had severe shooting pains throught the pelvic organs, cramps and extreme irritation compelled me to seek medical advice. The doctor said that I had ovarian trouble and ulceration, and advised an operation. I strongly objected to this and decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I soon found that my judgment was correct, and that all the good things said about this medicine were true, and day by day I felt less pain and increased appetite. The ulceration soon healed, and the other complications disappeared and in eleven weeks I was once more strong and vigorous and perfectly well.

"My heartiest thanks are sent to you for the great good you have done me."—Sincerely yours, MISS MARGARET MERKLEY, 275 Third St., Milwaukee, Wis.

Miss Claussen Saved from a Surgical Operation.



"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It seems to me that all the endorsements that I have read of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound do not express one-half of the virtue the great medicine really possesses. I know that it saved my life and I want to give the credit where it belongs. I suffered with ovarian trouble for five years, had three operations and spent hundreds of dollars on doctors and medicines but this did not cure me after all.

"However, what doctors and medicines failed to do, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did. Twenty bottles restored me to perfect health and I feel sure that had I known of its value before, and let the doctors alone, I would have been spared all the pain and expense that fruitless operations cost me. If the women who are suffering, and the doctors do not help them, will try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, they will not be disappointed with the results."—MISS CLARA M. CLAUSSEN, 1307 Penn St., Kansas City, Mo.

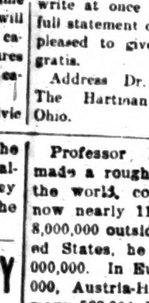
In Europe Russia has 5,500,000, Austria-Hungary 1,860,000, Germany 568,000, Roumania 300,000, Great Britain 200,000, Turkey 120,000, Holland 97,000, France 77,000, Italy 50,000, Bulgaria 31,000, Switzerland 12,000, Greece 6,000, Servia 5,000, Denmark 4,000, Sweden 3,500, Belgium 3,000, Spain 2,500. To this creed belong one member of the imperial cabinet, two judges of the supreme court, two presidents of the lower house of parliament, three vice-ministers of state. In the present parliament the president and thirteen members in a total membership of three hundred are Christians. In the army there are one hundred and fifty-five Christian officers, or three per cent of all, and the two largest battleships are commanded by Christians. In Tokio three of the daily papers have Christian editors.

WOMEN'S WOES.

Much of women's daily woe is due to kidney trouble. Sick kidneys cause backache, languor, blind headaches, dizziness, insomnia and urinary troubles. To cure yourself you must cure the kidneys. Profit by the experiences of others who have been cured.



Mrs. William W. Brown, professional nurse, of 16 Jane St., Paterson, N. J., says: "I have not only seen much suffering and many deaths from kidney trouble, but I have suffered myself. At one time I thought I could not live. My back ached, there were frequent headaches and dizzy spells, and the kidney secretions were disordered. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me from the first, and soon relieved me entirely of all the distressing and painful symptoms."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Brown will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists; price 50 cents per box.

IN MEMORIAM OF J. A HONEYCUTT.

Wm was born April 6th., 1868, and died April 27th., 1904. He was born and reared in this community (Jemison) In 1887 he was married to Miss Aminda Sims, of one of the best known families of the county. Mrs. Honeycutt and their six children survive him. For many years he has been a trusted employee of the railroads, and at the time of his death, was foreman of an extra gang on the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, at Boyles Ala. His death was caused in contending for a principle pertaining to himself and crew A man had been meddling with him and his men so as to disorganize his forces. When he called to remonstrate with the offender some hot words passed between them, then began a physical contest in which Mr Honeycutt was getting the better, when his opponent reached for a pistol and shot him twice with fatal results. His remains were met at the train next morning by a large number of sorrowing relatives and friends and were carried to his residence to await interment at 3 o'clock p. m.

The Masons and Odd Fellows met at their respective halls, then come together and marched to the residence to escort the body to the Baptist church, of which he was a member, where the most solem exercises were conducted by his pastor, Rev. I Windsor, in one of the largest assemblies ever witnessed in this place.

This unusually large concourse of people attests his popularity at his home. In addition to every available member of the local lodges of Masons and Odd Fellows, there were quite a number of Royal Arch Masons from the Clanton lodge, of which also he was an honored member. His body was accompanied to the cemetery by almost the entire assembly led by his brethren of the three lodges and deposited in the grave with Masonic and Odd Fellow ceremonies and honors.

Whereas, we recognized in Bro Honeycutt a loyal citizen, agreeable neighbor, faithful friend, indulgent father, affectionate husband, humble christian and zealous mason; in all of which capacities he manifested a large warm heartedness and whole souled fidelity, therefore be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to God's decrees; and in our sorrows, surrounded by the dark mystic veil, we through faith say "Thy will be done."

2. That we extend our fraternal sympathy, interest and assurance to our brother's family in their inestimable loss and deepest affliction.

3 That this report be spread upon the minutes of the lodge and a copy be sent to the family.

4 That we respectfully request The Banner to publish these resolutions.

"I find Thedford's Black-Draught a good medicine for liver disease. It cured my son after he had spent $500 with doctors. It is all the medicine I take."—MRS. CAROLINE MARTIN, Parkersburg, W. Va.

If your liver does not act regularly go to your druggist and secure a package of Thedford's Black-Draught and take a dose tonight. This great family medicine frees the constipated bowels, stirs up the torpid liver and causes a healthy secretion

PUMPKINS AND SQUASHES.

How They Have Been Kept Late and Through Severe Frosts.

Pumpkins and squashes may be carried through quite severe frosts without injury by covering well with straw or coarse litter. With especially fine hills which may not have fully matured it will usually pay well to do this, as they will often make very decided growth after the surrounding vines which were unprotected are dead beyond any hope. Four years ago some very large pumpkins which I was growing were in danger of being killed by frost before maturity. They were intended for show windows in some of the large stores, and my object was the largest possible growth and thoroughly matured fruits. They were carefully covered, fruits and vines, and came through without injury and kept growing vigorously until the second frost came, which killed the leaves and leaf stalks. At this time the pumpkins only were covered, the vines being left to care for themselves; but, being very large and strong, the main vines still remained green, and the pumpkins by actual measurement made very decided growth after everything but the main stems was dead. Did all this trouble pay, do you ask? I think so, for the pumpkins were sold at satisfactory prices for the purpose for which they were grown, and the cards upon them with the grower's name and residence were a good advertisement. Cabbage, celery and all late growing vegetables will be greatly benefited by a liberal use of the hoe and steel garden rake to loosen and fine the soil and admit air and sunshine, says a Rural New Yorker writer.

MAN ON THE CORNER

Some of the Sights He Saw and Some He Saw Not.

Saturday, Col. W. A. returned from St. Louis where he has been on professional business. While I was there, said the Colonel, "thought it just as well to take a look at the Exposition on a big scale, and there's a heap of it but everything is not yet complete, by any means. Among the buildings of the different foreign countries, what struck me to note that Alabama was conspicuous by her absence." "How is it at Vulcan, Colonel, isn't that thing up big and large?" "Oh, yes," he replied, "it is just about putting his pants on, and it will be a little time yet before he is full grown and able to appear in public. They are building him up, but haven't got much above his knees yet. Like Birmingham, he'll be a big thing some day, but the time is not yet. By the way, the show is not in full swing yet, and while the exhibits generally they are still coming in every day and it is best not to hurry if you want to see the Exposition at its best."

Some of the boys were seeing Jakes Sunday afternoon—and this early in the summer too. The first one rubbed his eyes, shook himself, looked around, grew ghastly pale, and murmured "I've got 'em bad. I'm going to quit It looked just as natural as life." And he was relieved when the other fellow killed a two foot rattler right beside the Upchurch drug store. The other he (the snake I mean, not the man) was after a coca-cola I was not prepared to say, but he got in cooler alright.

A drowsy feeling prevails and Clanton looks quiet and sleepy in the bright May morning. The spring time has come right enough and it makes one wish to quit work and go a fishing, whether you catch any or not. The woods and the fields invite us away from town, while the river banks have an alluring charm hard to resist. Not much doing in town these days, farmers are too busy to leave their fields, and all would be glad to see us. Politics are quiet, for which we are thankful, and about the only excitement to be found is in the all absorbing question "Who is the most popular young lady in Clanton?"

Vote for me, she sweetly smiled
Your vote is all I only ask,
That smile so sweet my heart beguiled,
I'm now within its light I bask.
Forever more I'll vote for her
For whom my heart's so fondly set,
Remain, O sweet one, smile once more.
My heart is yours, you I adore.
"Each vote's a dime" said she "now get."

"What's a Pea Pulls Primary, Ed?" "Eh! there's lot's of P's in it if there isn't much peace. Why, the pea, you know, is a parasitical plant (more p's again) and clings and pulls wherever it can find a support. The dwarf pea is not a parasite, and has no pull; and the ground pea is too lowly to have a pull. These two varieties are in the primary but need not be bothered with. Other varieties, with a pull, catch on to anything they can get hold of, and hang on with grim death. There's no shaking them off until the frost at the primary kills them. There's others in the Pea Pulls Primary, which, like a stray or voluntary pea, is reaching out its tendrils to catch and entrap the unwary. Better watch the Pea Pulls Primary, boys, or you may get in the (pea) soup. The Pea Pulls Primary in Chilton is like the Last Rose of Summer—blooming alone.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[We are willing to publish our subscribers views at any time, but it must be distinctly understood we do not hold ourselves responsible for these opinions.—EDITOR.]

Clanton, May 9th 1904

Editor Banner—Will you allow me space in your columns to say a few words to the people in the various school districts in regard to the selection of their District Trustees?

You should be very careful to elect men who have the spirit of education at heart; men whom you know will push and strive to build up and maintain a good school in the district. You have them, and for the good of your children and community, morally and religiously, as well as intellectually, do elect them. Very respectfully,

J. W. MOORE, Supt.

Clanton, May 6, 1904

Editor Banner—I did rejoice to see Judge Pratt's letter in the last issue of the Banner, it shows that the people in Bibb county have used good judgment, and it also shows that the Populists of Bibb were not Republicans. I was a Democrat before the split and I have always thought that true Populist principles were Democratic principles, and when the Populist party lost the State and National organization, most all of the counties went back to the Democratic party. I do not think that any man who knows me will deny the fact that I was as true to the Populist party as I had ability to be, and I never was a candidate for office and never expect to be, but I am a white man and feel an abiding interest in my country, and I know according to the history of the past that the Democratic party is the friend of the Southern white man, and above all the Democratic party is the friend of the white women and children of this country, and I am sure that so long as we have a Democratic government we will have separate schools and separate seats on the railroad cars, etc.

Now, I do not know who this X Ray is that Judge Pratt replied to, but if he is the man that I think he is, I am like the Editor of the Banner, I think that his name should be ex everything, for if it is the man that I think, I would call attention to some of the things that he is ex in, and first of all, he is an ex Baptist preacher, and notwithstanding the fact that before he was ordained he declared that he endorsed or believed certain religious principles, and in the last few years he has laid that all aside. In the last campaign he was both Republican and Populist, and he is now ex in that, and he went around in the county with a man who came here from some other country, God knows where, I don't, and tried to organize our people into the Socialist party, and he is ex in that. He is an ex Federal office holder, and practiced magnetic healing and he is ex in that, and I understand that he once taught some little schools, and he is ex in that. So he is truly ex everything and I fear he is ex man.

Mars Hill, May 9, 1904

Editor Banner—We find in the last week's issue an all day singing announced at this place, with no name signed to it. As the community did not know anything in regard to this, nor who made the announcement, there will not be any arrangement made for an all day singing. I do not object to anyone sending an appointment at any time for singing at this place, our doors are open to anyone for singing at any time, but would like to have the name. Hope that the one who had this appointment published will not get offended, because it don't meet the wishes of the people to have an all day singing on that day.

Done in Sunday school, this the 8th day of May, 1904.

Willams Mims has been appointed postmaster at Burwell, vice William Peace, deceased.

Why is it that young man will insist upon paying young ladies "marked attentions" when they are the sort that are always most easily identified in future breach of promise suits?

Science now surmises that by the processes of evolution man has lost an eye which was formerly at the top of his head. Did scientists ever joke it might be suspected that this was another satire on the materialistic tendencies of the times.

Comparatively few in this country realize how important is the mining industry. Here is a little item, which should open the eyes of some people. During the year 1903, mining products furnished 52 percent of the total railroad haulage of the United States.

Wars, like most other things, move much more rapidly nowadays than than they did in former days. About 150 years ago, a war between Russia and China over Manchuria lasted 46 years. It was nothing uncommon in those days for grandchildren to grow up and participate in wars in which their ancestors had been engaged.

The London Lancet says that athletics in England have developed too much into gladiatorial displays by picked competitors struggling to win prizes or to earn wages before huge crowds of spectators, and can hardly be regarded as effective agents in the development of the psysical strength and physical activity of the people.

To the plain, unartistic visitor one of the most remarkable things about the Whistler pictures is the apparent twinkling of distant lights in the night scenes. The spectator knows that they don't actually twinkle, and for that reason the cheerful way in which they seem to come and go, like real lights distantly visible over real water, is all the more interesting.

There was an enduring foundation for a higher civilization laid in Japan centuries before the empired opened its ports to the trade and its mind to the teachings of the Western peoples. Sir Edwin Arnold, writing to the London Telegraph, recalls the fact that "Japan was a cultured nation when Britain was barbarious, and she fought the armada of the Mongol conqueror Kubla Khan victoriously before Howard and Queen Elizabeth saved England from the Spaniard and the Inquisition."

Our great life insurance companies meet stanch opposition in Germany because of the fact that the government of the Kaiser is in the insurance business on its own account. The governmental savings banks have been charged with the carrying out of the new departmental function. All kinds of policies are issued, and the insured participate in the profits. The government expects to make railroad employes' insurance obligatory, the premiums to be paid monthly by deduction from the salaries of the insured.

One of the peculiarities of Americans that is apt to strike the "intelligent foreigner," although usually unremarked by ourselves, because we have been brought up to it and accustomed to it, is the mania for everything big. Doubtless this is due to some extent to the fact that we inhabit a country of vast extent, declares a writer in the Los Angeles Times. The old story about the American traveler in England was afraid to get out of bed at night for fear he might fall off the island, illustrates this idea. In no other country of the world, except Russia and darkest Africa, are distances so immense. We boast of our big blocks, regardless of whether they are architecturally beautiful or quite otherwise, as is unfortunately often the case. We boast of the big fortunes made by our millionaires, the question usually asked in regard to a man being not, "What is he?" but "What is he worth?" That is to say, not how much from a standpoint of character, but how much does he possess, which, it is needless to remark, is quite another thing. We should not allow his mania for bigness to blind us to the fact that a thing is not valuable in proportion to its size. On the contrary, the choicest articles are often done up by nature in small packages, whether in the shape of natural products of the soil or of human beings.

Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain, formerly Miss Mary Endicott, daughter of ex-Secretary of War Endicott, is to become a peeress in her own right—the only American woman to hold such a title. She will be the viscountess of Highberry.

PORT ARTHUR CUT OFF

Large Japanese Army Lands in Rear of the Doomed City.

ABOUT 30,000 TROOPS ASHORE

Forty Transports Appeared Opposite Pitsu-Wo—No Resistance is Made by Russians—Last Train From Port Arthur Fired On—Russians Charge That the Enemy Ignored the Red Cross Flags.

A Japanese army whose strength was estimated at 30,000 landed at Pitsu Wo, seized the railroad and telegraph lines and isolated Port Arthur, battleships remaining off the harbor's entrance to prevent the escape of torpedo boats. Landings were also reported at Port Adams and Kin Chow, but these were not credited at St Petersburg. The troops disembarked at Pitsu Wo and at Cape Terminal fifteen miles below, without opposition under cover of warships' guns. A few Russian patrols were scattered by shells.

London.—The Russians have abandoned Port Arthur to its fate, and General Stoessel and his 23,000 men must either surrender or die.

The Japanese invading armies swarm at will over the narrow neck of the Liao-Tung Peninsula; they have cut the wires and road back of the doomed fortress. Alexieff and the wounded were hurriedly shipped north just before the way of escape was closed. Admiral Togo has reduced Port Arthur's fleet to a nullity, and Admiral Skrydloff cannot get to the bottled up warships to take Makaroff's place.

St. Petersburg.—Port Arthur is cut off from all communications by land, the Japanese having disembarked in its rear, occupied the railroad and cut the telegraph.

Vice Admiral Skrydloff, who is en route to Port Arthur to take over command of the naval forces in the Far East, will be unable to reach his destination.

The Ministry of War has received the following telegram from Major General Pflug, Chief of the Military Staff:

"According to the information I have received, seven of the enemy's transports, and afterward about forty, appeared opposite Pitsu-Wo.

"At this moment about sixty transports were observed bearing down upon the whole front, and our posts retired from the shore.

"The enemy sent two columns, of about one regiment each, one in a westerly direction, and the other to the southward.

"A passenger train from Port Arthur was fired upon a mile and a quarter outside Polandien, about forty miles north of Port Arthur, by a hundred Japanese infantrymen occupying the heights east of the railway. The train carried many passengers, 200 ill occupying an ambulance carriage flying the Red Cross flag. Two of the ill were wounded. The train succeeded in reaching Polandien."

Tokio.—A report received from Admiral Hosoya, commanding the squadron that has been operating at the mouth of the Yalu, tells of the landing of Japanese troops on the Liao-Tung peninsula, back of Port Arthur.

"Our Seventh Division, with torpedo boats and the transports Hongkong and Nlopon, arrived from our advance base off the Liao-Tung peninsula. Discovering a number of the enemy's patrols, we bombarded them for a short time and then a landing party of sailors, Captain Nomoto leading, was ordered ashore.

"It being low tide, it was impossible to use the boats, and the sailors plunged into the water, waded breast deep for about 1000 yards and reached the beach. Immediately advancing, they took possession of a range of hills without firing a shot and planted our flag on the top.

"The gunboats Amagi, Oshima and Chiokai were employed to distract the enemy's attention. They discovered 100 of the enemy and shelled them, killing several.

"To facilitate the further landing of troops, piers are being erected. Our division is assisting in the work."

FATAL TEXAS TORNADO.

Many Persons Killed and Much Live Stock Destroyed Near Dallas.

Dallas, Texas.—A tornado in Northwest Texas killed Mrs. Mary Wagley, her daughter, and Anna and George Anthony at Moran. A dozen are seriously injured. At Putnam one man was killed and one woman injured. A negro's cabin was swept into the Brazos River, five miles above the Texas and Pacific crossing, and three negro men were drowned. A work train was blown from the railroad tracks near Creson and two negro laborers were drowned. About twenty houses were wrecked at Moran and half a dozen at Putnam.

Hundreds of head of live stock are reported killed in Shackleford and adjoining counties and crops are seriously injured by rain, wind and hail.

During the blinding storm near Phelps two trains collided and Conductor Austin and Fireman Armstrong were killed.

A cyclone near Cordell, Oklahoma, just north of the Texas line, wrecked much property and two lives were lost. Railroad property has suffered heavily in the northwestern Texas storm area. Wesley Shurlock, fourteen years old, was killed at Sunset, in Wise County.

The Japanese sword is usually wielded with both hands. The cutting plays a much larger part in their sword play than the thrust and point. They also fence with two swords at once, the long two handed weapon being held in the right hand, while the left uses the shorter and lighter blade. The fencer stands with his right foot forward and his sword held in both hands directly in front of him, its hilts at about the level of his opponent's eyes.

Will Ply the Coosa.

Captain E. G. Lafollette has organized the Coosa River Transportation Company, and will commence at once the active construction of a boat to ply the Coosa river in the interest of Gadsden. The boat will be modern and substantial and will be one hundred and twenty-five feet long with a twenty-six foot beam. The company owns now ten barges. The boat will be run by a one-hundred and fifty horse power engine and an eighteen-foot wheel. It will take four months to complete the work and it will be ready for the fall trade.

New Iron Making Method.

Tests are being made in the Birmingham district with fluorine, a refined product of fluorspar found in the district. This product has been recently made and tried in other places, and is proving successful. It is estimated that two pounds of fluorine will remove all but the merest trace of sulphur and phosphorous from a ton of iron.

Moving to Anniston.

Preparations have been completed for the removal of the Union Glass factory from Anderson, Ind., to Anniston, Ala. One hundred glass blowers and their families will go with the factory.

Bradstreets says: Crop preparations and planting has made good progress, the present outlook being that while the winter wheat crop will be short, the acreage in spring wheat, oats and corn will be heavily increased. The formal dissolution of the Lake Ore association was an unsettling feature in the iron trade. The iron trade is quieter with prices distinctly weaker.

A strike of the linemen who were putting up the trolley wires has brought the work on the electric car line between Florence, Sheffield and Tuscumbia to a standstill and deferred the date for the operation of the line indefinitely.

The contracts for two steel bridges near Columbus, Ga., have been let to the Southern Bridge Company, of Birmingham, Ala., for $7,371 cash.

At Selma four large buildings are being completed—the Elks' home, the Carnegie library, the city hall and the First Baptist church. The latter is the only stone building in the city.

Oil has been struck at Jamestown, Tenn. The well flows 500 barrels an hour.

A paper mill is to be established at Huntsville.

According to the census bureau the boll weevil destroyed 739,360 bales, worth $49,272,989, but the insect left untouched in Texas 2,650,000 bales, and for these bales she received 3 additional cents per pound, or fifteen dollars a bale. In the entire country the result was still better, assuming that the boll weevil added 3 cents a pound to the crop. The south's net gain from the boll weevil totals $100,727,011.

The Pennsylvania system is seeking a rail that will last longer than the Bessemer product. A test is to be made of the manganese steel rail.

A jail delivery at Gadsden was narrowly averted Saturday night.

Demand for press seats at the two national conventions far exceeds the capacity of the space set apart for the newspapers of the country. At the Chicago convention 290 seats were set apart in the press reservation, and already there have been received 1,300 applications.

For those people who are interested in making away with boll weevils it may be stated that paris green is an effective remedy when sprinkled on the cotton plants.

Admissions to the world's fair from the second to the seventh days were 137,708.

NEWS OF THE WAR

The Japanese Have Blocked Port Arthur

Vice Admiral Togo's official recital of the latest engagement off Port Arthur shows that the Japanese have blocked the entrance to the harbor. On Tuesday morning after the blockading flotilla had been scattered by a gale and the commander of the flotilla had signalled that the attempt be abandoned, the crews of the separate ships, not daunted by the weather, proceeded to the work on their own initiative. Five of the Japanese blockading ships were jammed into the inner channel and prevented egress from the harbor to all excepting small boats. Although Togo avoided damage to a single one of his vessels, the attack proved to be expensive in lives.

Port Arthur is cut off from all communication by land, the Japanese having disembarked in its rear, occupied the railroad and cut the telegraph. Vice Admiral Skrydloff, who is en route to Port Arthur to take command of the naval forces in the far east, will be unable to reach his destination.

General Kuropatkin has sent the following telegram under date of May 7th: "Lieutenant General Zassalitch reports that the enemy's cavalry and units of their advance guard occupied Feng Wang Cheng today. Our cavalry and units withdrew towards Schlind Jane."

The Japanese legation has received the following dispatch dated May 8th: "General Kuroki, commandant of the First army corps, reports that on May 6th our cavalry detachment dispersed the enemy at Feng Wang Cheng, which was immediately occupied by our infantry detachment. The enemy burned ammunition before evacuating the stronghold. Natives say that the number of Russians who were carried on litters through Feng Wang Cheng on May 2d amounted to eight hundred. It is believed that the total casualties of the enemy exceeded three thousand."

The Russian admiralty expects to be able to continue communication with Port Arthur in spite of cutting off of the telegraph line. Masts for use in wireless telegraphy have been erected at the fortress. Trained carrier pigeons also were sent to Port Arthur some time ago. The admiralty is in possession of specific information to the effect that the harbor of Port Arthur is open.

It is reported that the Japanese have captured Dalny, and that the Russians are leaving New Chwang.

The Japanese captured Feng Wang Cheng on Friday. It was the second line of the Russian defense.

The casualties in the last attempt of the Japanese fleet to block Port Arthur, May 3d, are one commander and six men killed; four men seriously and five officers and eleven men slightly wounded, fourteen officers and seventy-four men missing.

A Russian report says: "Our losses of April 30th and May 1st altogether amounted to seventy superior and subaltern officers and 2,323 men killed, wounded or taken prisoners. Of this total, 1,081 were left on the battlefield, but it is not known whether they were killed or wounded. It was absolutely impossible to bring away the guns and machine guns."

It is reported as certain that Viceroy Alexieff will be recalled at the instance of Vice Admiral Skrydloff and General Kuropatkin, and that the czar's cousin, Grand Duke Nicholas Nicolaievitch, will replace him.

Following Same Tactics.

The Japanese have followed practically their plans in the Chino-Japanese war. They have crossed the Yalu at the same place and landed on the Liao Tung peninsula at the same point. During the Chino-Japanese war the Japanese captured Port Arthur two weeks after their disembarkation on the peninsula.

A World's Record.

Good records were made by the Iowa's guns in the annual target practice just completed at Pensacola. The Iowa's 12-inch guns made 42 shots and 34 hits. One 12-inch made 11 shots and 11 hits. This equals the record made by the British ship Ocean in 1902, when she broke the world's record, and in the case of the Iowa the record is all the more creditable because her guns are of an old type.

ARRESTS OF OFFICERS

Of the Mississippi Debenture Company Have Been Made.

The federal grand jury which adjourned Friday night brought in indictments against the officers of the Mississippi Debenture Company, which has been operating for some years at Jackson, Miss. Those indicted were: A. V. Smith, secretary; C. P. King, vice president, Jackson; J. W. Hughes, president, Louisville; S. H. Abbey, Crystal Springs, former president, and L. O. Robbins, of New Orleans, former vice president. Messrs. Smith, King and Abbey were arrested by United States marshals and put under a $5,000 appearance bond. The indictments were found on the testimony of a number of persons who alleged that they have been paying money into the concern which has not lived up to its contracts. Some days ago the Mississippi Debenture Company was thrown into the hands of a receiver on application of a New Orleans bondholder.

The Mississippi Debenture Company was started by people some six years ago, but when the debenture companies were driven out of Louisiana the Mississippi company took up the business of the Louisiana Debenture Company. The arrests have created somewhat of a sensation.

The company, which had a large number of bondholders, had only six hundred dollars in assets, so the receiver appointed by the state courts reports.

Panama Will Invest $6.000,000 in American Securities.

The Largest Warrant.

On Saturday Secretary Shaw, of the treasury, signed a warrant for $40,000,000, which will be delivered to J. P. Morgan & Co. as disbursing agents of this government on account of the Panama canal purchase. The warrant is dated May 9th. This warrant is many times larger than any warrant ever before issued by this government. The largest sum previously covered by a single government warrant was for $7,200,000, paid to Russia in 1868 on account of the Alaskan purchase.

Russia Will Exhibit.

A cablegram received from St. Petersburg says that Russia will make an exhibit at the Louisiana Purchase exposition. Russia before the war with Japan had planned to be represented at the fair, but decided to abandon its proposed exhibit. The dispatch telling of Russia's decision caused surprise to the exposition officials. The Russians will take 20,000 square feet in the varied industries building, and will also be represented in liberal and fine arts.

A Foot of Hail.

There was six inches of water in the streets. No news has come from the country, but it is feared there has been a very heavy loss to the rice farmers.

SAFEBLOWERS' TRIAL

Driscoll Convicted — Russell Attempts to Escape.

Albert Driscoll, charged with blowing up the safe of the Montgomery theater last December, was convicted of burglary with a recommendation for mercy. The defense made a plea that the court here had not jurisdiction in that the men had been sent here for safe keeping, and were literally under the authority of the Mobile court, where they were bound over shortly after being captured on charges of carrying concealed weapons. The court overruled the objection and ordered the trial to proceed.

J. E. Russell, alias Eddie Callahan charged with safe blowing, made a desperate attempt to escape. Albert Driscoll, arrested with Russell, was on trial and Russell being a witness was sent to the witness room. Chief of Police Case, of Mobile, also a witness, volunteered to guard him. Russell leaped clear from the second story window, 20 feet to the ground.

He hit on his feet and plunged forward on his face. Almost immediately he began to crawl toward the fence dragging his foot which was crushed. When the prisoner jumped several officers ran down stairs and Detective Lacy of Mobile, caught him. He was enraged at his failure and said if he had not struck the pump he could have gotten away.

Will Issue Bonds.

The election for the purpose of authorizing a bond issue by Montgomery for the purposes of building new school houses, enlarging the water works system and constructing new sewers carried by a vote of 334 to 8. Those parts of the city recently taken in voted solidly for the issue, for it means public improvements for them.

The bond issue was first proposed in a message to the city council by Mayor Thomas H. Carr two months ago. He pointed out that the needs were imperative and should be met. So confident were the officials that the measure would be carried that they have gone to work on school buildings already. One to cost $22,000 is going up at Highland park, and one to cost $21,000 at South Montgomery. Still another will be constructed at West End. These three, with furniture, will cost the city more than $80,000. The school at Herron street, burned some time ago, is being reconstructed and will soon be finished. It is costing $15,000, which is being provided by the insurance companies.

The money from the bond issue is to be divided as follows: For water works extension, $200,000; for schools, $100,000; sewers, $50,000. The additions of the water works are to include a new stand tower and pump.

Murder in Lauderdale.

William Hammonds, a prominent farmer living at Lexington, twenty-three miles east of Florence, was murdered Sunday at his home while his family was away at church. So badly was he mutilated and clotted with blood that it was impossible to tell whether he had been shot or not.

THROWN OUT OF COURT.

Judge Jones Renders His Decision in the Haller Case.

Judge Thomas G. Jones has handed down a decision in the conspiracy case of Charles Moore et al. sustaining the demurrers of the defendant's attorneys and throwing the case out of the federal courts.

The defendants six in number were accused of assaulting Joe Haller a white man, and B. L. Greer a negro, because they attempted to organize a local of the United Mine Workers of America at Empire. Judge Jones reasons for throwing the matter out of court were first that the right to establish a labor organization was not a right conferred by the constitution of the United States, and that a conspiracy to interfere with it was not a hindrance to the constitutional rights of a citizen; and second, that the other offenses charged in the indictment were punishable by the state courts but were not such as the federal courts take cognizance of.

When the case had its first hearing the claims of Haller against the six alleged conspirators were denied because it was proven that he was a citizen of Waco.

International Courtesy.

The sultan, it is learned is being kept in touch with happenings in the far east, Russia and Japan are vieing with each other in their efforts to keep Abdul well informed. The mikado has authorized a special service telegram from Tokio to Constantinople and now the Russian general staff has arranged a like service from St. Petersburg and sends daily telegrams. The Russians wish to ingratiate themselves in the sultan's favor so as to obtain permission for the Russian Black Sea fleet to pass through. The Japanese wish to keep the sultan from giving such permission.

It is stated that Russia will not press her charge against Japan for what she terms a breach of international law by the Japanese's first attack at Chemulpo and Port Arthur. Baron Hayashi says that the Japanese previous to the attacks on Chemulpo and Port Arthur interrupted cables between Port Arthur and Vladivostock, showing that the Russians were prepared to attack Sasebo with the Port Arthur fleet on February 13, without a preliminary declaration of war. The cables also disclosed the fact that a farewell dinner had been arranged for the officers engaged in the proposed attack.

All classes of banks and trust companies are subscribing to the Japanese $50,000,000 loan, taking it at 93 1-2 per cent. Preparations are being made for offering the loan to the public immediately. The president of one of the principal trust companies that has subscribed said that there was no sentiment about the transaction, and that the Russian loan would be taken just as well.

Renewed energy is being expended on the preparations of the second Russian Pacific squadron, which will consist of eleven ironclads and seventeen cruisers. Acording to the last announcement the fleet is not expected to sail until some time in July, going by the outside route.

Russia is paying out something like $750,000 a day as war expenses, and to meet this extra drain upon the treasury they are paring down all their running expenses, education is suffering from that paring process.

Kuhn, Loeb & Co. have completed the formation of the syndicate which is to handle $25,000,000 of the Japanese loan, which is to be placed in this country. The syndicate will comprise several important banks.

It is believed that a portion of the Russian Vladivostock fleet has been shut out, and is now in the sea of Japan, trying to evade the Japanese.

CHILTON county has a certain number of men who apparently cannot recognize what is going on in the world politically. It is strange that men who, a few short years ago, left the Democratic party to align themselves with a new branch of the Democracy under the name of the People's Party, do not understand at this day that the People's Party exists no longer, and that whatever opposition there may be to the Democrats is purely and simply in the interests of the Republicans, no matter in what guise it is presented.

As instancing this, it is worthy of note that Gen. J. B. Weaver, the Populist nominee for President in 1892, has recently been elected, and is the leader of the Democratic delegation from Iowa to the national convention. Unlike some of our Chilton friends, General Weaver knows that the work of the Populists, as a party, is done, and he falls in line with the great Democratic party—the party of the people, fully as much as the Populist party ever was.

Then another, J. P. Oliver, of Tallapoosa, Populist nominee for Secretary of State, is now the Democratic nominee for Supt. of Education. Mr. Oliver knows that whatever good work is to be done in Alabama can only be accomplished through the Democratic party.

These are only two instances, there are numerous others, all tending to prove that the thinking Populists of former days—men who left the Democratic ranks—now realize that their rightful position is with the Democratic party, and they gladly return to it.

The brainy men of Chilton who think for themselves will honestly acknowledge that nothing but a few county offices for a few individuals is all that is hoped for by the opposition in this county.

DEMOCRATIC RALLY.
JUNE 11, 1904

Arrangements are being made for the greatest turnout of the Democrats of Chilton county at Clanton on June 11. A band of music will be on hand, all the Democratic nominees will be there, and several speakers of note.

Hon. Sydney J. Bowie will make an address to the people on that day.

To the Democrats of Chilton County:

The Democratic convention held in Clanton April 26, suggested a Democratic conference at Clanton, June 11. Now, what say the Democrats? Will you be on hand? Do you mean business? Has the time not fully come for the people to determine whether or not they will continue in the disfranchised column? For that is where we stand today so far as our influence is concerned in the State. Why should Chilton county continue to be the laughing stock for the whole country? Our people are as good in most part as other people, our young men are as bright, our women as beautiful, and in a material point we are coming to the front, and geographically we are in the very centre of the great State of Alabama, on one of the greatest lines of railroads in the whole land, within fifty minutes run of the capital, and near the same distance of Birmingham, one of the greatest cities in the South. Our location is good, our people are all right, and our farmers are improving on all lines, beautifying their homes, and improving their lands. The whole people are waking up on the educational interest, and the school system is being improved. Now, in the light of all these facts, why should we continue the state of politics which every man must know means political death and disfranchisement to our people? If the people will, they can put Chilton county in line with the Democratic party, and at the same time, under the primary plan, have their choice as to the men that fill the offices in the county. So the thing is this, in one word, line up with the Democratic party and retain every privilege that you now have in county matters, with the additional influence that you can have in the State, and on the other hand, fight the Democratic party, thereby dissolve all connection with the State, for that is what it means, and you virtually say to the world that I only want and claim citizenship in the county. Can the people afford it? And why will a good and loyal people do such a thing? They would not act in such a manner in business or in anything else on earth. The answer must be—prejudice, and that alone. And a few men, who, in my judgment, care but little for the people's welfare are keeping these fires of prejudice burning for their own selfish purposes. The people are told that the Democrats are thieves and liars, and it has been done so long that some people believe it, while at the same time every man in the State knows that the Democrats themselves become tired of the old methods and laid it aside and gave us a fair primary law and a good general election law, and the excuse for a division no longer exists. Let us for example behold the quietude in our sister counties where the primary has settled all questions and where the Democrats have no opposition, and where peace and quiet will reign undisturbed even on the day of the election. Would not any good man desire such a feeling among his neighbors, and there are not a few men who will read this letter that don't know that the only way to have this state of things is by a white primary under the direction of the Democratic party. There is no other way, and I say this after years of experience, under much more favorable circumstances than now exists. If it could not be settled in some other manner in 1892, when the majority went out of the organized party, I know that it is worse than folly to fight now with only Chilton county and not more than half of that. Come to the conference on June 11 and let us free the county. I believe that if you are a Democrat you will come or send a hand. Respectfully,

S. M. ADAMS.

Whooping Cough.

"In the spring of 1901 my children had whooping cough," says Mrs. D. W. Capps, of Capps, Ala. "I used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy with the most satisfactory results. I think this is the best remedy I have ever seen for whooping cough." This remedy keeps the cough loose, lessens the severity and frequency of the coughing spells and counteracts any tendency toward pneumonia. For sale by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton; A. Horn, Thorsby.

WHO IS THE MOST POPULAR YOUNG LADY IN CLANTON?

She's the sweetest and the fairest,
She's the loveliest and the dearest,
The only girl for whom I want to vote;
She's the smartest and the wittiest,
The daintiest and the prettiest,
The only girl for whom I want to vote.

She's as bright as any fairy
And her ways are light and airy,
The only girl for whom I want to vote;
She's natty and she's chatty,
And my heart goes pit-a-patty
For the only girl for whom I want to vote.

She's a darling, she's a dairy,
And she's nearly set me crazy,
The only girl for whom I want to vote;
But so long as I've a dime,
I'll vote for her every time
The only girl for whom I want to vote.

Calm deliberation and sound judgment is required before a vote is cast for the most popular young lady of Clanton. There may be some rash young men who think they know, and they back their opinion by casting numerous votes for their favorite candidate, but as voting progresses it becomes more evident that there are several highly popular young ladies in Clanton, and it will not be definitely settled until the final count. The competition is keen and voting brisk, promises to get more and more interesting in the next two weeks. Remember, the polls close May 31, so vote early and often.

Miss Ellen Stanley will receive votes at ten cents each, the proceeds going to the Methodist church.

ODD FELLOWS' MEMORIAM.

In the midst of life we are in the midst of death! Indeed is this true of our brother, J. A Honeycutt, who departed this life on April 27th, 1904. Brother Honeycutt was a true and consistent Odd Fellow for several years, and at the time of his death was a member of Geo. R. Ward, 164, of Jemison. He was a member of the Rebecca degree of Odd Fellowship, a member of the Masonic fraternity and a faithful member of the Baptist church at this place.

A large body of Odd Fellows, Masons and other sorrowing friends and relatives accompanied the deceased from the residence to the church, where a very solemn and impressive service was held, being conducted by Bro. I. Windsor, the pastor of his church, after which the remains were tenderly taken to the cemetery and lain to rest with Odd Fellow and Masonic honors.

As a husband and father he was ever true and kind, and as Odd Fellows we do most deeply sympathize with the bereaved wife and children, commending them to the One who doeth all things well, and is ever ready to bind up the broken hearted.

"I shall know the loved
Who have gone before,
And joyfully sweet will the meeting be,
When over the river, the peaceful river,
The angel of death shall carry me."

Therefore, as members of Geo. R. Ward Lodge 164, I. O. O. F., of Jemison, be it resolved that we stand ever ready to assist the grief stricken wife of our brother and his fatherless children; that a copy be spread on the minutes of this Lodge, one sent to the family of our brother, and one sent to our county paper for publication.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, May 9, 1904

The Republicans got badly scared the last few days of the session of the congress that has just adjourned and they insisted in hustling away as fast as they could get away. The Democrats poured the hot shot into them, grape and canister, so hard and so fast that they became demoralized. They were ready and glad to quit and they have left here with a scare thrown into them as big as an Iowa barn. They have flown to their respective homes with the conviction firmly fixed in their minds that they are gone coons in the fight that is coming off this year and they are plump right. If we can nominate the right kind of a national ticket they are gone both from the standpoint of the Executive and the National House of Representatives. They are picking out a soft place to fall right now. The last two days of the life of this session made the Republicans look like thirty cents in Chinese money or five cents worth of dog meat. They were no match for the Democrats who tackled them. Little Dalzell, of Pennsylvania, who reminds you of one of these little teter-backed snipe which runs up and down a sandy shore, was wiped off the round earth once more by one W. Bourke Cockran. When Cockran got through with him the second time he resembled a piece of rained on edam or camembert cheese. He was flatter than a pumpkin pie that had fallen from the top of the Washington monument.

The very next day the Hon. John Sharp Williams, the brilliant floor leader of the Democracy, the only leader we have had since the days of Sam Randal and Charlie Crisp, who is to-day the Murat of debate in the House of Representatives of the nation, took a fall out of Littlefield of Maine, the verbal cataract of the Republican side of the House, that sounded like a bay mule taking a fall out of a stable door with both hind feet. He also paid his respects to the Hon. John Dalzell, who had, in his speech, animadverted upon the foreigner in this country and who had said the only hoodlums in this country were those who had left the country of their birth for their country's good. In other words, there were no hoodlums in this country except foreigners. Mr. Williams rung the changes on this charge and defied the gentleman from Pennsylvania to prove that all foreign born citizens in this country were hoodlums, and he reminded him of the fact that the so called hoodlums of whom he spoke had saved the State of Pennsylvania from the invasion of the Confederate armies on the field of Gettysburg by the charge in that battle of the 69, Pennsylvania Regiment called "Owen's Own," an Irish regiment, that saved the day for the Northern arms. Mr. Williams blistered him for his know-nothingism and intolerance of the foreigner who had come to this country of his own free will and who had fought for the principles of Democracy ever since. How do the Germans and the Irish of the country who have been voting the Republican ticket ever since they got here like to be pilloried by the leading Republican of the House of Pepresentatives as hoodlums and no-goods, as the scum of the earth who came here for their country's good? Do they relish it? If so let them smoke the speech of Dalzell in their pipes and see how it tastes.

It may be interesting not only to newspaper men throughout the country, but to the people generally to know that the World's Press Parliament, which will be in session at St. Louis from May 16 to 21, will be the greatest gathering of newspaper men ever brought together. It is estimated that between three and four thousand representative newspaper men from every state in the Federal Union and every country in the world, will be present. In the number will be some of the most distinguished foreign journalists from the various capitals of Europe. Secretary of State, Hay will open the Parliament with a thirty minutes talk.

Another symptom of alarm on the part of the Republicans is the trepidation with which the hitherto invincible Babcock, the chairman of the Republican congressional committee, enters this campaign for the new House of the fifty-ninth congress. He practically has admitted to the leading members of the Republican side of the House that they have no more chance to win the next House than a one-legged man at a kicking match. He said he had warned them that there was a demand for tariff revision in many of the sections of this country and that they had allowed the suggestion to go unheeded. He notes that the passing breeze has become a cyclone and he doubts his ability to stem the hurricane of ballots that will fall his way in the next election.

MARRIED

On Sunday afternoon, at the residence of Mr. W. H. Foshee, Clanton, a pretty wedding took place in the presence of a few friends. The contracting parties were Mr. Robert L. Varner, of Hayneville, and Miss Sadie Brown, the charming neice of Mr. Foshee. Judge Adams performed the ceremony, and the newly wedded pair left the same evening for Montgomery, accompanied by Mrs. W. H. Foshee and Mrs. Renfroe Mullins. We wish the happy couple a long life of conjugal felicity.

At the court house, Wednesday, Judge Adams was called upon to unite in the holy bonds of matrimony, Mr. W. R. Riddle and Miss Florence Lula Atkinson, both of Jemison. Our best wishes to the happy young couple.

At South Calera, May 4, Mr. W. N. Jones and Miss Ida Busby were happily married, Rev. W. F. Pritchet performing the ceremony. We extend our hearty congratulations to the happy pair.

An Open Letter.

From the Chapin, S. C., News: Early in the spring my wife and I were taken with diarrhœa and so severe were the pains that we called a physician who prescribed for us, but his medicines failed to give any relief. A friend who had a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy on hand gave each of us a dose and we at once felt the effects. I procured a bottle and before using the entire contents we were entirely cured. It is a wonderful remedy and should be found in every household. H. C. Bailey, editor. This remedy is for sale by Upchurch Drug co., Clanton; A. Horn, Thorsby.

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

ELOQUENT DISCOURSE ENTITLED, "JONAH'S SEA EXPERIENCES."

The Rev. Dr. John R. MacKay Shows How Human Effort and Human Influence Wither Quickly Under Sarcasm —Jonah Has Suffered in Two Ways.

GLENS FALLS, N. Y.—The Rev. Dr. John R. MacKay, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church here, preached Sunday morning on "The Significance of Jonah's Sea Experience." The text was from Jonah i:12. Dr. MacKay said:

One of the surest ways to ruin any cause is to be able successfully to heap ridicule upon it. Make it ridiculous and you have ruined it. As soon as it becomes the butt of common talk and the standing joke for the funny column of the newspaper its power is gone, its influence sealed. And so soon as an individual becomes the centre of a community's jokes and sneers his influence is gone. Human effort and influence wither more quickly under sarcasm and ridicule than in any other way. In this way many a good cause and many a good person has suffered at the hands of persons who have never seriously tried to understand the cause or the person. In this way many a great human heart has been placed upon its Calvary and made to bleed and suffer the keenest agony. In this way many a noble, sincere, sensitive soul is going through its Gethsemane or is being nailed to its cross on this very Sabbath day.

This is how I believe the work and life of Jonah have suffered. Unthinkingly, unfeelingly, sarcastically people have associated Jonah with a whale, and a joke being the easiest and cheapest way of showing wisdom they have exhausted all their wisdom there.

We cannot keep too often reminding ourselves that we shall continue to miss the true meaning of the Bible and most of its great teaching unless we remember that every incident mentioned in the Old Testament gives not only the story of some person, with all the local coloring surrounding him as a man and an individual, but also and more important, that there is a great world truth to be revealed, and this individual, with his local coloring, has been chosen as the medium through which to reveal and teach that truth. And, therefore, the great Bible difficulties, with so many, have arisen because they have been satisfied to centre all their thought and interest on the individual and his local details, and in this way have missed the great truth intended to be taught—a truth so great that were it grasped it would then become a key by which to open up and understand the incident itself.

This is how Jonah has suffered at our hands. And our task is now in a few words to take another look at Jonah—to try and see him in the light of the great truth intended to be taught and see if thereby we can the better understand the story itself.

Bethink yourselves back into the earlier stages and gradual growth of the human race. To them as to us there came problems to be solved. We have the benefit of their efforts and can profit by them in our problems. But the further back we go the less and less did they have to help them solve their problems. Yet they felt the full force of each one and had to make an effort of some sort to solve it. The problem was not always the same. Sometimes it was social, sometimes it was physical, sometimes it was national, sometimes it was intellectual, sometimes it was moral. If it took a religious phase it was either national or moral or intellectual. Men felt the presence of God impinging upon them. They have forced themselves to formulate certain conceptions about Him. Then they found that certain of their experiences did not agree with these conceptions of God. And there their difficulties arose. This is the meaning of the book of Jonah. Whoever wrote the book felt the difficulty of a great intellectual and national problem. This led him to take the story of the Prophet Jonah, that, having thrown it into a parabolic form, he might the better through it explain to the people what he thought was God's own solution of this particular problem.

What, then, was that difficulty, that problem? The people of Israel believed that the love and sympathy of God were confined to themselves. His care, His favor, His blessings were for them and them alone. God was their God and all the rest of the world was outside. There was but one human family that had a divine relationship, and that was Jewish. Quite true, there were other nations, and they had to live, but they had to live without God. He did not belong to them, they had no claim upon Him. That was the real traditional Jewish feeling.

But a few people were growing up who had a newer and truer conception of God, and a broader outlook upon man. One of them felt he would like to relieve this narrow, limited, wrong conception of God. This led him to write the book, and in doing so he took Jonah as the representative of the old narrow Jewish idea, and showed how Jonah's ideas became broadened, and thus taught the broad, full love of God for all men—taught not only the clemency of God, but also that He loves all men. There, then, is the national problem, to teach that God is God of all men and loves them; and the intellectual problem, to teach the Jewish people and all other people that God is everywhere. Let us see, then, how this double sided problem was solved and satisfactorily illustrated in Jonah's experiences—that God is everywhere and that God loves all men.

Jonah did not believe this. God was not everywhere as Jehovah. This Jonah had been taught and this he believed. This was the very atmosphere in which he lived and moved and had his being. This was his babyhood's lisping, his boyhood's teaching and his manhood's patriotism. But one day there broke into his mind a new thought: "Why should not God care for the people in that other city just as well as He does for the people in this city? Why should Jerusalem be any more favored than Nineveh? The people are not Jews, but why should God not care for them just as well as if they were Jews? Why should there not be a brotherhood of mankind stronger than all the limits of national and family prejudice? Why not?" That thought came to Jonah like a voice which seemed to say to him, "Then, Jonah, why don't you go and tell them about God! Why don't you go and tell them they may have God's favor as well as other people?" This thought so burned itself into Jonah's mind and heart that he felt it must be God's will also to bless other people beside Jews. But Jonah being a dyed-in-the-wool Jew could not tolerate that. He therefore said, "Now, if I get out of the country for a while this thought will leave me, for God is not everywhere to press it upon me as He is in Israel." He did not care very much where he went if only he could get away from that voice. The voice troubled him. He felt that voice was calling him to do something he was sure was right, but he did not wish to do it. This is the sphere in which we so often are Jonahs. That voice we have always heard, and like Jonah we have tried to stifle it. Yes, we get just as angry with God and our friends when they dare to keep suggesting it to us; we do not want to hear about the right when we don't want to do it. Jonah, therefore, fled. He did not care where. That ship going to Tarshish was opportune. It made him decide that the safest place for him would be mid sea. God was never known to have spoken to a Jew on the sea. And so now Jonah felt he would be safe from God and that voice. That is why he so rapidly and gratefully got asleep.

Now that is just why a storm was necessary. Jonah had to learn, and through him all men had to learn, that God is present as much on sea as upon land—on an ocean greyhound as on a Tarshish merchantman. And Jonah learned it. And Jonah accepted it. At once he admitted, "I have done wrong, cast me into the sea." And the storm ceased. The lesson had been learned, and through Jonah the Israelites learned that God is everywhere, and no man can get away from Him. That a fish should pick him up and cast him ashore is a mere incident of the parable. It is simply that part of the story which teaches that if a man repents God will receive him and care for him and give him another chance. It is the divine exposition of man's "other chance"—a chance to redeem his past and go forward to do God's will—go forward to accomplish the particular form of service for which his life has been endowed and prepared.

To have learned that God is everywhere was also to learn that since God is God there can be no limit to His divine love—that God has love and blessing for all people and every person. So that in Jonah being cast into the sea, it was not a punishment, but one method of a fuller revelation of the care and love of God for those who became willing to obey Him. Our sorrow is not a punishment, but a method for a higher and fuller revelation of God's love and blessing. There is often a little tinge of atheism in our thought about Christian trouble or sorrow. It does not seem right to speak of any Christian sorrow as something allowed of God and overruled to a higher purpose. All Christian sorrow, as well as all Christian experiences are but different methods of God's own through which He gives higher and fuller revelations of His love and blessing, and develops His people to better fitness for service. And this is what Jonah learned, and having learned it he went at once to that city of Nineveh and delivered the message God had given him to deliver. He tells the Ninevites all he knows about the love of God. He tells them also all about the pure and righteous demands of God, and that if they persist in living their awful lives of selfishness and sin destruction must come to them as it must come to all men who persist in sinning.

The city did repent and God did bless the people. And in this way Jonah learned that the very blessings he had himself received and his people had received were not for themselves alone, but also for others. Nineveh and every other Nineveh that needed the knowledge of the love and righteousness of God. It is this that makes this parable of Jonah so like the parables of Jesus—illustrations of the love of God and of what God expects from those who already have been blessed.

And this second thought was just as vividly taught as the first one. After preaching for about five weeks in Nineveh, Jonah thought God was showing too much favor to this city. He was granting it too many blessings. This he regarded as a very painful reflection upon Jewish traditions, and this he resented. At the close of a day's preaching he went out into the country to think it all out and have a real satisfactory grumble about it all by himself. He sat down near to a large, big leaved gourd, whose refreshing shade, as the sun moved around, kept its burning rays from harming him. Next morning he went back to the same place, but the gourd had withered during the night. Jonah got angry, and in his indignation pitied the gourd thus destroyed so soon. But as he cooled off and his reason and his heart again asserted themselves, that voice seemed again to speak within him, "Jonah, what a foolish, unreasonable creature you are! Here you pity this gourd, and yet you find fault with and upbraid God because He has shown His pitying love and blessing toward these people of Nineveh—are not sinful, sorrowing human beings of more value than a gourd?" That was enough for Jonah. He was satisfied God did care for the people of Nineveh, and that it was Godlike to do so; yea, and what was more important, that His love and blessing were to be made known to them through the people already blessed. That is the teaching of the book of Jonah; that is the lesson Jonah learned, that he must offer God missionary service as well as worship, that he must offer God service as well as love, that to carry the message of God's love to his fellow men is to worship God.

Do you know, I think that is what God still asks? And yet, and yet, I sometimes think we rebel against the thought of it quite as much as Jonah did. That is why I have been led to bring this study of Jonah this morning. If we are not going to help the people of our Nineveh, who is going to do it? Like Jonah, we spend enough upon ourselves; we do not deny ourselves a single thing we set our hearts upon—social parties, theatres, entertainment, home comforts, bodily comforts, travel by land and sea. And these have all their own place—but we must not forget the people in Nineveh. In addition to our own care for ourselves and our worship, we have one other responsibility—the people in Nineveh. For them I speak this morning. We may take to sea as Jonah did, but it is not a very profitable business. Much better respond to the Lord gladly. True, we do not say with Jonah that God is not everywhere, or that His love is not for every creature—that is the very essence of our creed, but we may say with Jonah, Let some one else help Nineveh, I don't want to do it; if Nineveh can't take care of itself and some one must help them, let some one else do so. This is not what we are going to say to-day. We are going to say, rather, tell us where our Nineveh is, tell us how we can best help at this particular time and we will do it! My answer is, this home mission offering is our Nineveh.

Why should we? Because it is Godlike. God Himself is our supreme example. Because it is good for us to give—we feel our brotherhood better and the joy of giving becomes ours. Because new American communities need our help to fill them with hope, and by church privileges inspire them with those same God-given principles and truths that have made New England and New York, that have made ourselves and given us our prosperous environment. For God's sake, for our own sake, for America's sake, this is our opportunity. We want these people to know the same God we know and to speak to Him as confidently as we do and call Him "Father." When these people come together on Sundays we want them to be able to say with us "Our Father." When they gather their little, white-robed children around them at the even hour, we want them, children and parents together, to say "Our Father." When they come to lay any of these little ones out on the hillside and place upon the marker the words "Our Darling," we want them also confidingly to say, "My Father." And when they themselves come to the edge of the deep waters and wonder what ferryboat is to bear them across their Jordan we want them trustfully, lovingly, to be able to put their hands outward and upward and say, "My Father." That is our Nineveh. Will you help? Help us unto Him!

"I'll Not Forget to Keep You."

She was only a poor, sick, old woman, but a royal soul dwelt within her homely body. The deaconess found her, after climbing a long, dark stairway, in a poor little room, dark, but neat and clean. On a tiny table lay an open Bible, and opposite the bed hung a picture of the Good Sherherd.

"Ay, my dear lady," she said, when the deaconess spoke of the picture, "many a time I lie here all alone looking at Him and at the little lamb He carries so tenderly, and sometimes He seems to look at me so kindly that I can almost hear Him saying, 'I'll not forget to keep you.'" The deaconess went away feeling stronger for the simple expression of faith.

True greatness lies not in never falling, but in rising every time we fall.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

INTERNATIONAL LESSON COMMENTS FOR MAY 15.

Subject: The Prodigal Son, Luke xv., 11-24—Golden Text, Hosea vi., 1—Memory Verses, 17-19—Commentary on the Day's Lesson.

I. Leaving home (vs. 11-13). 11. "A certain man." The simple, unpretentious beginning of the most beautiful of all the parables. The man is here the image of God the Father. "Two sons." Both are Jews. The idea that the elder son represents the Jews and the younger the Gentiles is foreign to the parable, but in character the two sons may be said to be representative of mankind, for we have in them examples of two great phases, of alienation from God; the elder is blinded by self righteousness, the younger degraded by his unrighteousness.

12. "The younger." He represents openly wicked persons, such as the publicans and sinners. He also represents the thoughtless, careless youth. He was over confident, and could easily be deceived. "Give me." It has been a custom in the East for sons to demand and receive their portion of the inheritance during the father's lifetime.

13. "Not many days." He had decided upon his course and hastened to be gone. This shadows forth the rapidity (1) of national and (2) individual degeneracy. "Gathered all together." Sinners who go astray from God venture their all. "Took his journey." He was weary of his father's government and desired greater liberty. As soon as the bridle of restraining grace is taken off, we are soon gone. The journey the prodigal took represents the sinner in his departure from God. He went into a "far country," far from truth and virtue. "Wasted his substance." So sinners waste the gifts God has given them. The worldly life is always a wasteful life. It wastes body and soul, life and health, time, talents and all that is precious and valuable. Sinners waste their Bibles, their Sabbaths, their religious training, their heavenly inheritance and get nothing in return. "With riotous living." In verse 30 we see how low he fell. His body, mind and soul were debased.

II. In distress (vs. 14-16). 14. Spent all. He did not stop until his last dollar was gone. His passions reigned. This represents the sinner who has thrown away the mercy, favor and love of God, and has wilfully rejected the salvation of Christ. It seems that he spent all very soon; the enjoyment of sin is brief. "A mighty famine." The soul living at a distance from God, and shut out from intercourse with Him, will very soon feel its own utter emptiness. A mighty famine will follow. "In want." Real want is soul want. The prodigal now felt the effects of his dissipated course. The steps downward were "apostasy, profligacy, penalty." See Prov. 24: 34. The soul has many cravings, and the pleasures, riches and honors of this world can never satisfy it.

15. "Joined himself to a citizen." The same wicked life that before was represented by riotous living is here represented by servile living, for sinners are perfect slaves. The devil is the citizen of that country; he is both in city and country. Sinners join themselves to him to go at his bidding (John 8: 34), and are dependent upon him for their living. "To feed swine." This was doubly degrading, and especially so to a Jew. "The degradation at the end of a course of sin is here represented." Shame, contempt and distress are wedded to sin, and can never be divorced.

16. "With the husks." The husks were not the pods of some other fruit, but "the fruit of the carob tree, used for feeding swine." He was driven to the extremity of trying to satisfy his hunger with the food that was fit only for swine. So sinners endeavor to satisfy the soul with earthly and sensual delights. "No man gave unto him." Those whom he had called his friends now deserted him. They had taken his money and then cast him aside. Satan's agents do the same to-day. The saloonkeeper will rob a man of his money, health and character, and then kick him out of the back door to die.

III. The decision to return (vs. 17-19). 17. "He came to himself." Sin dethrones the reason. A state of sin is a state of folly and maulness, but the madness is in the heart (Eccl. 9: 3).

18. "I will arise." He had left home by his own free will and he must return in the same way. God compels no one to do right. "And go." Following the decision there must be an effort put forth. In returning to God there is something to do. "I have sinned." The first thing to do is to make a full confession of our sins (1 John 1: 9; Job 33: 27, 28). Against heaven." Against God. "And before thee." He had also sinned against his earthly father. It is ever a token of the sincerity of repentance when one views even the sins committed against others as transgressions against God.

IV. The return and the welcome (vs. 20, 21). 20. "He arose." He immediately did all of these things that he had decided upon. "Great way off." He was coming slowly, in rags, in disgrace, questioning about his welcome. "His father saw him." The father was ever watching for his return. So God knows when we start toward Him. Sin has made the distance great, but as soon as the lost one starts to return the Father has Compassion. "And ran, etc." This represents the readiness with which God receives returning sinners. The running to welcome corresponds to the seeking in our Lord's other parables. 21. "I have sinned." He makes his confession personal; he abases himself. This is always the result of true repentance. "No more worthy." All true penitents feel their unworthiness. They are conscious that they deserve nothing but death, and their only hope is in the mercy of Christ.

V. Forgiveness and rejoicing (vs. 22-24). 22. "But the father." The father did not wait until he had finished his confession. In this we see the great affection of the father and his willingness to forgive. "Said to his servants." The father's joy is full and he instantly issues orders to celebrate his return. "Bring forth quickly" (R. V.) Let us show at once by your actions that the wanderer is fully forgiven and reinstated. "Put a ring on his hand." A sign of affection and that he was a free man. There is no license given here to adorn the body, as some have vainly tried to show. The true standard for such adorning is given by Paul and Peter (1 Tim. 2: 9, 10; 1 Pet. 3: 3, 4). 23. "Be merry." Be joyful and happy. The Bible gives the children of God license to shout for joy. When Christ restores the wanderer there is general rejoicing and he is immediately treated as a son. The best that God has is given him, and the past is entirely blotted out. 24. "Was dead." Lost to all good, given up to all evil. "Is alive again." Here was special cause for rejoicing. Who could not be partaker of this joy?

Composer Dvorak Dies in Prague.

At Prague, Bohemia, Dr. Antonin Dvorak, the noted composer, director of the Conservatory of Music at Prague and formerly director of the New York Conservatory of Music, died of apoplexy. He was sixty-two years old.

What is considered to be the finest diamond in the world was once the property of the emperor of Delhi, and is valued at $70,000. The largest diamond ever seen weighed about 1,000 carats, and is owned by a syndicate of dealers. Its value complete would be about 25 million dollars, but it is now being cut up.

WOMAN REVOLUTIONIZED ARCHITECTURE.

"Build me a veranda with a house attachment," said a rich Georgian to his Northern architect, "that's what I want." These few words in the brusque vernacular of the business man tersely express the wishes of most Southern house builders of the present day.

Ten years ago the ubiquitous Southern veranda, though often of great length (especially in the old fashioned white columned houses when it often became a colonnade extending around three sides of a parallelogram), was usually narrow. Some one, somewhere, built a square veranda the size of an average room. The chances are it was a woman architect and contractor of her own summer bungalow. Women, as designers of houses, are celebrated for their disregard of precedent; their independence (if this is the proper word) in the fact of it. Without the slightest compunction a woman will knock any architectural rule of three into a cocked hat if it happens to be in her way. Some one saw the square veranda, liked it and copied it. In a few years' time it was a fad. In the South verandas are necessary. The idea of a square veranda, roomy, furnished with all the luxurious accessories of modren life, "open air parlors," as some one has happily styled them, supplied an actual demand. Unlike most fads, this one had common sense behind it and as a result has been influential in revolutionizing building styles that have obtained for centuries.—Architects and Builders Magazine.

MISS LOWE'S LIFE WORK.

In a little rural village known as Tooting, in the neighborhood of London, dwells an elderly woman whose days have not all been passed amid such peaceful and uneventful surroundings. This interesting individual is Miss Lowe, the only surviving child of Sir Hudson Lowe, governor of St. Helana at the time that Napoleon was banished to that island. Miss Lowe was born at St. Helena during the reign of George III., and has devoted many years to a vindication of the charges made against her father in his treatment of the exiled emperor of France. She has in her possession important papers of her father's, and it was the careful examination of these documents that gave Dr. Rose the data upon which to base his reply to Lord Rosebery's estimate of Sir Hudson Lowe's treatment of his famous prisoner. A daughter of one of Sir Hundson Lowe's subordinates at St. Helena has supplemented Dr. Rose's material with extracts from notes and journals left by her father, and it is Miss Lowe's expectation that through the efforts of these interested friends her father's name may be vindicated and a true and impartial account given to the world of the manner in which he performed the arduous task that was assigned to him as guardian of the banished French ruler. For many years Miss Lowe has been in receipt of a pension from the British government, and is the oldest pensioner on the civil service list.

AN AFTERNOON TEA.

Mrs. Winfield S. Durbin, wife of the Governor of Indiana, has evolved a plan for entertaining her large circle of friends that is worth copying. Mrs. Durbin sends out invitations for a series of buffet high teas on Mondays. She invites fifty friends to each tea and in this manner entertains 200. For these occasions she has with her two or three friends from out of town and she decorates her parlors with a quantity of artistically arranged roses and ferns, or any flower she pleases. The guests are served first with delicious chicken salad and sandwiches on Royal Dresden plates, and coffee is served with this. Then Nestlerode, with a cap of whipped cream, is served in stem glasses on beautiful Chinese medallion plates. Macaroons are served with the cream. This form of entertainment is within the reach of hostesses of the most limited incomes and yet it is considered worth while by a woman who represents the highest official position in the State.—What to Eat.

A BRILLIANT WOMAN.

The recent appointment of Miss L. Tomn to the lectureship in modern economic history at the London School of Economics and Political Science is the more interesting in that it was made by the Senate of the University of London. Miss Tomn's career has been a brilliant one; for, while she was at Girton College, she took, in 1894, first class honors in two triposes—history and law. Her previous education was obtained at Truro High School, for she is Cornish, and between school and college she spent three years in Germany, France and Italy. On leaving Cambridge Miss Tomn read law with Sir Frederick Pollock, and had the advantage of working for a time in a solicitor's office. She gained a research studentship at the London School of Economics, and edited a French book on the Referendum. Miss Tomn has also done a considerable amount of literary work, writing for several of the more important reviews and journals.

SHE'S A COLUMBIA PROFESSOR

Miss Margaret Maltby, head of the department of physics at Barnard, is the first woman appointed to a professorship by the trustees of Columbia College. She is a graduate of Oberlin College, where she took the degrees of bachelor of arts and master of arts. She then took the degree of bacheior of science in physics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. After that she went to the University of Gottingen, where she took her doctorate in two years and gave a year to research work under Nernst, the physicist. One year she spent as private assistant to President Kohlrausch, at the Physikalisch Technische Reichsanstalt at Charlottenburg. After her year there Miss Maltby spent a year at Clark University.

A WOMAN TEA TASTER

As an expert tea taster Miss Minnie C. Albro of Minneapolis has won success. She is employed by a large wholesale and retail house as an expert tea taster and tea blender and is probably the only woman engaged in that line of work in the country. She can tell at once, upon tasting a tea, what country it comes from, what variety it is, and also how fine a grade. She can tell whether a tea of a given country has been grown upon a mountain or in a valley, since there is a distinct difference in flavor. With between fifty and sixty different kinds and grades of tea to handle constantly she knows at a glance where each belongs.

A PITIFUL EX-EMPRESS.

Empress Eugenie, once the chief figure of the second empire in France, now passes her old age unnoticed in the seclusion of her English home. Three rooms in the house are kept as shrines. Relics of the first Napoleon fill the one; belongings sacred to the memory of Eugenie's husband are kept in another; the playthings of the prince imperial and the trappings of the horse from which he fell to die, together with the childish things of eternal importance to mothers, are the occupants of a third large apartment in the Farnborough home.

JET HATS.

Jets make a very handsome hat trimming. They wear a long time and, though a good quality of jet is not cheap, it is a good investment. One of the handsomest of spring toques is covered with dangling jets. It is a round toque, all laid in many folds; and along the lines of the folds there is an abundance of jet. The tiny jet danglers look very pretty indeed. And, to finish the hat, there are jet balls at the side, each ball hanging from a silky cord. Three or four balls hang so low as to almost touch the ear.

GOWNS OF ONE TONE.

Gowns all of a tone are coming in this year. There are ever so many blue dresses that are blue from beginning to end. Dress material, lace, ribbons, belt and stocks are all blue. And there are countless tan dresses with no other coloring than the tan. Tan linen, tan batiste, tan lawn, tan crape or tan gowns of any kind are trimmed with lace of a slightly deeper tone, and finished up with tan ribbons, to be removed and freshened once or twice a year.

FADS AND FANCIES.

Gooseberries are favorites in fruit trimming for hats.

Chiffon boas in delicate colorings for evening wear are fringed with silk tassels.

Gilt and diminutive tassels adorn stock collars and barthas.

Among the latest patterns in gold braid are the Greek key, basket, shell and floral designs.

Waterproof parasols, available for rain or shine, are the latest novelty.

Parasols of moire antique have been introduced in Paris.

Straw passementerie similar to that used for dress trimming is employed for parasol decorations.

As an accompaniment to the tailored suit the crush leather belt takes the lead.

For bag handles, straps and braids have replaced the stiff leather handle of the previous season.

Gold filigree buttons are much used for trimming purposes.

Rhinestone hearts are much worn here and in Paris.

Shaped veils have made their appearance. They are cut circular and fit over the hat perfectly.

Canvas galloons in Oriental patterns most effectively trim gowns of light weight wool fabrics.

Dainty toques of peach color straw braid are draped with lace in corresponding tint.

Linen tailored suits are being fashioned in Paris not alone from white linen, but also from flax, pale blue, lavendar, pale mauve, sulphur and light pink.

PEARLS OF THOUGHT.

It takes less sense to find fault with all than to be fair with all.

No life overflows with joy that has room only for its own cares.

There is nothing worth knowing in the art of living for nothing.

When the universe ceases to be a riddle it becomes a revelation.

The honest man does not parade his virtue. He refuses to risk his reputation.

A man doesn't atone for his meanness to his wife by his sweetness to the world.

"A blithe heart makes a blooming visage. A burden which none knows is not felt. A man hail better be drowned in his blood than in his prayers. A narrow waist ladies a right ant foe. A virtue a mind in a fair body is like a fine picture in a good light."

If we always keep in mind this solemn truth that life is but the vestibule of the everlasting temple, the first stage of a progress that shall know no limit, the humblest of appreciation both of heart and intellect, I think we should acknowledge more fully the high importance of the trust, and endeavor to fulfill its duties in a purer and better spirit.—W. H. D. Adams.

AN EXPERT PICKPOCKET

He Rode in a Brougham and Attended Fashionable Weddings.

The old man, James Read, whom Detectives Collins and Waters of the L division succeeded recently in sending to six months' hard labor, was reputed to be one of the most expert and, in his heyday, the most successful pickpocket in London. On the proceeds of his profession he used to drive in a brougham.

Read is in his seventieth year. Tall, elegantly dressed always, with venerable white beard, and glossy silk hat, he was sometimes mistaken for a peer of the realm. When he spoke the deception was the greater, for his voice was clear and cultivated.

He was once a master tailor in the West End, but for many years he has netted large sums in consequence of his mania for collecting other people's purses. He was an earnest patron of fashionable bazaars, weddings and other ceremonies and functions attended by crowds of wealthy women. As the detectives said, another of his schemes was to follow bishops at confirmation services.

To all these affairs it was his custom to drive up in his brougham. Then, in the rare cases when suspicion fell upon him, he possibly escaped on such strong evidence of respectability as the possession of a private carriage. It is believed that to that end he has always made his own clothes, and they were perfectly provided for his needs. His covert coat could be apparently hanging over his wrist, yet so arranged was it with slits that his hand would be gliding through the centre of it all the time in and out of other people's pockets.

The departure of the Continental boats in the holiday season also attracted him. He was a man of considerable education, and so great was his gift of assumed dignity that often, even when caught almost red-handed, he would escape the consequences by the aid of his plausible tongue. It was in a large measure due to him that the backs of outside seats on London omnibuses had to be altered.—London News.

Shrove Tuesday Wedding in Ireland.

Shrove Tuesday weddings in Ireland are exceedingly common, and sometimes among the peasantry they are celebrated in strange circumstances. There is a story of a young peasant girl being aroused out of bed on the night of Shrove Tuesday to be married before midnight to a well-to-do Irish Australasian whom she had never seen, though he was known to her parents, who made the match. It turned out a happy marriage. The young people usually take the matter philosophically, believing that their parents know best how to make them happy. This anecdote is told of a Tipperary girl: "Biddy," asked her friend, "are ye goin' off this Shraft?" "Musha, I don't know that," said Biddy, "but they're sittin' on me upstairs"—meaning that matchmaking was in progress. Another story relates to a number of weddings taking place in a Munster church on Shrove Tuesday. "An' where's yer intended, Joe?" one swain was asked. "Be gob, Mick, I couldn't tell ye; but I believe she's up there amongst the feathers and ribbons in the front row of seats." He learned who she was when the names were called out.

Interesting Map.

A map of America, made in 1810, and which was responsible for the naming of the new world for Americus Vespucci, instead of calling it Columbia, in honor of Christopher Columbus, will be one of the interesting relics exhibited at the World's fair from the Vatican. The map was made at the town of St. Die, Lorraine, by Martin Waldseemuller, and was recently found by Prof. Fisher. In preparing a map of the world, as it was then known, Waldseemuller happened across a letter from Americus Vespucci to his patron, Lorenzo de Medici, dated 1501, in which he referred to the newly discovered continent. Waldseemuller marked this practically unknown terra firma America, as he had first heard of it through Americus Vespucci. The latter probably never knew that the new land had been called by his name, and it was not his fault that Columbus did not receive the honor due for making the discovery.—Pittsburg Gazette.

E. E. FORBES BIRMINGHAM BUYS OUT F. G. FITE

The Largest House Buys Out the Next Largest.

PIANOS GO AT FACTORY COST

People From All Over the South Purchase Pianos by Mail.

The E. E. Forbes Piano Co. have bought the entire stock of the Frank G. Fite Music House, and so large and unusual was the purchase that all the Birmingham papers commented upon it.

The Birmingham News said:

"Mr. Fite, desiring to close his Birmingham store and rather than repack his big stock, sold the whole $40,000 worth of pianos to the E. E. Forbes Piano Co."

The Birmingham Ledger said:

"Think of a beautiful upright piano worth $250, but sold for $147.50, or one worth $325 for $178.50, but this is the opportunity afforded by the enormous purchase of the E. E. Forbes Co. when they absorbed the entire piano stock of the well known Frank G. Fite Music House."

The papers may well talk about this great purchase—nothing like it was ever before accomplished in the south, and the result is that "well known high grade pianos are being sold at factory prices."

So many orders have been received by us from various places in the south without any notice of the sale being made, except what has appeared in the Birmingham papers, that we have caused an advertisement to be published in nearly every southern paper, knowing well that no other piano house in the south can begin to sell good instruments at the low price we are asking for these pianos.

One man who lives down on the coast ordered a Gabler and said that after he had paid the freight the price was still $75 less than he could have bought it for in the large city in which he lives.

We have likewise reduced all prices on our large stock of pianos to keep pace with this sacrifice sale, and as we carry the best pianos in the world, including,

Chickering,	Mason & Hamlin,
Forbes,	Kranich & Bach,
Mathusheck,	Everett,

And other well-known pianos. You will appreciate what a wonderful saving opportunity this piano sale offers on the pianos for which we are agents—you can save from $50 to $75, while this is the way prices are marked on the pianos bought from the F. G. Fite Co.

The word "dun," generally supposed to be derived from the French donney, owes its origin, according to an English publication of 1708, to one Joe Dun, a famous bailiff of Lincoln in the time of Henry VII. Dun is said to have been so shrewd in the management of his unpleasant business and so successful in the collection of debts that his name became proverbial, and whenever a man refused to pay it grew into a prevalent custom to say, "Why don't you 'Dun' him?"

A farmer of New Jersey has just into possession of what he says is the oldest plow in America. According to tradition the plow is two hundred and fifty years old, having been brought over by the Dutch to New Amsterdam in 1654. It remained in one family for over two hundred years and then was purchased at an auction sale by the father of the present owner. This, they say, is the plow which was used in breaking the ground for the famous Hackettstown-German Valley turnpike over which the revolutionary forces drew their cannon after the battle of Trenton, and when they were on their way to the defense of the famous Jockey Hollow road. It is built on the same principal as plows of today, except it has a wooden moldboard and a wrought iron share. All the nuts have tall burrs on them for tightening and loosening with a hammer, for in the old days there were no wrenches. There is but one handle which is to be held with the left hand, the right hand for guiding the horse.

Ernest Dellinge, late secretary of Don Jame de Bourbon, son of Don Carlos, pretender to the Spanish throne, was sentenced to ten months' imprisonment for pawning the famous jeweled necklace of Marie Antoinette, which descended to Don Jame. The necklace originally belonged to Marie Theresse of Austria, later passing to Marie Antoinette. Lately Don Jame had left it with his sister, Princess Alice de Bourbon. The latter missed the necklace and an investigation located it where it had been hypothecated for $64,000. Dellinge maintained that he was carrying out the transaction for Don Jame, but the court held differently.

It is believed that before very long the Dead sea will be exploited for industrial purposes. French engineers are at work on three different projects. The level of the Dead sea being more than 1,300 feet below that of the Mediterranean and Red seas, it is thought by connecting either of these two seas by means of a canal with the Dead sea a stream of water would flow with a velocity calculated to produce some 25 horsepower. There is no danger, it is asserted, of an overflowing of the Dead sea, for the waters there evaporate at so great a rate (6,000,000 tons a day) that the incoming waters would make no appreciable difference in the level.

SECOND-HAND TAG DEALERS.

Clever Men Profiting by the Going Abroad Humbug.

Perhaps there never was a time in the history of the world when humbugs were so common as they are at present. Only a few weeks ago dealers in trunks, harness and leather were amused over an article which appeared in one of their trade journals, stating that, on one of the back streets of New York an enterprising soul is doing a lively business in the sale of second-hand valise and trunk tags to those who are anxious to cut a wide swath when they return to their homes in the west and south. How this enterprising chap manages to obtain the tags is a mystery which the article does not explain, but he is prepared for a moderate charge to check one's baggage from Constantinople to Cairo, Brindisi, Geneva, or any other old place. Speaking of this rather common phrase of vanity, one of the leading leather goods dealers of Washington said:

"I saw the article about the second-hand tag dealer, and no doubt it is quite correct. If there is anything of which people are particularly vain it is the foreign tags on their baggage. This is more particularly the case with those who have returned from their first trip across the water and are anxious that every one should know the fact. We have in our establishment an extensive repair shop, and every now and then we receive hat boxes, steamer trunks, grips, valises, traveling bags and so on, that are as full of foreign tags as a dead wall is of theatrical and patent medicine posters. In all such cases the preson who sends the baggage leaves very explicit and positive oders that under no circumstances are those tags to be removed.

"Once upon a time we had in our shop a wideawake boy who did odd jobs about the place, and who was as ambitious as he was industrious and well-behaved. Evidently he felt that the best plan to obtain an advance in salary was to keep everlastingly busy, and I am free to admit he was about the hardest worker I have ever seen. One morning before the men came down to their work, this lad found himself without anything to do. He had literally worked himself out of a job, and anxious that on our arrival we should find him busy, he began pottering about in search of something to occupy his hands. In an evil moment his eye fell upon a large grip that was plastered over with tags from nearly every hotel and city in Europe, from Moscow to Palermo and from Queenstown to Odessa. With admirable industry he set perseveringly to work removing the tags. He had about finished the job when one of the workmen entered and rescued the grip on which there still remained a few suggestions of Swiss watering places.

"When the customer received his grip minus some 12 or 15 tags, he shed tears of anguish, and said things calculated to make the angels weep. He was the maddest man in Washington and roasted our establishment right royally as a place where the workmen had no more gumption than to clean up a man's valise as bright and tagless as the day he purchased it."—Washington Post.

First Novelist of Japan.

Aizaki Tokutaro, better known as Koyo Sang, died recently in Japan. Koyo Sang may rightly be called the father of the Japanese novel. He was the first writer to introduce realistic fiction into his native country. Indeed before his time the so-called Japanese novels consisted merely of dialogues and pithy sayings. Character painting, plots, and the like were entirely unknown. When his books depicting real life first appeared they created a great stir throughout the country. Since then, however, several of the younger writers have followed in the footsteps of Koyo Sang, and in this, as in many other matters, the Japanese promise to adopt the methods of America and Europe, and will undoubtedly in the near future create a characteristic and interesting literature.—Boston Transcript.

"I Have Every Reason to Praise Pe-ru-na," WRITES MRS. KANE, OF CHICAGO.

GRACE, EDWARD, MYRTLE, GEORGE and RELEVEL KANE, 172 Sebor St. CHICAGO, ILL.

Mrs. K. Kane, 172 Sebor Street, Chicago, Ill., writes:

"Peruna has been used so long in our family that I do not know how I could get along without it. I have given it to all of my children at different times when they suffered with croup, colds and the many ailments that children are subject to, and am pleased to say that it has kept them in splendid health. I have also used it for a catarrhal difficulty of long standing and it cured me in a short time, so I have every reason to praise Peruna."—Mrs. A. Kane.

Pe-ru-na Protects the Entire Household Against Catarrhal Diseases.

One of the greatest foes with which every family has to contend is our changeable climate. To protect the family from colds and coughs is always a serious problem, and often impossible.

Sooner or later it is the inevitable fate of every one to catch cold. Care in avoiding exposure and the use of proper clothing will protect from the frequency and perhaps the severity of colds, but with the greatest of precautions they will come. This is a settled fact of human experience. Everybody must expect to be caught somewhere or somehow.

Perhaps it will be wet feet, or a draught, or damp clothes, or it may be one of a thousand other little mishaps, but no one is shrewd enough to always avoid the inevitable catching cold.

There is no fact of medical science better known than that Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. Thousands of families in all parts of the United States are protected from colds and catarrh by Peruna. Once in the family Peruna always stays. No home can spare Peruna after the first trial of it.

We have on file many thousand testimonials like the ones given above. We can only give our readers a slight glimpse of the vast array of unsolicited endorsements we are receiving every month. No other physician in the world has received such a volume of enthusiastic and grateful letters of thanks as Dr. Hartman for Peruna.

Mrs. A. Hobson, 22 Washington St., Lansing, Mich., writes:

"Peruna has been such a blessing to my self and family, that I feel I must add my testimonial. For two months I suffered from catarrh of the nose and throat, and I took so many precautions so as not to make him expose to damp or cool weather. Last year we took Peruna in grippe, and we have not been sick since, either. No medicine helped him like Peruna. I noticed an improvement at once and in three weeks he was different as to catarrh, for grippe and been completely cured and I noticed that the catarrh was much better. He kept taking it two weeks longer, and he has entirely well. I now use it myself and on colds, cramps, indigestion or general run down condition, and find it superior to any doctors or medicine I ever tried. It keeps me, as well as my child, in perfect health, and I gladly recommend it to mothers."—Mrs. A. Hobson.

When King Edward smokes a cigar the bands are religiously torn into four pieces every time. The reason is that once, at Marienbad, it came to the ear of the king that a band from around one of the royal cigars, which was stamped with the royal arms, had been sold by an indiscreet waiter for five guineas. The man who bought it attached it to a similarly made cigar and went around showing the cigar to his friends, saying it had been given to him by the king.

I was growing worse all the time, but Doan's Kidney Pills cured me, and I have been well ever since."

WHAT A BOY SHOULD DO

Our fathers have cleared the mist away. Forty or fifty years ago when our fathers were growing up, not many of them could attend such schools as we have now. It was impossible. The reasons were (1) they were new comers in the county and settlements had to be made before any intellectual improvements could be made. (2) They had no such schools as we have now. (Generally speaking that is true)

Now they have settled our country, the mist has been cleared away. They have realized the need for better schools and by their efforts great progress has been made. Better schools have been springing up nearly everywhere for the past few years. Now what is to become of the young man or woman who fails to avail themselves of these oppertunities?

Our fathers who have lived and are living, many of them, failed to get an education, because a way through the mist could not be seen. That is, a way which afforded ample opportunities.

Many of them, however, had to hustle through the winter months, cleaning and settling land, upon which to make corn and cotton; by which way a living was obtained.

Besides there were no schools to go to in many places. They have a very reasonable excuse for not obtaining educational development but still many of them could have done better had they tried. Studying at home would have proved valuable. It is the great objection to most of our race; don't think and study enough.

Now the time has come when our race must have higher educational development. Not for the purpose of shoving them into the towns to make a living easy, but for the purpose of raising the standard of living in the country.

The farmer boy should have a literary education in order that he may read newspapers and magazines intelligently and keep up with what is going on in the world. It helps him to understand his Bible and gives him a clearer conception of that higher life as is taught by the lowly Nazarine.

Many of the young people are making use of these opportunities. But more of them could be.

They cannot harp "I could not because I had to go to war," as their fathers did, but will remain as excuseless as the men who were invited to the feast which was being prepared by the Heavenly Kingdom's Representative.

We need to be inspired by a noble ambition and need to study the lives of such men as have succeeded in life.

"The life of Abe Lincoln" is one of the finest examples. Before he was nine years old his mother died, and this loss gave a deep sadness to the boy on which there had never shone too gladsome a light. But from his very lonesomeness and hardships he acquired an earnest love for reading; the indulgence of which led to something which was honorable among men.

His daylight hours were spent working hard on the farm, but in the long winter evenings he lay stretched out upon the floor of the log cabin, in which he lived reading such books as he could get. Among these few, "The Life of Washington" was found, over which he lost himself in admiration of the great hero. He also read his Bible constantly.

By such study as this he was filled with a longing to see more of the world, he worked his passage on a flatboat, making a trip to New Orleans.

Later on he was promoted as general by President Jackson to fight the Indians. In this way he soon became a prominent figure in his country, finally landing in the President's chair himself. Young men should make a close study of such examples, by which we will be profited. May we, as young men be inspired by a nobler ambition, and rise to the heights of round up living.

Success to the dear old Banner and its many subscribers.

222 South Peoria St., Chicago, Ill., Oct. 7, 1902.

Eight months ago I was so ill that I was compelled to lie or sit down nearly all the time. My stomach was so weak and upset that I could keep nothing on it and I vomited frequently. I could not urinate without great pain and I coughed so much that my throat and lungs were raw and sore. The doctors pronounced it Bright's disease and others said it was consumption. It mattered little to me what they called it and I had no desire to live. A sister visited me from St. Louis and asked me if I had ever tried Wine of Cardui. I told her I had not and she bought a bottle. I believe that it saved my life. I believe many women could save much suffering if they but knew of its value.

IN MEMORIAM.

James Arthur Devaughn, son of P. R. and T. A. C. DeVaughn, was born in Coosa county, Ala., Feb. 15, 1882. His father moved with him to this county when he was quite a lad, where he lived until his death. He died of typhoid fever Oct. 5, 1903, after an illness of about three weeks. He was a happily converted to Christ and was baptised by Rev. W. S. Hall and lived a consistent member of Poplar Springs Baptist church. The remainder of his life was spent in quiet, peaceable boy, an obedient son, a kind brother and a faithful friend. He was industrious and energetic. He was a highly respected, promising young man. We miss him, he is missed in the midst of his associates, missed from the church, the Sabbath school, the singing and the Odd Fellows Lodge, of which he was a member. But most of all he is missed from the family circle, the home is so desolate since he is gone. He was a joy and consolation to his parents, who still deeply mourn his absence. But they mourn not as those who have no hope, but feel that their dear one is at rest. He was passionately fond of singing and they believe that when he sings the new song that all the ransomed shall sing and they miss the familiar voice in songs here, they are resigned to the will of the most High, believing that if they are faithful they will meet him in the sweet beyond.

Cured His Mother of Rheumatism.

"My mother had been a sufferer for many years with rheumatism," says W. H. Howard, of Hughes, Pa. "At times she was unable to move at all, while at all times walking was painful. I procured her with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and after a few applications she decided it was the most wonderful pain reliever she had ever tried, in fact, she is never without it now and is at all times able to walk. An occasional application of Pain Balm keeps away the pain that she was formerly troubled with." For sale by Clanton Drug Co., Clanton; Horn, Thorsby.

MAN ON THE CORNER

of the Sights He Saw and Some He Saw Not

An extraordinary [illegible] be seen at the [illegible] er. A few days ago Mr. [illegible] working in his garden [illegible] ing up some rad[illegible] to find one in the exact form of a human [illegible] as the head. It is ten [illegible] gh, has a body, with [illegible] ed shoulders, from which [illegible] arms depend, and a pair of well [illegible] ed legs; the knees and [illegible] perfect. It's a curiosity worth seeing.

That was a fine seasoning Monday night and all hearts rejoiced. The drought was getting to be a serious business, and a feeling of gloom came over all when the heavens opened up and sent down a refreshing rain. What with the absence of rain and the cool weather, we have not made much progress, but there is good hope for believing that all will turn out well at harvest time.

Mayor Judson Strock and the council are going to see if town property cannot be put in better shape for Clanton be pushed a step or two further ahead. Right you are, gentlemen, by all means get to work and make things hum. The town has wonderfully improved since it was incorporated and a little work and push now would be productive of much good. There is plenty of room for improvement, and the more rapidly improvements are made, the faster the town will grow.

It is worth while summing up what Clanton already possesses. Counting the court house (and don't forget the jail) we have 22 store houses, including Tipton Bros. and A. C. Smith's office buildings, and 11 frame buildings, in which business is carried on by 16 firms in general merchandise, 2 dry goods stores, 2 drug stores, 2 meat markets, 1 bank, 1 printing office (The Banner, of course, there is another,) millinery store, 1 tailor store, 1 jewelry store, 1 hardware store and the post office. Besides these, we have 3 blacksmith shops, the Farmer's Warehouse, the Clanton Steam Laundry, 2 cotton gineries and 2 grist mills. 9 lawyers to fight our legal battles, 6 physicians and 2 dentists to attend to physical ailments, 2 builders and contractors, 2 barber shops, 1 tinner, 1 machine shop, 1 shoemaker and 1 photographer. 2 schools in which to teach the young how to shoot, and 2 churches in which our population of nearly 1,000 souls may praise God for the many blessings we already enjoy. That is a good catalogue for a town up to the present, and now what we need is—well there's a big opening here for many manufacturing enterprises, which once established would be of vast benefit to the surrounding country by furnishing a home market for produce. Let us work and get them.

Clanton also has a mighty bad railroad crossing, where trains come through at a break neck speed. It is a wonder there is not a fatal accident there frequently. Clanton has a bad hill, or rather, bad hills on the north, coming from the south, and on the east below the city a swampy road; and all these things could and should be improved.

Tomorrow (Friday) the Methodist Sunday School will have its annual picnic. A number of wagons have been engaged and the children will drive out to Yellow-Creek, near Mahan's pond, and a day will be happily spent.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[We are willing to publish our subscribers views at any time, but it must be distinctly understood we do not hold ourselves responsible for these opinions.—EDITOR.]

Clanton, May 17, 1904

Editor Banner—Noticing in your valuable paper a short time since how a cat whose head had been fastened in an empty tin can, while doubtless in search of food, had been killed by some one, I enclose this clipping merely to show how people differ about things. By the by, would it not be much better for our State if the laws against cruelty to domestic animals were enforced?

CITIZEN.

DEWEY AND A DOG.

Passing the home of Admiral Dewey recently I found the hero of Manila out in front attending to the crushed foot of a dog that had been struck by a street car. The poor little creature looked up gratefully into the great admiral's face as he bound the wound. The bandage was fastened with a safety pin from—no matter where—the admiral was equal to the emergency. A great, tender-hearted man is Admiral Dewey.—Joe Mitchell Chapple, in April National.

Oakmulgee, May 17, 1904

Editor Banner—Lost liberty! Dear young friends, let us pause for a moment to consider and comprehend the worth of liberty and the woe and grief of lost liberty and what it takes to stay our liberty. For me to keep my liberty, should I tote deadly weapons and be a bully? No, no! Should I get drunk and curse and swear and be a Sabbath breaker and partake of all kinds of riotous living? No, indeed, for things of this nature are steps to sorrow and lost liberty. Oh, let us regard the tender pleading and prayers of our kind mothers and friends that we might stay our liberty and build up our country instead of tearing it down, that God might have the honor and praise for liberty is the prize this side of heaven. Let us not get drunk and fire the revolvers on the Sabbath days and disrespect God and our country. Let us respect the bright young girls who wishes their country to prosper and build up to a country of honor and light.

With due respect to all,

A READER.

Cedar Springs.

Cotton chopping would be the the rage in this section now, if we had any up.

We organized a Sunday school at the school house on the first Sunday in May, with Prof. Williams for superintendent.

We had singing last Sunday evening, which was enjoyed by all.

Prayermeeting at the school house every Saturday night.

For some time our community has been quietly reposing on the bed of indifference to advancement, but we are glad to know it is rapidly awakening and realizing the necessity of pushing to the front.

Mr. Ellison, who has been in Uncle Sam's service, and has made a tour around the world, is spending a day or two with relatives here.

DANTES.

New Cedron

The farmers of our community are moving along nicely with their work some of them are chopping cotton and some are done.

Mr. W. D. Cherry and wife of Dixie paid Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Barrett a flying visit last Sunday.

Prof. J. F. and D. C. Bone went to Boseman on business last Monday.

Mr. Joe Boles and wife and charming little babe visited friends and relatives here last Sunday.

Misses N. M. Bone and Lula Culp left for Prattville last Saturday to spend a few weeks with friends and relatives there.

Look out, Energy boys, the girls of this community are coming the fifth Sunday to carry you out to church. I want you to be ready; remember this is leap year and we can't wait for you to dress.

I think I have said enough for this time, I will close.

SUNSHINE.

By Gum, He Did!

Saturday night, May 7, Mr. Sim Daniel was cutting down a bee tree at Marble Valley, Coosa county, and turned out three fox squirrels.

Our country friends are especially invited to call and see us.

Shoults.

Well, I have heard it said a dry May for a good crop. If this is true we will make a good crop this year. If it don't rain pretty soon the oat crop will be a failure in this neck of the woods. Some of the old people saw what they call a water dog about April 1, and they say it won't rain in 40 days from that time. If that be the case, things will be getting pretty dry by that time.

We are glad to say our Sunday school is moving on nicely; arrangements are being made for Children's Day in the near future. We have enrolled about fifty scholars, some new ones coming in every Sunday.

Well, I live in West Chilton; we have plenty of good water, good health and plenty of pine knots to burn in winter. Corn and cotton do well here if you use plenty of fertilizer, cultivate it good and get plenty of rain; fruits also do well here, such as plums, persimmons and blackberries.

Well, if candidates coming around is any sign of rain, we will have rain before long. BIG IKE.

Well, Mr. Editor, here comes Big Ike's friend, if I am not mistaken in who he is. I have never written any to your paper, but in order to keep peace in the family I thought I would try and see what kind of letter I could put up.

Everything is getting along very nicely in these parts, have large Sunday school at Pleasant Grove every Sunday; preaching last Sunday by our pastor, Rev. O. P. Langston; he is certainly a fine little preacher and everyone seems to like him very much indeed. He is a young man, just starting out this, his third year, and 'tis just grand to hear what an able sermon he can deliver. He is pastor of three churches this year, all of his time being filled up with the exception of one Sunday in every month. We wish him well and hope to have him with us a number of years to come.

Candidates and drummers are all the go these days. Probably we will get a shower of rain pretty soon if that is any sign.

We regret very much to say Dr. C. F. Shoults of this place is very sick. Dr. Shoults has recently returned from Birmingham medical college and has located at Lawley. He has been highly praised by one of his patients at this place. We wish him well and hope all will appreciate a good doctor.

O. A. Latham and C. C. Woolley of this place, and Dr. L. M. Latham, Vance and Caffee of Ensley will leave for Hull's lake the 19th, where they will spend several days hunting and fishing. Look out, 22 cartridges! There will be more one eyed alligators in Hull's lake than a little when O. A. Latham gets through hunting over there; says he can hit a seed tick's eye one hundred yards. How is that for shooting a 22 rifle. TOUGH LUCK.

Union.

Dear Editor—I will come again to let you hear the news from this community. The health of this community is very good at present.

Bro. R. H. Long filled his appointment at Free Springs last Sunday.

We have preaching on the first Sundays, all are invited to come and join in with us. God be with you till we meet again.

CLANTON, ALA.

The Mississippi valley includes ten of the United States and the greater portion of twenty-two states and territories.

The amounts stolen from the United States government every year by its trusted agents are far in excess of all the civil lists of the monarchs of Europe. Is the right to steal from the government one of the inalienable rights our fathers fought and died for?

The experts of the bureau of chemistry, department of agriculture, have found plentiful evidence that the basic aluminum acetate is the secret of the preservation of the imported sausage. As this aluminum salt is indigestible and harmful, even in small quantities, the line will be drawn with increased finances against the embalmed sausage.

Sir Frederick Treves, the eminent English surgeon, recently delivered an address in which he took the view that the knife is used too hastily in many cases of appendicitis. There are opposing schools for surgery all over the world in this generation. One is rarely willing to wait, and often cuts in a hurry. The other holds to the view that nature ought to have a liberal chance to do her best. In the long run, the conservative surgeons may possibly come out ahead.

Our neighbor beyond the lakes is bound to annex something. Having failed to get a slice of Alaska, she now turns her attention to Greenland and Newfoundland. Canada's condition must indeed be one of emotional extremes when she desires to take unto herself the fields of ice of misnamed Greenland; but even in this her desires are balked, for, such as it is, Denmark desires still to retain her ancient possession. As to Newfoundland, that crown colony is just at present enjoying a season of unusual prosperity and Canada's offers are "declined with thanks."

The scientists are giving up the consideration of the sanitary aspects of kissing to discuss its origin. Prof. Lombroso would refer the demonstrative affection of all modern kissing to maternal origin. M. Fere looks upon kissing as a manifestation of sentiment, as well as a means of eliciting and exalting it. "The New York Medical Journal" concludes a learned editorial on the custom with these convincing words: "For our own part, we are disposed to adhere to our older form of belief—that the evolution of specially sensitive nerve endings in the mucocutaneous labial margin has largely contributed to the widespread popularity of osculation."

How pitiable it is that just now, when we are all happily believing that the Japanese are a nation of heroic patriots, ready without exception to sacrifice life and property in their country's service, there should come along a story of corrupt effort on the part of certain members of the Japanese Diet to rob the government in taking over the plants necessary for the establishment of a tobacco monopoly as a source of desperately needed revenue! Such tales are lamentably familiar in lands where there is no pretense that everybody is forgetful of self, but we expect better things from the Japanese, and even from their politicians at a crisis like this. Humanity, however, is much of a muchness everywhere, and the day for perfection has not yet arrived.

In spite of a largely increased output of gold and largely increased imports as compared with the year following the war, there is little or nothing in the South African situation which indicates the success of British administration in the newly acquired territory. Hard times and widespread discontent among the people are emphasized in all accounts which bear the stamp of freedom from special interest or prejudice. In a recent official communication, Lord Milner referred to "the complete stagnation in commerce and enterprise." In the same communication he said: "Taking the Transvaal and Intercolonial budgets together, we must be prepared for a deficit which in the present year may be as much as £350,000." The cost of living in the Transvaals is excessive. White labor is warned of the uselessness of coming to South Africa. Agriculture offers little or no inducement to settlers. There are those, Englishmen among them, who declare that the government is worse than that of the Boers, and that the general condition of the people is far worse than it was before the war.

After nearly a year of negotiations George J. Gould, on behalf of the Louis and Iron Mountain and the as and Pacific railroads; and Yoakum, on behalf of the Rock Island Frisco system, have signed a contract by which the Rock Island-Frisco system will gain access to New Orleans by trackage over the Gould lines and the Illinois Central. The contract is to run ninety-nine years.

At New Orleans the Frisco and Southern Railway will jointly own new terminals which will cost approximately $14,000,000. Rock Island-Frisco trains will begin running into New Orleans by the Mississippi River bridge January 1, 1905.

The Eagle Iron Company of Attalla has leased the charcoal ovens in Gadsden belonging to the Southern Car and Foundry Company, some fifty in number, and will operate them. The furnace of the company at Attalla has been idle for some time, but it will soon be started again.

The sugar industry in Porto Rico is rapidly developing. The exports for 1901 were 69,000 short tons, in 1902 92,000 and in 1903 117,000. It is expected that this development will continue to increase until all the land in the island suitable for cane production will come under cultivation and if equal to Rico this would take about the whole island, and perhaps increase the production to 400,000 or 500,000.

United States Consul Hesse, at Diederich, Bremen, Germany, reports the expectation that the production of cane sugar in the world will be increased about 150,000 tons, but if nothing unusual happens the world's consumption will increase about 1,000,000 tons and further, that in Germany it is estimated that there will be 100,000 fewer acres planted in beets this year.

CAN NOT REACH PORT ARTHUR.

So He May be Sent to the Next Best Place—the Baltic.

The probability that there will be no further communication with Port Arthur, thus preventing Vice Admiral Skrydloff from assuming command of the Russian squadron there, has led to the suggestion that Skrydloff return from the far east and hoist his flag as commander of the Baltic squadron, which is destined for the far east. Whatever Admiral Skrydloff's future plans may be, the admiralty says he will certainly proceed to Vladivostock and inspect the squadron there. The report that Vladivostock is blockaded is denied at the admiralty. Telegrams received from Rear Admiral Jessen do not refer to the presence of a single Japanese ship.

It is said that the Russians would not have the slightest objection to a blockade at Vladivostock, since it would tie up a Japanese squadron.

The battleship Rhode Island was successfully launched Tuesday at the yards of the Fore River Ship and Engine Company.

After the ship left the ways the launching crew experienced an unexpected disaster. The great craft had attained such headway that she could not be stopped in deep water and her anchor failing to hold, her stern was forced into a mud bank. Three tugs made fast to her as soon as possible, but the tide fell rapidly and they were unable to move her. The company sent to Boston for additional tugs, and it was expected the battleship would be released before the next flood tide. The naval inspector who was on the scene expressed the opinion that as the bottom was soft the ship would not be damaged.

Prince Pu Lun, of China, has made an address to an audience of 700 students at the University of Chicago. The prince said in part: "From the time I landed at San Francisco during my entire visit to your country I have been most surprised to find that every man and woman in America is educated. This, I believe, is the basis of the success of the American people."

General Wong also spoke, making a plea for the easy admission to the United States of Chinese students. He said: "One-fourth of the Chinese students who were in this country when I was in college at Yale have since fallen in battle, shot in front."

DEATH RATHER THAN DISGRACE.

John D. Budd, Accountant, Locks Himself in and Cuts His Throat—Arrested on a Serious Charge.

Rather than face the disgrace of a public trial, John D. Budd, of Hoboken, N. J., slashed his throat with a pocket knife and will die. He was arrested, together with a lawyer and four other residents of Hoboken, charged with having abused young children. Fifteen charges have been made thus far against them. The expose caused a sensation.

Budd, who is a bookkeeper 45 years old, has been released on $5,000 bail after a night in jail. He went at once to his bachelor apartment and barred the door to all callers. After brooding for several hours he slashed his throat repeatedly, and had bled almost to death when found.

WILL MOVE STOVE PLANT.

Fort Payne Concern May Select Birmingham.

Birmingham will likely get the plant of the Standard stove works of Fort Payne. Efforts were made to get the plant located in Columbus, Miss., and it is understood that a proposition to that end was made to the company. However, it is learned that the arrangements will hardly be carried out and Mr. Saunders, who is at the head of the concern, states that in all probability the plant will be removed to Birmingham. This industry gives employment to about forty men, and quite a number of stoves are turned out complete daily.

Rev. John G. Murray, formerly of Birmingham, has been elected bishop of the diocese of Kentucky. About a year ago he accepted a call to Baltimore and soon after was elected bishop of Mississippi, but declined the position.

The suits involve a number of prominent men and land holders in the vicinity of Bessemer. The largest single suits are for $20,000 against the Krebs Manufacturing Company and Francis M. Hogg. It is claimed that the defendants to each of these suits converted to their own use quantities of timber estimated in each case at 1,750,000 feet of lumber and 2,000 crossties. It is alleged that defendants are practically squatters on university lands and do not hold valid title to them.

The building was the property of the Birmingham Warehouse and Transfer Company. It was erected about one year ago and cost about $7,000. It was insured for $4,000. In the building were stored many bales of cotton and a great quantity of machinery and merchandise. About 135 bales of cotton were more or less damaged. The cotton was valued at $8,000.

State Can Not Help Vulcan.

An effort to have the state appropriate $5,000 to apply on the payment for Vulcan, the big iron man, has failed. Acting Governor Cunningham has decided that the law does not afford any opportunity to expend this amount of money in such a cause. The governor has found, though, that there may be appropriated from the funds of the commissioner of agriculture and industries as much as $500 per month for the expenses of exhibiting at "international and state expositions," but at no time must this exceed $500 in any one month.

Among the unsuccessful candidates, Captain Hobson spent $4,429.04 in his campaign, while W. H. Sawtell risked $5.25 on the eleventh circuit solicitorship.

May Not Get School Funds.

Some of the counties in the state stand a chance to lose out on school appropriations for next year. Several have made no provision this year to take a school census because the appropriation to pay for such work is only $2 per day. If this census is not taken, however, there will be no basis of estimate for appropriation when the state board meets on next August, and those delinquent may find themselves minus the money to run the schools next year.

E. Russell, who has twice attempted to saw his way out. The saw was found.

JAPANESE CRUISER TORPEDOED

By Young Russian Officer with Squad in a Steam Launch.

A small naphtha launch in command of a young Russian naval officer, who had with him three jackies placed a torpedo against a Japanese cruiser, blowing it up.

When darkness fell the launch crept out of Port Arthur, hugging the shore with no lights aboard, and no glow from the engines to betray her presence. Slipping through the torpedo boat pickets and selecting the nearest warship, a big armored cruiser, she stole toward her and succeeded in exploding against her side a single torpedo.

A correspondent says the general staff considers the blockade of Port Arthur as unimportant. The correspondent adds that he is informed that the railroad has been destroyed since May 14th over a distance of twenty-eight miles. General Kuropatkin, he declares, seems more confident though it appears that he still has a serious difference with Viceroy Alexieff, who has complained in a telegram to the emperor which did not pass through the hands of the military censorship, that Kuropatkin does not heed his orders or advice. It is the general desire that Kuropatkin shall be the sole head of military operations.

THE Democratic State Convention will be held at Montgomery next Wednesday.

THE Japs continue to advance, driving the Russians steadily before them, and a great battle is expected soon.

THE Age-Herald of Monday contained a very pleasing write-up of Clanton by Frank V. Evans, who spent a couple of days here last week.

THE Democrats of Chilton county are better prepared now to carry the party to victory in November than for many years past. But it means united effort and steady work to carry the county by such an overwhelming majority as to quiet future disturbance.

NOT long since some of the self-appointed "Leaders of the People" were asserting that the negro would never again be allowed in Republican councils, and yet in the late Republican State Convention the negro was strongly in evidence, and a delegation to their national convention had to include a colored man. What have the "Leaders of the People" in Chilton to tell their white brethren now?

There are many gold deposits in the Southern States. They are of low grade ores, as a rule, but capable of development in very many localities that will yield splendid profits. Many known deposits have been worked in only a superficial way by the poorest methods. The deposits occur along the Appalachian chain, from Virginia to Alabama.—Southern Field.

CHILTON County is apparently at the end of this gold bearing region, and at various times small finds have been made in the county. Out on his place in the western part of Chilton Martin Franklin has been busy for some time past mining quartz, some of which he claims has been assayed as high as $40 per ton. There is, at least, a possibility that gold in paying quantities may yet be found in Chilton county.

HON. S.M. ADAMS RESIGNS THE NOMINATION.

Wednesday evening at six o'clock, just as we had closed the forms for the press, we learn that Hon. S. M. Adams has tendered his resignation as the Democratic nominee for Judge of Probate.

DEMOCRATIC RALLY.

JUNE 11, 1904

Arrangements are being made for the greatest turnout of the Democrats of Chilton county at Clanton on June 11. A band of music will be on hand, all the Democratic nominees will be there, and several speakers of note.

Hon. Sydney J. Bowie will make an address to the people on that day.

THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION

THE Republican State Convention held last week at Birmingham was one of the old time sort, which we had been expected to believe were past and gone. The black and tans were in the ascendant and generally carried things their own way. Negroes were plentiful and occupied a large part of the time in the debates; in fact, the fight between the lily whites and the black and tans seems to have improved the position of the negro in the convention.

J. O. Thompson, one of President Roosevelt's referees, was elected chairman of the State Executive committee, in place of W. I. Wellman, the lilywhite leader.

The delegates at large elected to the national convention are Oscar R. Hundley, Lee J. Bryan, Truman H. Aldrich and A. N. Johnson, the latter being a negro from Mobile. W. W. Wadsworth and J. H. Montgomery were elected Presidential electors at large.

Some talk was indulged in as to running W. W. Wadsworth against B. B. Comer for President of the Railroad Commission, but no action was taken, and the question of putting out candidates for the State offices was left to the Executive Committee.

From the Birmingham Ledger.

The only personal difficulty yet reported as growing out of the Republican convention yesterday occurred immediately after adjournment in the afternoon. Felix O. Dudley and Wallace C. Edler, both of Chilton county, came to blows in the room used by Thompson and Scott as headquarters. This county had a contesting delegation, each of these gentlemen being on opposing sides.

After adjournment, Edler is claimed to have made sarcastic remarks concerning the manner in which Dudley's delegation was selected.

It is claimed that Edler reached for a chair during the argument, and Dudley smashed him in the face with his fist. Several blows were struck by Dudley before bystanders could interfere. But little damage was done. Later, Dudley's delegation was seated.

Alabama Republicans.

The action of the Alabama Republicans in State convention ought to prove pleasing to President Roosevelt, who opposes the establishment of a white republican party in the South. The political representatives of the President were in complete control of the convention and the old time negro delegates were in evidence. The platform and the endorsement given Mr. Roosevelt could not have been more acceptable to the President had the strenuous one written them himself.

In a word, this year's Republican State convention marked the return of the party in Alabama to its old moorings—a party made up chiefly of, and controlled by, officeholders and officeseekers with enough negroes thrown in to serve as a sop for the national leaders to use to get the negro votes in the close states of the North. The new constitution renders it impossible for the negro to play the part he once played in political affairs in Alabama, but the Republican organization proposes to hold on to the few blacks who remain as qualified voters.

The Democratic party must continue as the only white party in this State. It is better for any State to have two respectable white parties, but this is not to be in Alabama, at least while President Roosevelt presides at the patronage counter and uses his patronage as a club to put into execution his political plans.—Birmingham News.

Fire at Clanton.

Wednesday afternoon an alarm of fire was raised, and citizens hastened to the residence of Mrs. Carroll where the roof had caught fire from the kitchen stove pipe. A few buckets of water soon prevented its spread and but little damage was done.

WHO IS THE MOST POPULAR YOUNG LADY IN CLANTON?

O, sad, sad, do I roam,
Who to vote for I really can't say.
The girls are so charming, it's really alarming.
I could vote for each one every day.
They're so pretty and graceful and sweet,
So tender and true, I declare,
Here goes my last dime, just one other time
For the fairest one of the fair.

O, sad, sad, do I roam.
I have voted my dimes all away.
And here comes a new beauty—it's really my duty—
And beauty and duty I'm bound to obey
My dimes are all gone, it is true.
But a dollar is good for ten votes.
So here's to the fairest, the sweetest, the dearest,
The girl upon whom my heart dotes.

As the weeks roll around and we are nearing the end of the contest to decide who is the most popular young lady in Clanton, interest increases, and the fair candidates are anxiously beginning to count their chances of success. But there are others who are still more anxious than the charming candidates, and valiant efforts are being made by various young gentlemen to add more votes to their favorite candidate. Where there is such a bevy of sweet girls as Clanton possesses, it is hard to say who among them shall head the list for popularity, and voters are generally insistent that their especial favorite is sure to reach the coveted goal. The polls will close on Tuesday, May 31, and there is yet time for recreant voters to come forward and help the good cause. Miss Ellen Stanley is the recorder, and will receive all votes that are accompanied by ten cents a piece, the proceeds going to the benefit of the Methodist church.

BONE FOOD

Soft and crooked bones mean bad feeding. Call the disease rickets if you want to. The growing child must eat the right food for growth. Bones must have bone food, blood must have blood food and so on through the list.

Scott's Emulsion is the right treatment for soft bones in children. Little doses every day give the stiffness and shape that healthy bones should have.

Bow legs become straighter, loose joints grow stronger and firmness comes to the soft heads.

Wrong food caused the trouble. Right food will cure it.

In thousands of cases Scott's Emulsion has proven to be the right food for soft bones in childhood.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER.

Special Correspondence to The Banner.

Washington, May 16, 1904

It is the opinion of a great many people in this world who have been close observers of human nature, that the one thing in a newspaper that interests people more than anything else is something about live people. Upon the theory, then, that "the proper study of mankind is man," I will during the summer give to the readers of this correspondence a number of sketches of some of the bright young Democrats who came to the front in the Fifty-eighth congress, and who deserve more than a passing notice in Democratic correspondence. In this connection I may mention that one of the brightest young Democrats who developed in the Fifty-eighth congress, and who attracted the favorable attention of the oldtimers, is "Bob" Lamar, as he is called by his many friends here, of the 16th Missouri District, the tall sycamore of southern Missouri. The Hon. "Bob" reminds one of the pictures of Abraham Lincoln in his youth and he possesses many of the mental characteristics of Lincoln, notably the old fashioned, hard common sense, so rare now a days in the most public men. Lamar is a hard student and an indefatigable worker. He has, during this session, secured the passage of two important and much needed laws of a general character, and of immediate benefit to his district, and also several bills of a private character. He is a forcible and eloquent speaker, and his speeches in the House always command an audience. Last January he delivered a speech in the House on the tariff and the farmer, that brought forth most favorable comment from his colleagues and doubtless will be widely distributed as one of the campaign documents during the summer and fall. Mr. Lamar is always in his seat and attentive to his duties, and if his district fails to get its rights "Bob" Lamar will be found on the firing line asking why. The people of his district will compliment their own intelligence by keeping him here where he will grow to be one of the strong men of the House.

There is one important fact in connection with the session of congress just closed that cannot be overlooked, and that is the bearing of the Democratic minority of the House. Thanks to the untiring industry, the parliamentary skill, the brilliancy of intellect and the honest zeal of their leader, the Hon. John Sharp Williams, the Democrats of the House for the first time in a number of years rose to the height of the political situation. But with all his energy the leader could have accomplished little or nothing toward maintaining the strength of the opposition had he not made an army out of a mob and thus been most heartily seconded by his party associates in the conflict with the majority.
